MLA workshop in Harrisville

Plans for the library trustee workshop sponsored by the trustee division, Michigan Library Association, for Saturday, April 26, in the Alcona County Library, County Building, Harrisville, have been completed, says Pat Valentine.

These meetings are located in various places in the State in an endeavor to permit convenient attendance by all trustees in the course of a couple of years. The last meeting in this area was in 1967, in Marlette. Michigan has over 2,250 library trustees; having only four meetings a year forces encompassing large areas for each. The budget prevents more extensive scheduling.

The highlight of the program will be the talk by Donald Best, director of Mid-Michigan Library League with headquarters in Cadillac. This is the largest areawise library cooperative which developed under his guidance and supervision. He will describe the operation of library cooperatives and explain how this type of operation can benefit the library, increase its services, and the resulting economies which mutually benefit the taxpayer and the library patron.

These meetings offer an opportunity to learn up-to-date methods in library operations and future plans for progress. If there is a danger present in our changing social and economic system, it could be that we are creating new knowledge faster than we can absorb and disseminate it.

Libraries, both public and private, must meet this challenge with every resource possible. It is important that governing authorities who must budget and secure millages for libraries should attend in order to understand better their trustee requests for funds for improvement or development of this facility.

State Librarian Francis X. Scannell plans to send Arthur M. Ricketts, head of consultant division, to this meeting. Alberta Brown, M.L.A.'s legislative representative and member of its legislative committee will report on current status or programs presently being considered by our state and national law-makers, and describe the overall legislative program as it affects libraries. Trustee division's chairman Pat Valentine will chair the meeting. Mary Allison, member of the executive board and publicity chairman, will also attend.

Housekeeping at home, job

Good housekeeping, an important task in the home, is also a key duty on the job, according to consultants in the safety education and training division of the Michigan Bureau of Safety and Regulation.

The orderly arrangement of work areas is vital to the safety of all workers regardless of whether they are involved with machines and tools or with appliances and furniture.

Over 14,000 persons are killed on the job annually in the nation, and an estimated 25,000 die in home accidents. In addition, disabling injuries occurring at home and at work reach a combined total in excess of six million each year, the division's consultants report.

Many of these accidents are caused by hazards formed through poor housekeeping practices. Slips and falls often result from loose objects or wet spots on the floor and from trash or articles left in stairways. Dirty windows and tight reflectors present dangers through inadequate illumination of stairways and work areas. Fire hazards are created when paper, rags and other waste or inflammable materials are not placed in proper receptacles.

Division safety consultants point out that because all of these hazards are common to both home and job, safety precautions should be employed on a round-the-clock basis.

Announcing the first car of the '70s at 1960 prices.

FORD MAVERICK $1995*

(You don't have to read it all-but it's nice to know it's all there.)

Most new cars look like other cars. But when the word gets out that something really different is on the way, rumors run wild. Few cars have caused as much talk as Maverick. Ford's new entry in the small car field rivals the economy imports in price . . . but tops them in power, performance, passenger room and luggage capacity. We've been bombarded with questions about Maverick. Now, for the first time, here are the answers.

Q. Why did you build the Maverick?
A. We think of Maverick as another one of Ford Motor Company's answers to the gold drain. Now Americans who want small car economy don't have to send their U.S. dollars overseas.

Q. Why did you call it Maverick?
A. You know what a maverick is. A maverick breaks the rules. A maverick is different. Maverick plugs the big gap between the compacts and the imports. It has a wheelbase eight inches shorter than a '69 Falcon, eight and one-half inches longer than a VW 1500. Nothing else like it.

Q. Why did you make it this size?
A. Maverick pinches pennies, not people. We gave Maverick more leg room. More shoulder room. More luggage room. Good example: the front seat of a Maverick offers you nine inches more shoulder room than the front seat of the leading economy import and its trunk can handle all the luggage for a family of four, including a set of golf clubs.

Q. What do I get for the price?
A. You get your money's worth. A complete, built-for-Americans kind of car. Room. Hot styling. Color-keyed interiors. Even the heater is included. Some economy car interiors are about as luxurious as a park bench. Not Maverick's. You get plush seats. Cloth and vinyl upholstery with unique tartan plaid cloth inserts. You also get safety features like smart pull-out door handles. Strong safety door locks. Two-speed electric wipers. Safety belts. Head restraints. Plus conveniences like armrests, coat hooks, lighted heater controls . . . important little things that add so much to your driving comfort.

Q. What about options?
A. You can get 'em if you want 'em. You can order integral air conditioning. (It's built in, not hung on.) Other options include 3-speed automatic or low-cost semiautomatic transmission, and a hefty 200 CID Six. But lots of people won't put an extra cent into this car. Because it's all there. A complete car all ready to drive home.

Q. What kind of gas mileage can I get?
A. That depends on you as well as the car. You can get as much as 25 or 26 miles per gallon—if you have an educated toe and the right road conditions. If you have a lead foot, or do a lot of city driving, you will get a lot less. In tests by professional drivers at our tracks, where we do our best to duplicate actual driving conditions, Maverick averaged 22.5 mpg.

Q. What kind of power does Maverick have?
A. Maverick's Six lets loose 105 galloping horses. That's 52 more than you get in the 4-cylinder VW 1500. Maverick can cover 417 feet in ten seconds from a standing start. That means you can get up to highway speed in a hurry. When you enter a 70 mph turnpike, you won't feel like a retired bookkeeper thrust into the middle of a pro football game.

Q. If it has an eight inch longer wheelbase than the leading import, does it still handle and park easily?
A. Maverick can U-turn in a tighter circle (35.6 feet) than the leading economy import (36.0 feet). Maverick can slant through traffic like a halfback. It can turn on a dime and give you nine cents change. If you've been driving any other American car, you'll find Maverick's neat size adds up to 5½ feet to any parking space.

Q. Can Detroit really build a small economy car that's tough and long lasting?
A. It's not easy, but we did it. Maverick's unitized body construction makes it light, strong and durable. It's welded like a battleship. Rustproofing compound goes into deep crevices that never see the light of day. Then all that strength is covered with four coats of paint for lasting beauty. Result: one tough little car that's put together to stay together. (The service schedule in the Maverick owner's manual goes up to 108,000 miles or nine years, that ought to tell you something about its rugged durability.)

Q. How about parts and service?
A. Maverick is designed to be unusually easy to service. You're dealing with made-in-America parts and 6,000 easy-to-find Ford Dealers. Fast repairs and easy replacements mean extra savings in both time and money.

Q. Is Maverick really easier and less expensive to maintain than an economy import?
A. Definitely. Maverick oil changes come only every 6,000 miles and chassis lubrication once every 36,000 miles. The leading economy import recommends oil changes every 3,000 miles (twice as often as Maverick) and chassis lubrication every 6,000 miles (six times as often as Maverick!). Those are just a few examples of the many ways Maverick lessens inconvenience and lowers operating cost.

Q. Can I do my own maintenance work?
A. Yes, if you have an average amount of mechanical ability. The Maverick owner's manual contains 24 pages of detailed diagrams and easy-to-follow instructions for routine maintenance jobs you can do yourself, if you wish. You'll find it easy to change spark plugs, replace ignition points . . . plus many other do-it-yourself repairs and replacements.

Q. Can a small car be safe? And how safe is safe?
A. This small car incorporates the latest advances in engineering. Maverick's brakes are as big as a standard compact's—designed to stop cars weighing hundreds of pounds more. Maverick gives you weight . . . power . . . stability. Designed for American driving conditions.

Q. How does Maverick ride?
A. Here's where Maverick's longer, wider stance really pays off. You get a smoother, quieter ride. Maverick's light, strong, unitized body helps eliminate squeaks and rattles. Special insulation blocks out road noise. The people who brought you a Ford that was quieter than a Rolls-Royce now bring you a small car that doesn't sound like a power mower.

Q. Is there an advantage in the fact that Maverick is really a 1970 car?
A. Slower depreciation is one money-in-the-pocket advantage. Maverick's 1970 model designation means it keeps its trade-in value higher, longer. (Maverick is built to be a good investment from the minute you buy it to the minute you sell it.)

Better come take a look at this one. You'll find it where the action is . . . right in there with other great Ford values like specially equipped Ford Galaxie 500's . . . Fairlanes . . . Mustangs and Falcons.

You'll find them at your Ford Dealer's . . . the place you've got to go to see what's going on.

For an authentic 1/25 scale model of the new Ford Maverick, send $1.00 to Maverick, P.O. Box 5397, Department M-50, Detroit, Michigan 48211. (Offer ends July 31, 1969.)

Maverick, the new Ford auto, goes on sale tomorrow at Erber Auto in Charlevoix. Seating a family of four and offering economy of purchase and operation, it is aimed at boosting Ford in the small car market and serving the needs of buyers who formerly went to imports.

Erber Auto unveils Maverick

Erber Auto Company of Charlevoix will introduce the long heralded 1970 Maverick, new small car from Ford Division tomorrow.

This $1,995 car is a two-door sedan of modified fastback design with a hint of an air spoiler of "ducktail" at the rear. Designed to carry a family of four with adequate luggage, it is powered by a six-cylinder engine in either of two sizes, 170 or 200 cubic inch displacement. In normal city-suburban driving, Maverick can be expected to deliver 22½ miles per gallon of gasoline.

John Naughton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager, calls Maverick "the greatest automotive value ever offered in terms of price, upkeep and features included at no extra cost."

Planned to be economical in purchase price, operating cost and maintenance, Maverick offers a longer, lower, wider body than the principal import, yet turns in a tighter radius for easy handling and parking.

Transmission choice includes the fully synchronized three-speed manual, the three-speed automatic with an optional shift-for-yourself feature, and, for the first time, a new semi-automatic transmission. Cheaper than the automatic and clutchless, it permits a change of gears with a single movement of the hand lever.

"Maverick will live up to its name in being a unique, independent kind of car," said Tom Erber of Erber Auto.

"It's bigger and roomier than the imports, but quicker and lighter than the American compacts. Even some of the color names carry out the car's individualistic character -- Thanks Vermillion, Hulla Blue, Freudian Gilt, Anti-Establish Mint and Original Cinnamon."

Action & Reaction

by Pat Begrow

Sad to say I'm one of those people who take civic responsibility seriously, so when the plea went out two years ago for mothers to lead a Cub Scout Den my conscience was in torment. Here I'd been anticipating one free afternoon a week to do what I wanted in peace while my ball-of-fire eight-year-old son was engaged in worthwhile wholesome Cub Scout activities.

To think that they needed me to lead them! It was almost too much. To put it honestly, this was not my bag. Eight little boys for one afternoon each week. That was torture pure and simple.

As fate would have it, just as I opened my mouth to say, "No", Judy Williams, mother of Cub Scout Brian, piped up and said, "I'll do it, Patty, if you'll take a den with me."

Thus I was trapped.

And was that ever a good thing for me, because these past years with the Cub Scouts have been a wonderful experience for me if not for them. When any one of my Cub Scouts does something clever and smart I cheer.

On Easter Sunday, three of the four altar boys, Matt Doan, Tim Raymer and Lee Begrow were my Cub Scouts. Even though we were in church I was so darned proud that I simply couldn't resist punching my mother-in-law and bragging about it.

When Steve Berlage scored a particularly good game for the fourth grade basketball team I glowed with pride.

When we were on a field trip to the fish hatchery and one Cub asked an in-depth scientific question of the guide, I was reassured for it seemed to me all along that this member of Den 3 was actually a child prodigy.

With Cub scouting these moments of pride and moments of fun are sometimes mixed with moments of despair.

One sunny day during the Easter holiday the boys and I went out to Bells Bay for a hike and a cook out. Armed with hot dogs, pop, marshmallows, a new bag of charcoal, a box of kitchen matches and the Sunday paper, we were in gay spirits.

Although the ground was partially snow covered we found a nice clear picnic area and the boys brought the food over and moved the table into place.

Next came the fire. Somehow I had expected to find some nice grills --- off the ground type grills as a matter of fact. But no, there was a little ring of stones on the ground and in the mushy center was obviously the place where the park service expected us to build a fire.

"You forgot to bring a shovel," said Matt.

I didn't forget. I never even thought of it.

"Oh well, we shouldn't have any trouble," I answered in my most cheerful voice.

In retrospect I realize that I should have stepped aside at this point and asked those who knew how to start a fire to do so. But I didn't. Instead I merrily threw the stack of papers over the mushy spot, emptied half a bag of charcoal and lit a match.

Nothing happened.

I tried lighting it again.

Still nothing happened.

Well, rather than have the boys stand around bored and disbelieving I suggested that they go off and explore using the buddy system.

Confidently I proposed to build the fire in their absence.

Not so easy.

Bucky Bradly and Gregg Lyper were hungry and loyal so they tried to help me, but in vain for I had botched the job from the beginning. It became plain that no fire was going to start from a stack of newspapers on a pile of mush.

Finally we began to rebuild with leaves, twigs, sticks and bigger sticks, just like in the handbook. At last we got a small fire going, but by now the charcoal was wet and hadn't caught by the time that the other boys got back.

Although it was hardly the sort of fire for roasting hot dogs, Den 3 loyally got sticks and tried to warm them over the dim glow.

Erik Luntlegen was visably relieved, but too polite to say so, when I announced that the hot dogs were all beef, precooked and safe to eat cold.

Just when even I was beginning to despair two boy scout patrols hiked up and although they had been out since eight-thirty and had already built their fire and eaten their lunch, they came to our aid. Within fifteen minutes each patrol had started a fire large enough to cook hot dogs and warm wet feet. They surely saved the day for us.

It's a grateful and admiring Den Mother who now thanks Mike and Terry Moll, Mike Kane, Ed Buday, Chris Begrow and Mark Hosmer. If my Cub Scouts turn out to be good scouts like these I will be grateful.

Lions note 'Cane' week

This year White Cane Week will be observed in Michigan from April 20 through April 26. The Charlevoix Lions Club and over 500 other Lions Clubs throughout Michigan will team together during this one week which is set aside to acquaint the public with State Laws which have been adopted for the protection of the blind, according to Les Payne, local president.

Local elementary schools, drivers license bureaus, and police departments will assist in this educational effort by distributing leaflets furnished by the Lions of Michigan in cooperation with our local Lions Club.

The White Cane calls for thoughtfulness, friendly appreciation and a personal responsibility for the safety of the individual carrying it. Thousands of White Canes have been furnished free of charge to blind people throughout the state. It is the aim and plan of the Lions to provide every blind person with a White Cane-the symbol of blindness-as a measure of protection for him.

State legislation in 1936 included an ordinance granting the right of way to a person carrying a White Cane. The purpose of White Cane Week is primarily an educational one-working toward that day when all our citizens will know and recognize the White Cane as the symbol of blindness and will give understanding and courteous assistance to bearers of the White Cane whenever such opportunities present themselves.

Intermediate School District Unknown to many residents

(Editor's Note: On March 28, 1963, Public Act No. 190 of 1962, officially created intermediate school districts out of Michigan's 83 county school districts. The school electors in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, voting in the annual school election in June, 1963, approved the merger of their regional offices into the first consolidated intermediate school district in Michigan. Under the mandatory provisions of the Act their seven member intermediate district board was the first to be elected by popular ballot. Their first action after organizing the board was to appoint the superintendent to carry out the responsibilities as outlined in the statutes and as directed by the board of education. Later the Ellsworth Community School District and the Central Lake Public School District both in Antrim Co., upon their requests, were transferred to the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.)

What is an intermediate school district?

Less than ten percent of people interviewed in downtown Lansing had a reasonably accurate answer to this question about one of the most important units in Michigan's basic education plan.

Usually knowledgeable about all phases of the changing governmental scene, most Capital city people interviewed, had only hazy ideas of the authority and purpose of the State's Intermediate School District system.

OLD PATTERN GONE

A few of those interviewed knew that the old-fashioned county school superintendent or commissioner had vanished from the Michigan scene in 1962, but they were unsure of the nature and responsibilities of the official and the organization which replaced him.

In Michigan, the administration of education takes place on the state level, regional level, and on the local level.

The intermediate school district exists on the regional level. Some 650 operating districts, which run the local schools in all of Michigan's 83 counties, comprise the community level of the state educational plan.

Michigan's intermediate districts perform specialized, technical, and sophisticated services which most operating districts find too costly or too impractical to do for themselves.

INCORRECT BELIEFS

The common belief that intermediate school districts are merely county commissioner's offices under a new name is incorrect.

Except for discharging certain regional administrative duties for the State Board of Education, the "new" intermediate district and the "old" county unit have little in common.

An intermediate district may serve more than one county, depending in large part on density of population, the highway system or other communication patterns, or other factors.

However, boundaries of intermediate districts do not necessarily follow county boundary lines but rather the boundaries of the operating districts which they serve. For example, in southeastern Michigan the Clarenceville and the Northville districts straddle both Oakland and Wayne counties. However, Northville is served by the Wayne Intermediate District while Clarenceville is tied into Oakland.

SPECIALISTS SERVE

A staff of administrators and specialists, under the direction of a superintendent, perform the work of an intermediate district.

In a recent publication of the Wayne County Intermediate District, which supplies consultant and supportive service to 39 local school districts, the goals and services of this active southeastern Michigan intermediate unit were outlined.

"The primary goal," according to Deputy Superintendent William C. Miller, "is to improve education for the more than a half million children in the district. We also serve as a link between local units and the Michigan Department of Education. The staff constantly examines the needs and problems of the local units and offer the service based on local desires and goals."

GROWING NEEDS

"It is almost impossible for small communities to provide all of the technical and specialized help needed to run todays schools", Dr. Miller points out. "For that reason we and other intermediate units are adding staff and services to take care of growing needs of our modern Michigan schools."

A summary of the areas in which consulting services are offered in this southeastern Michigan area reveals how technical and complicated education has become since the days of the rural one room school.

In the urban and suburban metropolitan area 39 local districts call on the units for help in administrative services, adult education, attendance, curriculum development, data processing, disadvantaged youth, educational television, elementary education, Federal programs, finance, school food services, home economics, guidance and counseling, health education, instructional materials, international education, legislation, mathematics education, membership accounting, migrant children programs, pre-school education, public relations, reading and language arts, research, study design, statistics, school business management, school facilities planning, school law, science, secondary education, shared learning experience programs, social studies, school evaluation studies, school social work programs, transportation advisory services, vocational and technical education, and the neighborhood youth corps work training projects.

FEDERAL PROGRAMS

In addition to the above services needed and offered in many counties of Michigan, the Wayne Intermediate Board cooperates in sponsoring federally funded Title III programs. Among these are the ASSIST project which provides library research, information services, staff development help, program evaluation, as well as some audio - visual services, and the STADIS program, a project established to toll the story of new programs and worthwhile educational innovations to as many publics as possible throughout Michigan.

Although intermediate school districts with smaller population bases cannot support the broad program of services given in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, and other more populous counties, all have gone beyond the minimal services which were once offered by the outmoded county commissioner system.

Nearly all intermediate boards welcome visitors seeking help or information. Persons living in all of Michigan's 83 counties can easily learn the name of the local intermediate superintendent and make arrangements to visit the center and meet specialists on the staff.

In the Charlevoix - Emmet Intermediate School District the General Office and Instructional Materials Center are located on the second floor of the County Building in Charlevoix. Special Education offices are located in the Michigan Bell Telephone Company building across the street from the County Building.

Persons seeking additional information about intermediate schools or who have questions about present activities of, or future plans for, Intermediate schools are invited to write the Statewide Dissemination Service, Room 400, Michigan National Tower, Lansing, Michigan, 48933 or to phone the Wayne, Michigan, STADIS office at (313) 722-5850 or (313) 278-0047, or contact Charles A. Robinson, superintendent of the local district.

DUE TO A LACK OF INTEREST TOMORROW HAS BEEN CANCELLED.

Sounds ridiculous, doesn't it?
But what if everybody in this country were to throw their hands up in despair and say they don't give a hoot.
Indeed, there would be no tomorrow.
But fortunately, Americans have a way of solving their problems.
And that's just what's going to happen in these troubled times. Simply because it's always been an American tradition.
Now, how can you, as one little ole citizen in this big, wide country of ours, be of any help?
Well, take a minute and think about a U.S. Savings Bond.
That's right, a U.S. Savings Bond.
No, it isn't an immediate remedy for all our ills. But it helps.
If everybody were to buy just one $25.00 Savings Bond (cost $18.75), your country would be stronger economically to wipe out some of those scars we've been sporting.
Of course, everybody would be helping themselves, too. If you were to sign up on a Bond purchase plan where you work or bank, you'd have quite a nice nest egg for yourself one of these days.
You'd have a lot more dollars in the kitty for things like college educations, that new home, or a secure retirement.
So think about a U.S. Savings Bond today.
And then go out and buy one.
Tomorrow.
If they're lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace 'em.

Census Legislation

Congressman Philip Ruppe this week introduced legislation in the House which would eliminate all penalties for failure to answer certain personal question for the 1970 Census.

Ruppe feels that some of the questions, pertaining to bathroom facilities or the lack of them, should not by law require an answer from anyone.

Ruppe adds that such prying by the government will make George Orwell's "1984" a reality.

The press has long been the most vociferous pillar of individual freedom and privacy, just as it has also been adamant in the belief that the people must be informed of public events.

Congressman Ruppe's stand on this issue deserves support. We hope his Bill is not pigeonholed in committee.

Our Customers

Guest Editorial

The newspaper is unique among businesses. It must, as a matter of course and of deliberate policy, believe that the customer is not always right.

Our customers are our readers and our advertisers. Yet, the newspaper, if it is to keep its self-respect, must at times take political stands which it knows will offend many of its readers and print news stories which it knows will displease an advertiser.

The result may be a dropped subscription or a canceled ad, but the newspaper has no choice. Or, rather, it does have a choice, but if it compromises, if it lets itself be edited by pressures of any kind, then it is through, because eventually this lack of courage and honesty will catch up with it.

Kin Hubbard, the Hoosier humorist, had a paragraph once which should be inscribed on the stone over the entrance to every school of journalism.

"Tilford Moots was over to the poor farm to see an old friend who published a newspaper to please everybody."

Today's Youth

(Guest editorial from the pages of the Alpena News.)

It's one of the more durable items of its kind, and this is the third or fourth appearance we've given it over the years.

This sharply - worded statement to (some) teen-agers was first spoken, as we recall, by a Juvenile Court Judge out in Colorado. Columnist Ann Landers picked it up, and we first used it in that connection. At intervals of several years, a couple of readers sent it along for publication in the letters column and now it's back again.

This, the final time, we're making a guest editorial of it:

Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teen-agers: "What can we do? Where can we go?"

I can make some suggestions.

Go home!!

Put on the storm windows, Paint the woodwork. Rake the leaves. Mow the lawn, Learn to cook, Scrub the floors. Repair the sink. Build a boat. Get a job. Help your pastor, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Assist the poor. Study your lessons. And when you're through --and not too tired--read a good book.

Your parents do not owe you entertainment. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy, and your talents, so that no one will be at war or in poverty, or sick and lonely again.

In plain, simple words: grow up; quit being a cry baby; get out of your dream world; develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like a man or lady.

I'm a parent. I'm tired of nursing, protecting, helping, appealing, begging, excusing, tolerating, and of denying myself needed comforts for your every whim and fancy, just because your selfish ego--instead of common sense--dominates your personality and thinking.

Easy Savings

Most of us want to save money. Many of us do -- sometimes regularly and systematically; more often, rarely or sporadically. Far too many of us don't save at all.

Yet, there is a good, sound, easy way to save. Regularly. Systematically. Painlessly. Safely.

Simply sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan for the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds and "Freedom Shares" -- the plan that has worked financial wonders for millions of Americans since 1941.

It's easy. Just authorize your payroll office to deduct a certain amount from each paycheck, selecting the denomination Bond desired. Or, you can authorize the purchase of a Savings Bond, in combination with a "Freedom Share" of the same or smaller denomination.

Savings Bonds now pay 4.25 per cent, compounded semi-annually, when held to maturity of 7 years; "Freedom Shares" pay 5 per cent, compounded semi-annually, when held to maturity of 4½ years.

It's painless. You can start your savings program with as little as $3.75 per payday, for an E Bond only; $3.90, for a Bond and a Share.

It's automatic. Once you decide on how much you want to invest, your Bonds and Shares start stacking up automatically.

It's handy. In an emergency, you can easily cash some of your E Bonds at your bank.

It's safe. Your Savings Bonds and "Freedom Shares" are fully guaranteed by the U.S. Treasury. You will never get back one penny less than the amount you put in -- plus good interest which adds to the cash value of your investment every six months.

It's loss-proof. There's a microfilm record of every Bond and Share purchased and the Treasury will replace any Bond or Share that may be lost, stolen or destroyed -- at no cost to the owner.

on the Flip Side

Well, we broke down last week and purchased our little girl a puppy.

Puppy!! That's hardly the word for my new clumsy, large friend. He's a three-month-old male, who is reputed to be a German sheppard. My guess is his ancestry is about as mixed as mine.

We must admit he has taken to the house rather well. In fact, too well. At this writing, he has assumed control of at least three rooms by sheer virtue of his size.

One of the first orders of business with the munster has been teaching him sanitary habits, primarily the advantageous use of the landlord's lawn.

We are using the tired and true watch - him - closely-and-get-him-outside - when -he -gets-that-look-in-his-eye method. It has worked reasonably well. From the mutt's view, that is. When he decides it is his pleasure to inspect his out-of-doors domain, he is quite cooperative. When the temperature is a trifle low, or a short nap is imminent, relief is found inside the front door.

"But," we tell the wife, "forget his few bad points, and think about how much companionship he offers you and our five year old."

He has learned that chewing on furniture is against house rules. It doesn't seem to bother him, though. . .he likes to chew on the hand that feeds him. . .and he has teeth that would make an alligator proud.

However, with all his shortcomings, he is a good watchdog. . .it's a rare occasion that he isn't watching the refrigerator.

Having been a dog lover for many years, we are in our glory with a new pup. We have found little through out life which provides more enjoyment than a good dog. And now we have a worthless young one, whom we shall attempt to develop into a fine animal.

Ah, life and its enjoyable challenges.

We noticed the following, from The Peoria Christian. It's a third grader's definition of a Grandmother, and we feel it says enough in its own way to merit a few inches of type.

A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own. She likes other people's little boys and girls. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He goes with boys for walks, and they talk about fishing and tractors and stuff like that.

Grandmothers don't have to do anything except to be there.

They're old so shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the market where the pretend horse is, and have a lot of dimes ready. Or if they take us for walks, they should slow down past things like pretty leaves and caterpillars. They should never say "hurry up." Usually grandmothers are fat, but not too fat to tie your shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off.

It is better if grandmothers don't typewrite or play cards except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like-"Why do dogs chase cats?" and "How come God isn't married?"

Grandmothers don't talk baby talk like visitors do, because it is hard to understand. When they read to us they don't gripe or mind if it is the same story over again.

Everybody should try to have a grandmother, especially if you don't have a television, because they are the only grown-ups who have time.

"Clean up, Paint up, Fix up" week will officially begin in Charlevoix May 5, but preparations should be made now.

Traveling throughout the city as much as we do, it is apparent that this year, as usual, there's much to be done.

In particular, the business district could use a good general clean up to keep "Charlevoix the Beautiful" beautiful.

The city provides the pick up service; all we have to do is put our debris on the curb.

If it Fitz

Watch out for those words

This is fair warning to lock up the kids and to be careful where you look. In the last paragraph of this column I think I will print the most notorious 4-letter word.

I mean that dirty word which was coyly described in a Detroit court last week as "the vile term for sexual intercourse."

My mother just exclaimed "HE WOULDN'T DARE" and then quickly peeked at the last paragraph to make sure. She ignored my warning and got what she deserved. Don't you make the same mistake. If such words offend you, you shouldn't be forced to read them. They shouldn't sneak up on you in your family newspaper. You might well expect to read them in 9 out of 10 books sold in your family drugstore. But not in a column written by that sweet editor who hardly ever says even damn or hell.

But what about the kids? you ask. That's what everyone asks. "I don't care for myself," says Rep Bigmouth, who wants you to understand he's really one of the boys, "but we can't have our youngsters reading this filth."

Which strikes me strangely. I swore a lot more as a teenager than I do now. When I was 18, during World War II, if a guy didn't use that intercourse term 15 times in one sentence, he was probably studying for the ministry. It is really a remarkable word. It can be a noun, adjective, verb, adverb, preposition or pronoun. Leave it alone, or add an ed or an ing or even an ly or ee. It is an all-purpose word and I don't think we could have won the war without it.

Things can't be much different today. It is the youngsters who are printing the 4-letter words which are making their parents nervous for fear the youngsters will read them. Try that on for sense.

When some campus rebel uses 4-letter words in a speech, the college newspaper might report exactly what he said, instead of s--- or SOB or some other dainty substitute. The young editor might claim he refuses to be a silly hypocrite. He is telling it like it is, man. But the adults know the editor is just a dirty kid and probably a Communist, too.

Of course, there are also some dirty adults. Take Mrs. Nancy Timbrook who teaches school in a Detroit suburb. A hippie group visited her school and distributed pamphlets containing that awful word. Mrs. Timbrook, a literature major, thought it would be worthwhile for her teenage students to study why that particular word causes such a stir. And she printed it on the blackboard, all 4 letters, just like I might print it in the last paragraph, for goodness sake.

Well, shame on Mrs. Timbrook, said Police Lt. William Sloan who brought criminal charges against her on behalf of his teenage daughters, of course. A judge found Mrs. Timbrook guilty of violating a city ordinance. He was not influenced by the fact that Mrs. Timbrook is a mother and wears her skirt below her knees. It didn't cut any ice that her college professor called her a brilliant student who, with 8 children at home, had graduated with honors. She admitted writing the dirty word and that was that. As I write this, Mrs. Timbrook is awaiting sentence which could be as much as 90 days in jail.

So watch it. Don't use that "vile term" in public, even if you are a teacher teaching why it is vile. Use a substitute, maybe &$%*.

There are other vile words, of course, which we use commonly without blinking. Such words as kill, war and hate. So far, no one has created polite substitutes for these words. I guess they haven't made everyone angry enough yet. Maybe someday.

Which brings us to this last paragraph. If you are offended by 4-letter words, why are you reading this? If you are a teenager, you may be reading to see if I am hip enough to spell it like you know it is. And if you simply enjoy reading vulgar words, tough luck, you've been had, I chickened out. I think I made the point without throwing my mother into cardiac arrest. But Onward and Upward.

Parochial aid

Editor, Courier:

In Gaylord recently, several hundred people gathered to hear Sen. Schweigert and Rep. Davis give their dissenting views on Parochial Aid. Here are a few "tell it like it is" observations of mine.

First, let's look at this problem. . If the majority of private school officials direct a mandate to all of their subordinates to close the doors come September, (that just could happen) what steps could be taken?

Here is a suggestion! We could tell our school boards to buy or lease all of the private schools and hire all of their lay teachers, brothers, nuns and priests to teach at the going rate. Whoa!, we can't meet all of the public school salary demands now, can we?

It seems to me when we close our church related schools, we who support them will be relieved of our extra burden of educating our children. We will then have THAT money to pay in taxes for state-run schools. So, financially speaking, we're better off. But, what about all of the people who send their children to public schools only, and now have to pay much, much more in taxes to educate the ex-private school students? I wonder if the general public realizes the millions of dollars private schools save them?

I'm told, the U.S.A. is the only free country in the world that does not support church related schools. To name a few, Russia, Cuba, Red China. Doesn't this tell us something?

We all know by history that whenever a country has a monolithic school system run by the government, it's one of the moves to take over the freedom of property rights and religion. Check out Leninism 1917, U.S.S.R. "No prayer in public schools," was ruled and upheld in our highest courts. Doesn't this indicate the trend? When my high school daughter and my college son both tell me that evolution is taught, not as a theory, but a matter of fact, I take issue with this public manner of teaching and consider trying this in the courts if it continues.

As a member of C.E.F. and a Catholic religion teacher, I ask all of the uninformed to think what they are really saying when voting no on this Parochial Aid bill. We're only asking for about 1/5 of what is justly ours. We only ask for our own tax dollars back to educate our children as free people should. True, there are a few church related parents opposed to Parochial Aid. They no longer, or maybe never did, want their children exposed to God. It would seem the students bring home a standard set by their teachers that the parents can't or won't live up to. Many of the parents give the excuse to send them to public schools by saying Johnny loves to play basketball or football, etc. I love sports too, but what is most important, our children's good moral standards with high ideals and a love for all of his fellow-men or being a little God because he can palm or dunk a basketball?

If we who send our children to Church, related schools have to be penalized because we choose to have our childrens' education orientated by a diety, then this country is in bad shape within itself. "Let's Tell it Like it is". I can discern undertones of sickening prejudice in this issue. It's not only the money, but the fact that we might be Catholic, Jew or black that underlines Parochial aid. This obvious prejudice will not be just pushed under the rug. It will ferment before long.

Seniors tour House, Senate during 2-day class trip

by Jeanne Mutz

Charlevoix high school seniors returned from their senior trip Friday night safe and sound.

Approximately 90 seniors attended the two-day event. They departed from the high school in three buses at 6 a.m. Thursday morning, headed for Lansing. Arriving in Lansing at 11 a.m., they took a guided tour of the capital building and heard short speeches by Senator Thomas Schweigert and Representative Robert W. Davis. At this time the seniors were allowed to go into the House and Senate chambers.

After the tour, the guide gave the students an unexpected hour and a half of free time during which they could walk around the capital and go shopping in the area.

At 2 p.m., the students went into the balcony of the House and Senate to see government in action. Following this, they boarded the buses for Battle Creek and the MEA Conference Center.

Arriving at the conference center at about 6 p.m. they were assigned rooms in the very modern and comfortable center and in cabins which surrounded the center.

The students were served a big meal shortly afterwards which was followed by some two hours of spare time. During this time students gathered in the lounges at the center and entertained themselves with guitars, singing and just talking.

Later that evening the group danced to the music of the "St. Louis Zoo" and then retired for some much needed sleep.

The students awoke the next morning to a big breakfast in the center and departure for Kellogs of Battle Creek. Students toured the Kellog center and received complementary packages of cereal.

The buses then left for Lansing and a tour of the Michigan State University campus. During the tour the students had the opportunity to see the intramural building, one of the newer dorms, a museum and many other interesting sights.

Following the tour the students boarded the buses for the journey home. They stopped in Mt. Pleasant where students were allowed to purchase their dinner and then left for the final leg of the trip.

Arriving in Charlevoix at 9:05 p.m., students gathered up their luggage eager to get home, yet sorry to have the trip end.

Chaperones were Max Novak, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Redeker, Mrs. Barb Wolgamott, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mrs. Pat Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Boss, Mrs. Shirley Lusk, Mrs. Pat Smalley, and Al Smith.

Young lure trout from Forbrig's pond

An 11-year-old boy reels in a big one, runs to his bicycle and races home proudly to show his parents a five-pound rainbow trout.

This scene is repeated many times over each spring, as youngsters up to 12 years old find fish and fun at Hal Forbrig's trout pond, off M66.

For the fourth consecutive year, Forbrig will open the pond to area youth this Saturday, as trout season officially gets underway.

It costs him money, some $500 a year to operate, but he is satisfied with the results. "Folks realize this is a good place for their children to learn how to fish and still be reasonably safe," Forbrig says.

"But," he adds, "of course, I cannot be responsible for their safety."

"The kids take plenty of fish out of the pond, mostly rainbow, German brown and brook trout. Catches aren't made every day, due to 'fisherman's luck', but until the creatures get smart, a good many fillets come out of that water, including a coho every now and then," he continued.

For a number of reasons, Forbrig has been forced to lower the maximum age limit at the pond this year from 14 to 12.

"I really didn't like to do it, but the older boys create an uncontrollable situation. The younger children get shoved into the background by the older ones. There has been some malicious destruction of property by the older boys which ruins the fishing for everyone. And, the older ones can go to a variety of other fishing spots. This pond is meant for the

CHS band in State Festival

The 105 - member Charlevoix High School Band will leave at 5:30 a.m. Saturday to participate in the Annual State Band and Orchestra Festival, sponsored by the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association.

The festival is being held in the Lansing area, and the local band is scheduled to perform at Ovid-Elsie High School, about 35 miles northeast of Lansing at 11 a.m.

This trip marks the 22nd time since 1947 that the band has earned the right to participate in the state festival by taking a first division rating in the district event.

In that time, the band has been awarded a 1 rating in state competition a total of 12 times.

Chaperones, in addition to Clarence Odmark, instrumental music department head at the school, include Mr. and Mrs. Del Terrill, Mrs. Harold Wilson, Mrs. Clarence Odmark, Mrs. Don Brown (who was a member of the first band to make the trip in 1947), and Louis Edwards.

The band will stay overnight at a Lansing motel, and a portion of the cost is being paid by the Band Booster Association.

The group will leave Lansing about noon, Sunday, and will return to Charlevoix around 5 p.m.

Bands from Boyne City and East Jordan are also participating in the program.

Hospital appoints new Administrator

The Board of Directors of the Charlevoix Hospital has appointed Rollie M. Dudik as Administrator, effective May 1.

Lawrence Edwards has been Acting Administrator, as well as being the anesthetist during the interim period while he and the Board have been seeking and interviewing applicants for the permanent position of Administrator.

In announcing the appointment of Dudik to the employees of the Charlevoix Hospital, Edwards expressed his appreciation for the excellent cooperation he has received during this interim period. He asked that all employees and members of the community continue this fine cooperation assisting Dudik and himself through this final transition in establishing a permanant Administrator.

Changing medical technology and advancing methods in hospital management require a person having training in the latest developments in this field," Edwards said. Dudik is eminently qualified in education, experience and training in the field of hospital management and industrial engineering.

Rollie and Laverne Dudik are moving from Peabody, Massachusetts, where Dudik spent the past year as assistant administrator at the Josiah B. Thomas Hospital, one of the most advanced, small (76 beds) hospitals in the country, featuring technology, methods and innovations that are now being adopted in the largest and most advanced medical centers.

Mrs. Dudik, who is an ADA Dietician, is presently teaching nutrition at a school of nursing near Peabody. She will be following Dudik to Charlevoix after completing her present term of teaching June 30.

The Dudiks, who have no children, have many outdoor hobbies, including hunting, fishing and trapping. They are greatly impressed with Charlevoix, and expressed their delight in making this their home.

Dudik is a member of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers, American Hospital Association, and the National Counter Intelligence Corps Association.

Edwards, who stopped in to fill the void created last year when the last administrator left, will continue at the hospital.

"I have enjoyed my role as administrator, but lack the qualifications from the business side of the position," Edwards said. "Dudik is qualified in all ways, and will be able to do a fine job."

Edwards added that he will work closely with the new administrator during May.

Sounding board sessions set

The newly formed citizens' "sounding board" for the voters of the Charlevoix School District will hold its first listening session this Friday and Saturday.

Members of the group will hold forth in the community room at City Hall Friday from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. to hear concerns of local voters. They will also hold a session Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

James Marshall, a member of the sounding board, stated that arrangements are being made with area township supervisors to hold meetings in the rural areas. "Our township residents have already brought several significant concerns to our attention," Marshall said, "and we hope that all of the township areas will arrange to meet a week from Saturday, either as one group or in their respective township halls or schools."

City and township residents are urged to come in person to the City Hall meetings and air their feelings on the millage problem.

"All views will be held in confidence," said Don Brown, group spokesman. Brown urged those persons who cannot come to the meetings to telephone their views to members of the group "at any reasonable hour."

Members of the sounding board include James Hiller, Charles England, Mrs. Gerald Stablin, Robert Hoffman, James Hoffman, James Feldter, Marshall, Brown, Fred Payne and Frank Cellner.

Hospital room rates rise

It will cost more to be sick as of May 1. That's the word from Charlevoix Hospital, as it was announced this week that modest raises in room rates.

Larry Edwards, hospital administrator, said the rates would increase in the "area of ten percent." The last rate hike was approximately one year ago.

Present rates and the new rates are: private room, from $37 to $40; semi-private, $31.75 to $37; pediatrics, $30.50 to $34; ward, $30.50 to $34; isolation, $34.25 to $42; nursery, $16.25 to $18; nursery after mother goes, $17.25 to $19; newborn in pediatrics, $30.50 to $34.

Baby isolation rates remain at $19.

Higher medical costs are the culprits for the rate increases, according to hospital officials. The local hospital provides about 90 percent of the services found in much larger institutions, including X-ray, physical therapy, laboratory tests, etc.

In addition, the hospital must be staffed to operate at 100 percent capacity, although generally it finds about half the beds in use at any one time.

"Two employees per occupied bed is the general rule for a hospital," Edwards stated, which means the local hospital should carry about 100 people on its payroll.

The hospital has been "running in the red". Emphasis will be placed on operating at the break-even level, according to officials.

To this point, private donations have kept the institution operating, along with several small governmental grants.

Biologist Myrl Keller, with several trout used for analysis of DDT-residue level.

Lake Michigan fishing may be dealt setback

"If the Food and Drug Administration chooses to enforce the 3.5 parts per million DDT maximum in consummable fish, it will be a serious blow to the commercial and sport fisheries on Lake Michigan."

With those words, Myrl Keller, biologist at the Great Lakes Fisheries Station in Charlevoix, summed up the present plight of the state's fishermen.

Recent developments have found the sale of DDT banned in the state, after a large number of Lake Michigan coho salmon were pulled off the market in Wisconsin and Minnesota because of dangerous levels of DDT and Dieldrin residues.

This action has split the Department of Natural Resources and the Department of Agriculture right down the middle.

Agricultural interests claim that "hard" pesticides are the only means of controling pests in crops.

The DNR, on the other hand, has found indications that those pesticides, after introduction into bodies of water, do not recognize fish, and may kill them, too.

Keller says the DNR has been aware of the problem for some time locally. The first research done in the area dates back to 1965, when lake trout were introduced in Charlevoix.

"Prior to that year," Keller noted, "New York state did some research and found that high levels of pesticides such as DDT in lake trout stopped their natural reproduction.

"As we had planted over seven million lake trout, we became concerned in areas where large amounts of the pesticide were used, such as in orchards.

"So, we began collecting samples and had them analyzed. The levels then were about the same as they are now. Remember, though, the levels rise as the fish gets bigger."

DIELDRIN SET

Some six months ago, the residue level for Dieldrin was set at .3 parts per million (ppm) for the maximum safe standard for human consumption.

Last year, according to Keller, the local station provided samples of area trout and salmon to the Food and Drug administration, Michigan State University and the commercial fisheries laboratory in Ann Arbor.

Results of those analysis showed that most fatty fish (salmon, chub, lake trout) could not meet the 3.5 ppm now set by the government.

WHAT NOW?

"If the 3.5 level is indeed harmful to man, then it should be enforced," Keller said.

"DDT has a long half-life, and it keeps building as the fish grows. If the established level is enforced, it could be five or ten years or longer before Lake Michigan fish would be safe, if the use of DDT is stopped completely right now.

Crooked Tree Council Presents highest award

Mrs. W.L. Gelston and Mrs. Willard Wilcox were presented with the "Thanks Badge," the highest award given in Girl Scouting for continued, outstanding volunteer service when the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council held its annual meeting last Tuesday evening.

Approximately 70 volunteers and friends of Girl Scouting met at the Northwestern Michigan College Student Center for a smorgasbord dinner.

Among the guests present were Frank Purvis, president of the Scenic Trails Boy Scout Council and Mrs. Purvis; James Ballard, Traverse City Area Boy Scout executive; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cinco and James Comp, Sr., members of the Cadillac Community Chest; Mrs. Clark Jarmer and Mrs. Chelsea Foy from the Manistee Community Chest; and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sweeney of Maple City, who donate the use of their Vacation Valley Family Camp for Leelanau Girl Scouts to use for their day camp.

Mrs. Willard Wilcox, council president, called upon A.R. Jacobs, who presented the council budget for the upcoming year. Mrs. Louis Dunn, Grand Traverse Area field director, reported on the various activities of the girls during the recent Girl Scout Week, and six Junior Girl Scouts presented a flag ceremony, typical of those given throughout the area at many community meetings during the past month. Those participating were Vicki Abeln, Becky Anderson, Jean Eby, Bryn Lynch and Martha Schworm of Eastern School Troop 16 and Mary Hoffman of Troop 4, Old Mission.

Mrs. Wilcox presented the slate of new board members and national delegates, which was unanimously approved. Elected to the board were Stephen Cole of Manistee and Mrs. Donald Goostrey, Traverse City, members at large, and Mrs. J.D. Thomas of Cadillac, East Association Chairman.

Delegates to the National Council Meeting in Seattle are Mrs. Joe Lockwood and Mrs. Willard Wilcox of Cadillac, Mrs. Richard Minzey of McBain and Mrs. Hugh Warner and Vince Ball of Traverse City. Alternate delegates chosen are Mrs. D.K. Holland of Cadillac, Mrs. Stephen Cole, Manistee, Mrs. Robert Elliott, Petoskey, and Mrs. Louis Dunn and Mrs. Gage Loveless of Traverse City.

Mrs. Hugh Warner, executive director of the Crooked Tree Council, paid tribute to the many volunteers who give of their time to Girl Scouting, particularly the men who help so ably on the board, at the camp, in money-raising campaigns, and in so many areas. A special gift, donated by the Setwell Corporation, was presented to each man at the meeting.

The guest speaker, Jack Barrows, a member of the Girl Scout regional staff in Chicago, was introduced by board member Vince Ball. "Girl Scouting in Tomorrow's World" was Barrows' topic. He stressed the importance of the volunteer aspect of the movement, indicating that this must be strengthened if the organization is to remain active and vital. He pointed out that there is no real question of the value of such a program which cuts across lines of race, religion and economic status, and which helps develop a sense of citizenship, but that it is imperative that more girls be reached.

There seems to be no need for basic changes in the program for it to fit into tomorrow's world, but the quality and scope must be improved through the involvement of more people. He stated that only the community can really recognize its own needs, and that these needs must be met through the resources of the community itself.

The Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council is a member of United Community Chests, and includes Charlevoix in its district.

Recipe of Week

Seasoned Rice Makes Filling For Ham Slices

Ham teams well with rice.

John Raymond Loder will be one year old Saturday. John's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gary Loder. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Wally Loder, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald N. Johnson of Charlevoix. Mr. and Mrs. John A. Johnson of Boyne Falls are Great Grandparents.

Cranberry jelly goes well with both. The result is a delightful ham wrap-up or turnover that provides an interesting main dish for luncheon or supper.

"Boiled" ham, as it's purchased at the delicatessen or among the ready-to-serve meats at the grocer's, goes into this recipe, points out Reba Staggs, home economist with the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Seasoned rice makes the "filling." Sweetened cranberry sauce tops the rolls during baking.

Ham Turnovers

8 slices "boiled" ham, cut ⅛ inch thick
½ cup rice
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons lard
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 egg, beaten slightly
¼ cup brown sugar
1 can (16 ounces) jellied cranberry sauce

Cook rice and drain. Cook onion and celery in lard until tender. Combine onion, celery, salt, pepper, dry mustard and beaten egg. Add rice and mix well. Spoon about ⅓ cup of rice mixture on each ham slice and form in a roll. Fasten each roll with a wooden pick. Add ¼ cup brown sugar to jellied cranberry sauce, mix well and pour over rolls. Place rolls in a greased 8 x 12-inch baking pan. Spoon cranberry mixture over rolls. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) 25 minutes. 6 servings.

News from Ellsworth

Mrs. Anne Osterbaan

The Antrim County 4-H Spring Achievement day was held at the Ellsworth Community School Gym, Saturday, April 12.

Several hundred 4-H Club members displayed their handiwork, which took many trying and dedicated hours.

Projects shown were textile painting, woodwork, baking and floral arrangements, and the largest of all, sewing. Chosen to represent Antrim County in the summer Michigan 4-H competition for sewing in Lansing was Mary VanderArk from Ellsworth. Mary is presently a cheerleader at school, president of the Young Peoples Society of the Christian Reformed Church, and is scheduled to work as volunteer nurse's aid at Pine Rest Christian Hospital at Grand Rapids for 6 weeks.

She is a Senior and plans to attend Calvin College of Grand Rapids this fall. Others from Ellsworth to receive recognition for their work were Jean Van Stedum, Patti Drenth and Verlyn Wolgamott.

The arrangements for the day's activities were planned by Mrs. William Boss, Mrs. George Jake Drenth and Mrs. Willard Vander Ark, assisted by the older 4-H youth of the Ellsworth area.

The program was opened with an invocation by Deann Wynsma. Nadine Chellis led the group in a salute to the flag. The Busy Bees designed and painted a garden scene as a background for the style revue. Music for the revue was played by Mrs. Martin Rerbingh and narrated by Diane Vander Ark.

State Home News

A great part of any success in programming for the retarded must be credited to those at all levels who are keen observers. Our staff became aware of this when programming for the severely and profoundly retarded was begun a few years ago. Residents who had experienced a lifetime of institution white gowns and diapers and white uniformed employees suddenly came alive when the housekeeping staff changed to blue uniforms. They wanted to touch!

White. Why white? Of course, it simplified the laundry process. But, is it not a part of the dehumanization institutions have long practiced in the name of efficiency?

Why not colored? Laundering? Yes, but this problem was not insoluble. Funds? Colored may cost more. It soon became obvious that only money or a substitute could solve this one. Colored dresses much more than the customary white, waist length hospital gowns.

An army of volunteer seamstresses substituted for money. Money is used only for the purchase of bright colored prints. Girls and women who had never worn anything except a white hospital gown and diaper were now dressed in knee length dresses, but in a style to overcome the dressing problems of the physically handicapped.

Important? Yes. The retarded aren't colorblind. The importance was further proved beyond doubt when a number of girls worked very hard to become toilet trained so they, too, might join the select group in a long, bright colored dress.

White hospital gowns? Since we had a large supply, their use was a necessity. Again, the volunteers came to the rescue. Hundreds of these now sport liquid embroider pictures, rick rack, appliques and various other designs. Keen observation taught us that a decoration on the sleeve was eye catching and even the profoundly retarded will hold up his arms to see this design.

An interesting experiment? It's been more than that. It is just one of the steps toward humanizing an institution that many persons call home for their lifetimes. It's a step toward developing a responsive individual, and, to her, a proof of one's worth.

The staff as well as the residents appreciate beyond words the many hours of sewing donated for this project. Willing seamstresses are always needed and welcomed. Without this sincere interest, it would have been impossible to accomplish this goal.

Safety meeting at Ellsworth

The 19th annual safety meeting will be held Friday in the Ellsworth High School gymnasium at 8 p.m.

The program includes two short films about safety and several short speeches. Safety and courtesy awards will be presented by Gerald Basch.

Levi Donaldson is incharge of the program.

All-Polish dinner in Cross Village

There will be an all-Polish dinner May 4 at the Holy Cross Ranch hall in Cross Village.

Sp. Robert L. Solomon, of the 218th MP Co., is surrounded by Vietnamese children. The Company, as many others, have become the "adopted" parents of Viet orphans.

The orphanage received food, clothing and toys from residents of Charlevoix, Ellsworth and Central Lake.

Viet orphanage receives gifts

Food, clothing and toys made the journey from the homes of Charlevoix, Ellsworth and Central Lake residents to an orphanage in Vietnam recently, and the men of the 218th Military Police Company have asked the Courier to say "Thank you".

Sp. Robert L. Solomon wrote Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. DeVries of Charlevoix RR 1, thanking the people "for the wonderful things you sent for the orphans here in Vietnam."

Sp. Solomon continued, "I would like to thank all of the people who gave the food, clothing and toys so generously. There were many contributors, not only from Charlevoix, but also from Ellsworth and Central Lake.

"They are too numerous to mention by name, but I want them to know that their attitude and assistance was not only a great help to the children, but also an asset to morale of the 218th MP Company.

"This jesture on the part of the townspeople of these three towns is a direct reflection of the type of people we have in the United States.

"It makes us feel proud to know that there are still those who care what happens to others around the world, especially here in Vietnam, and particularly to the small children who are the real victims of this war.

"Please thank everyone who helped with this project for all the children who were so in need of the gifts. Thanks again for a job well done," Sp. Solomon concluded.

Library Notes

This is Thank-You Week at the Public Library, and a very special thank you is extended to the Freedman Artcraft Engineering Corporation for the handsome Browser Boxes which were designed and made especially for the Library to hold the rapidly-growing record collection. It was a generous and lasting contribution and patrons will find record selection much easier now.

A warm thank-you is extended to Dr. Van Dellen of East Jordan for thoughtfully presenting several albums of classic records to the Library.

The Library also wishes to thank Mrs. Paul Kohler for contributing a sturdy and attractive oak table for use in the office.

Mrs. Bernice Wexstaff has presented two fresh new copies of her two books "The Black Panther of the Great Lakes" and "Haunt of High Island". The copies of these two popular books were quite worn out from constant circulation. Miss Olmstead is pleased to have the new books, and they will be on display with other Michigan books during Michigan Week.

Special thanks also goes to the volunteers who helped with the important task of putting the magazine room on the lower level of the Library in order. Patrons are invited to inspect the extension file of back-issue magazines which are boxed and shelved for easy selection.

All the patrons who have generously contributed books and magazines to the Library are extended a very sincere thank you. Two separate gifts of children's books were received recently, and these were especially welcome.

And to the Charlevoix Courier, a very special thank you for the fine coverage and cooperation the Library has received.

The young pages who come in after school and work so industriously to help shelf books and straighten magazines deserve much credit and a special thank you. The boys and girls who have assisted with these important and time-consuming tasks are performing a very real community service.

Pets I have known

by Pat Begrow

It's my considered opinion that most people spend entirely too much time, energy, money and sympathy on pets. After all God made these creatures dumb for a reason so they certainly shouldn't rule our lives.

For instance, friends of mine have just one child - a seven year old girl. In spite of the hours and hours of attention which they lavish upon this child, she pleaded loneliness. Now this couple have an immaculate house which is a joy to visit so naturally they didn't want a dirty pet messing it up. Well, they settled on a pet by getting the child an innocuous hamster.

The poor kid! She pet the hamster, she cuddled the hamster, she talked to the hamster. The hamster was her buddy. That is her buddy until the fateful day when Mommy inadvertantly cut off the hamster's head in the crack of the door.

Tears, sobs, shrieks, reprimations, self-guilt. All of this foolishness went on. So what was the upshot?

The family now owns what used to be a cute little black kitten and is now a beautiful long-haired black cat shedding its long black cat hairs all over the immaculate house.

And is the lonely child happy cuddling the cat? Heck no! She'd rather play Rook with her daddy and let the cat just howl and shed.

Action and Reaction

One Charlevoix resident, Shannon Ratigan, has a pet that's a real ugly. Shannon claims that he's very affectionate, follows him around the house and just loves grapes, but if you want an Iguana crawling around your house you can have him.

Now dogs are another matter. I seriously wonder if they really are "Man's Best Friend". Prince has been living on our street for three years and in that time he has never adjusted to Charlevoix's dog ordinance. This business of being on a lease is simply not for him.

At every opportunity Prince tears out the door and heads for the street. When he gets there he just lies down and takes a nap. In fact he sometimes looks like a large brown sack, but Prince has a charmed life, and no car has hit him yet. I guess that's because most neighbors are like I am and drive slowly when they near Prince's house for he just may be lying in the street defying the dog catcher to chase him.

Even his owners have confided that they wonder if Prince is worth the money that they've spent to bail him out.

Speaking of bailing someone out, some kind friend is going to have to bail me out someday for I just know that the Charlevoix Police will pick me up sooner or later for B & E.

When I visit one neighbor I creep up the front steps, never knock or ring, but quietly open the door and slip inside. I surely look like a thief and I feel like one too, but where personal safety is involved I'll make all kinds of compromises.

You see the trouble here is Sydny. Sydny is part wolf and part sheep dog. When he hears the doorbell ring and knows that you're on the outside he acts like a wolf, but once you're in the house he accepts the fact that you belong inside and acts like a sheep dog.

Since burglers rarely ring doorbells Sydny is useless as a watchdog, so therefore he's probably frustrated. I guess that for Sydny to find his real identity his owners will just have to purchase a small flock of sheep for him to protect. Which all supports my theory that pets are absolutely not worth the time, energy, money and sympathy expended on them.

I'll pursue this subject later, but right now I have to hurry to keep an appointment with the vet. This morning I noticed that Calico, one of my three cats, was limping, so I immediately called to make an appointment with the vet. Calico hates to go for shots and so the doctor has agreed to see her as an out-patient. I surely hope that it's nothing serious.

Sports Shorts

Please bear with us this week, as we write about a sport which does not have a large following in the area... professional hockey.

Perhaps it would be better to say we're going to write about a man, who just happens to be a hockey executive and coach.

He is Frank Mathers, coach and general manager of the Hershey Bears in the American Hockey League (the top minor league in pro hockey), and he has just been named the sport's Best Executive by the Hockey News, the Bible of the ice.

Mathers is a close friend of ours, yet our opinion of the man is not too slanted, as all who know him think as highly of him as we do.

It has been our experience, through a number of years behind a microphone broadcasting professional and college sports, that involvement in athletics produces a "little extra" in a man or boy.

Such is the case with Mathers. A Toronto native, he married a Canadian girl, but is now an American citizen and year-round Pennsylvanian, with the exception of a month in the summer when Canada's beaches call him and his family.

Not too many years ago, he was an All-Star defenseman for the Pittsburgh Hornets (forerunners of the Penguins) and later with the Bears.

Had expansion come to the National league 15 years ago, Mathers would probably be a household name to hockey fans. But, Frank never had the chance to prove his ability in the majors.

He turned to coaching some 13 years ago, with the Bears. This past season he added the responsibilities of general manager.

For the past few years, he has turned down a half-dozen offers to join NHL ranks. Instead, he has remained in the Boston organization, readying promising youngsters for play with the Bruins.

Boston can thank Mathers for players like Don Awrey, one of the B's strongest blueliners; rookie Wayne Cashman, who under Mathers came along much faster than expected; Garnet "Ace" Bailey, who looks like one of the big stars of the future; and Don Marcotte, who is going to develop into a good NHL winger.

Others Mathers has developed for the big time are Gene Ubriaco of the California Seals; Poul Popiel of the Detroit Red Wings, Gary Dornhofer of Philadelphia's Flyers, Bob Woytowich of the Minnesota North Stars and many more.

Mathers is a superb coach . . . but more than that he is a fine man. We congratulate him on being named hockey's top exec. There is no one in a front office who deserves it more than he does.

The track season opened for Charlevoix High School last week, and Coach Del Terrill looks for a better than average year.

Tomorrow, the Red Rayders hit the cinders for their second meet, facing Gaylord and Alpena CC at the high school.

Let's turn out and support the team. Any athlete will tell you it's much easier to find the "something extra" it takes to win when a large, friendly crowd is in the stands.

Put your child's picture in the COURIER'S Cakes & Candles feature. We'll provide a FREE 8 by 10 color portrait of your children, or the whole family, with each new or renewal subscription to the Courier. See page 9 for details.

Rayders take opening meet

Freshman Larry Potter took two first in hurdles events, and the Charlevoix Red Rayders captured their first track meet of the season.

The Rayders scored 62½ points to earn top honors. Following were Traverse City St. Francis with 55 and St. Ignace with 26½.

Charlevoix took seven firsts, five seconds, five thirds and three fourths in the win.

Coach Del Terrill said he was "pleased with the team" for its showing and winning times this early in the year.

The Rayders face Alpena and Gaylord today at the high school. Terrill looks for a good meet, commenting that Gaylord is strong in the pole vault and distance events. Alpena beat the Rayders last year by ½ point in the regionals, and would like to reverse that decision today.

The top three winners in each event and the winning times follow:

Two mile run: Time 10:56; first, McNamoe St. Ignace; 2nd, Ron Bindi, Chax.; third, Lautner, Traverse City St. Francis.

880 Relay: Time: 1:41.5; first, Traverse City St. Francis. The other two teams were disqualified.

Mile run: Time: 5:02.6 1st. Jerry Parsel, Chax.; 2. Carl Novak, Chax.; 3. Sheehy, T.C. StF.

120 yd. high hurdles: Time: 16.9. 1. Larry Potter, Chax.; 2. Bob DeYoung, Chax.; 3. Elliott T.C. StF.

880 yd. run: Time: 2:15.6; 1. Dan Berg, Chax.; 2. Smith T.C. StF.; 3. Huskey, St. Ig.

440 yd. run: Time: 56.9; 1. Stark, St. Ig.; 2. Lane, T.C. StF.; 3. George Anderson, Chax.

100 yd. dash: Time: 10.6. 1. Hall, T.C. StF.; 2. Don Livingston, Chax.; 3. Everson, St. Ig.

220 yd. dash: Time: 24.1; 1. Hall, T.C. StF.; 2. Everson, St. Ig.; 3. Hilton Moore, Chax.

Mile relay. Time: 3.52.8. 1. Charlevoix; 2. Traverse City St. Francis, 3. St. Ignace.

In the field events the results were as follows:

Shotput: Distance: 44'5"; 1. Roy Grunch, Chax.; 2. Kozlowski, T.C. StF. 3. Don Ward, Chax.

Long jump: Distance: 18'6"; 1. Gordon Solomon, Chax.; 2. Hall, T.C. StF.; 3. Kramer, T.C. StF.

High jump: Height: 5'7½" 1. Elliott, T.C. StF.; 2. Sheehy, T.C. StF.; 3. Fiedorek, Chax.

Pole vault: Ht.: 10'. 1. Ameel, T.C. StF.; 2. Gustafson, St. Ig. 3. Brown, St. Ig.

Courier Sports

Roy Grunch showed good form for the first Track meet and won the shot with a throw of 44 feet 5 inches. Charlevoix took a first, third and a fourth in the shot putt.

Changes in trout rules

LANSING—When Michigan's general trout season opens today, changes in special trout regulations will be in effect covering quality fishing areas on the Au Sable and Manistee rivers, reminds the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

The new measures, affecting nearly 52 miles on the two streams, reflect a blending between the DNR's original recommendations and views expressed by private citizens at a public hearing in Grayling, March 19.

Under one change, the legal size limit on brook trout has been lowered from 9 to 7 inches in two areas on the North Branch of the Au Sable River, and from 10 to 7 inches in two quality fishing stretches of that river's Main Stream and South Branch.

Waters coming under this lower size limit include a 14.9 mile area on the North Branch down from Eamans Landing to the mouth in Crawford County, a 4.2 mile stretch on that same branch from Dam 2 down to the Otsego County Line, a 8.7 mile area on the Main Stream from Burton's Landing down to Wakeley Bridge, and a 16.4 mile span on the South Branch from Deer Heart Valley Road down to the mouth. The last two areas are in Crawford County.

The first two areas on the North Branch are covered by another change in which the brown trout size limit has been raised from 9 to 10 inches.

New as a quality trout fishing area this season is a 7.5 mile stretch on the Manistee River from Yellowtrees Landing down to CCC Bridge in Kalkaska County. Special regulations adopted for this area limit action to flies-only fishing, establish a creel quota of 5 trout, and set size limits at 7 inches for brook trout and 12 inches for all other trout species.

Cub Scouts hold annual model race car derby

by Pat Begrow

Cub Scouts and their parents turned out in force last Wednesday night for the Pinewood Derby which was held at the elementary school gym.

This is an annual event, held in Charlevoix and across the country. Cub Scouts carve racing cars which may weight no more than five ounces. These cars are then raced on a long downgrade track and after a series of elimination meets, winners are awarded trophies.

A factor that makes this event of particular interest to the boys and to their parents alike is that this is a fether and son project, and both combine their wits and skill to develop the fastest car.

Duane Farmer was the winner and Steve Schuch was the runner - up of the over - all event.

Winners and runner - ups from each Den were: Den 1, Chris Hanna and John Tabor; Den 2, Peter Winnick and Mike Left; Den 3, Tom Bradley and Brian Williams; Den 4, David Taylor and Mike Clark; Den 5, Dave Sonnenberg and Ron Paul; Den 6, Steve Schuch and Duane Farmer; Den 7, Kevin Patrie and Duane Smith; Webelos, Tim Hanna and Ed Donaldson.

Dave Fowler is the Charlevoix Cub Scout Master, and he was assisted by Tom Hanna, Jerry Paul, Dave Patrie, Jim Williams and Jack Stebe. Ivan Whitley was the scorekeeper and William Palmer was the weigh-in judge.

Frank J. Kelley

Frank J. Kelley, attorney General of Michigan, will speak at the Law Day dinner, sponsored by the Emmot-Charlevoix Bar Association, May 1, at the Perry-Davis Hotel, Petoskey.

The dinner is intended for all interested members of the community.

Kelley is Michigan's 50th Attorney General. He is a native of Detroit. In 1948 he completed work at the University of Detroit College of Commerce and Finance, and he received his law degree from the law school at that university in 1951.

Kelley was admitted to the practice of law in Michigan and also before the United States Supreme Court. After practicing corporation law in Detroit, he moved to Alpena where he engaged in the general practice of law from 1954 through 1961. While there he served in several public posts and headed many civic and social agencies.

In January, 1962, he was appointed Attorney General and was elected to a full term in 1962 and re-elected by wide margins in 1964 and 1966. He is presently serving the first 4-year term under the new State Constitution.

As Attorney General, Kelley has spearheaded attacks on crime and corruption. He has filed more petitions for grand juries than any other Attorney General in history. He also set up the first Organized Crime Division in an Attorney General's office in the United States.

Tickets for the Law Day dinner can be obtained from attorneys and also from The Chemist Shop, Petoskey; Bogema Pharmacy, Boyne City; Hovey Pharmacy, Harbor Springs; and Central Drugs, Charlevoix.

Sen. Schweigert:

$$ hinge on answer to tolerance question

Millions of dollars often turn on the answer to one question in Lansing, says Sen. Thomas Schweigert.

And that situation is considered likely when the final answer comes to the question:

"What shall the DDT tolerance level be for fish?" Right now, the answer appears to be 3.5 parts per million.

An unrealistic tolerance level on one side could well end, for some years at least, the coho salmon fishing boom, with its attendant boost to Michigan's economy.

An unrealistic tolerance level on the other side could well cost Michigan farmers and orchardists untold added expenses and costs of operation, costs which necessarily would have to be passed on to the consumer of fruits and vegetables.

Both the Michigan Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources are extremely interested in the decision on the tolerance level made by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

There were some advance indications that the FDA would set an interim DDT limit of 3.5 parts per million for the edible part of fish. Currently, for beef and pork the overall limit is 7, but only one part per million for the edible part of the animal.

Unfortunately, most fish in Lake Michigan and lake trout and other large fish in Lake Superior apparently will not qualify under the 3.5 parts per million limit.

Fish appear to be especially vulnerable to accumulating DDT because of their fat, where the heaviest accumulations are found.

Even if DDT use is permanently banned in the United States as it is being banned in Sweden, experts contend that it will take several years before it will show up on lesser quantities in fish.

If the coho are found to be too dangerous to eat by the FDA, North Michigan may suffer a heavy economical loss.

The importance of the "coho fever" to Michigan was shown recently by a survey of the Manistee County Chamber of Commerce, which disclosed that 1967 sales tax records in that county showed an increase of $1 million in retail sales over the previous year. And last year, the second year of the coho boom, the increase was $1.5 million.

The survey also showed that last year 24 new retail businesses had opened in the county, many of which were a direct result of the coho boom.

On the other side of the coin, it has been estimated that the use of pesticides has saved 100 million lives in the world from insect-borne diseases since DDT came into use in the 1940s.

It has been estimated, too, that since 1940 pesticides alone have increased our national farm output by 10 to 15 percent. Dr. Warren Shaw of the United States Department of Agriculture predicts that elimination of DDT and other pesticides from agricultural operations would cut output sharply and increase the cost of farm products--meat, fruit, and vegetables--from 50 to 75 percent.

So the decision of the Food and Drug Administration could mean near disaster to Michigan either through its effect on conservation or on agriculture.

Dr. John Carr:

Change in pesticide level 'unmeasureable'

"There has been no measurable change in pesticide residue levels in Lake Michigan fish since 1965."

This was the report of Dr. John Carr, Bureau of Commercial Fisheries in Ann Arbor, to the Michigan Commission of Agriculture last Wednesday.

Carr is chief of the limnology program, including pesticides studies, at the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, a division of the U.S. Department of Interior.

Carr said his department has been monitoring pesticide residue levels in Lake Michigan fish since 1965. Monitoring has included coho salmon in the later years when coho became available, as well as other Lake Michigan fish.

Data compiled by the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries indicates no measurable change in pesticide residue levels in Lake Michigan fish, either up or down, Carr reported. "This includes coho salmon," he said, "with levels remaining about the same in 1968 as in 1967."

B. Dale Ball, Agriculture department director and a member of the Michigan Water Resources Commission, noted that the WRC has indicated monitoring data from Carr's agency is the best available in regard to pesticides in coho salmon.

The scientist also reported on coho salmon monitoring in the Platte river. Carr said the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries obtained samples from three locations in the fall of 1968 and in early 1969 to check pesticide residue levels in coho in connection with the fish runs in the Platte.

"Analysis of the fish shows there is little change in the total DDT content in whole fish, no matter at what location or how late in the season the fish are taken," Carr declared. "However," he added, "there are changes in the location of the DDT residues within the fishes' systems as they move upstream."

"There is little indication that coho salmon take up DDT into their bodies while they are in the stream," Carr concluded. While this may be possible, Bureau of Commercial Fisheries data at the present time shows no significant change in total pesticide levels in coho from the time they are in Lake Michigan just prior to their spawning run and on to the upstream stages.

Dr. Carr said the department's samples were taken from Lake Michigan, off the mouth of the Platte; at the first weir in the Platte, near the mouth of the river; and at the second weir, well upstream. All samples were of comparable weight classes, he explained.

Al Smith, owner of Smith's Texaco Station and Villa Moderne Motel, located on South Bridge Street, is the winner of the Zenith AM-FM clock radio, given to one of depositors in recognition of First State Bank reaching the $5,000,000 milestone. Jerrald H. Redeker, Executive Vice President of the bank is shown congratulating Smith, as he presents him with his gift. "Mr. Smith is a fine representative of our $5,000,000 man," Redeker stated. "He is a life-long resident of Charlevoix, and has been a customer of First State Bank for many, many years." Smith's name was drawn at random from a box containing the names of hundreds of depositors which were placed there during a two-week contest.

Hobbyist alert for July 12

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a new summer event to supplement Venetian Night and the Waterfront Fair, called Lakeside Hobbycraft Show.

It will encompass crafts and collections which do not fall in the "Art" classification--such as paintings and sculpturings.

To date, Robert and Margaret Burns have agreed to serve as secretary-treasurer of the project with Doan Davenport as co-ordinator, but there are still classified committee positions to be filled.

There will be a general meeting at the community room in City Hall at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, April 30, for all who are interested in assisting in the promotion of the project are invited to attend.

Paul Stephans has been named Scoutmaster for new Boy Scout Troop 33 of Charlevoix.

The group is sponsored by the Lions Club, and meets Tuesdays in the Elementary School cafeteria.

Intermediate School District reports

On March 28, 1963, county school districts in Michigan became intermediate school districts officially. The same act of the Legislature that created intermediate school districts, also provided for mandatory reorganization of the very small county school districts into units large enough to provide such basic services to local schools as can be best administered by a regional agency effectively, efficiently, and economically. Intermediate school districts were established to keep all programs and services to grades K-12 under local control. Each intermediate school district is operated by a board of education which has been either elected by the whole electorate as they are in the Charlevoix - Emmet Intermediate District or elected by representatives from the local constituent districts whom they serve.

Strong intermediate districts make strong local school districts and serve as the key contact between the State Department of Education and local school operations. Within this concept the Charlevoix - Emmet Intermediate School District, which also includes Central Lake Public Schools and the Ellsworth Community School District which lie in Antrim County, works closely with local school administrators and boards of education to establish services and programs which they request or approve. In addition the superintendent is responsible for directives given him by the Intermediate Board of Education, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, or enacted by the Michigan Legislature.

The intermediate district's current General Fund operations are supported by .2 mill from local property taxes (20¢ on each $1,000 State Equalized Valuation), and an approximate matching sum from state funds. Services provided within this budget include the operation and furnishing of an instructional materials center staffed with a clerk and librarian. During the course of a school year the local elementary and secondary school teachers will have booked well over 3,200 films plus numerous specialized books and other educational materials.

All applications and funds for school lunch programs are processed through the intermediate office. The Intermediate district is responsible for an annual evaluation of the program geared to the improvement of food handling, quality of menus, and sanitation. The office organizes and coordinates several workshops for the cooks during each school year believing that the preparation of three-quarters of a million Type A lunches per year is big enough business to be given a place of prestige in the schools' operations.

The intermediate district determines the number of children and bus route miles that are eligible for state aid reimbursement for transportation costs based upon information on the 100 bus route maps which the schools submit. They, too, correlate and assist Central Michigan University in the conducting of annual schools for the 80-plus school bus drivers who transport more than 5,000 children nearly one million miles during each year.

The distribution of all delinquent school taxes is a required service. Running balances of uncollected portions are kept by year and kind from most of the 46 taxing units.

Aggravated or serious attendance problems are often referred to the intermediate school office for assistance.

The intermediate board of education has sole responsibility for approving or denying all petitions for property transfers from one district to another. They administer the division of school districts and conduct elections involving consolidation of districts. The superintendent recommends to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction either favoring or disapproving requests to the Department for permission to annex one district to another.

A coordinator of Vocational - Technical Education is employed by the intermediate board of education. His role is to coordinate the efforts of local districts and to assist in the establishment of area vocational programs as recommended in a professional study that was made about five years ago.

The office administers Title II Federal library monies that are allocated to the intermediate district office and distributes the materials to local schools, public and parochial, on a permanent loan basis. During the past four years $56,400 has been allocated and used entirely to improve local school libraries. To date these funds have purchased more than 10,000 books, 600 film strips, 400 records, plus globes, pictures and other resource materials.

The Intermediate superintendent, by virtue of his office, is superintendent of all non-superintendency districts and thus is legally the chief administrator of one high school district--Beaver Island Community School.

Intermediate district personnel serve in the role of consultants to constituent schools in the preparation and evaluation of Title I Federally financed programs.

Also, the intermediate school district has significant legal responsibilities to the State in teacher certification, school tax levies, tuition, annual financial and child accounting audits, and many others relating to public education.

The office conducts or assists in conducting various and sundry surveys and in-service programs for teachers, administrators and board members.

In addition, some of the most important services rendered are those given to individuals which are not specified or required and are unknown to all except the recipient.

Such services as data processing and cooperative buying are definitely suited to the role of the regional educational agency and are being cooperatively initiated in several areas of the State.

The Intermediate District directly operates five programs for handicapped students in addition to indirectly supporting two locally operated programs.

The program which provides direct service to the largest number of students is the speech correction services. The six speech therapists provide service to approximately 438 students in eleven local districts as well as four non - public schools.

The school social worker program, comprised of three school social workers, service approximately 137 students in eleven local districts. These professionals work in close cooperation with the surrounding mental health facilities, juvenile court officers and local district counselors.

The students referred for placement in locally operated programs for the mentally handicapped must be certified as being eligible by a school psychologist, who is employed by the intermediate district. The school psychologist, referred to as diagnostician in Michigan, services approximately 130 students each year.

Through the cooperation of the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation the Intermediate district provides work experiences for those senior high students who are eligible for the educable mentally handicapped programs. This vocational rehabilitation program places eligible students, sixteen years of age and older, on jobs in the community which will prepare them for post-high school work experience. This program services approximately 25 students per year.

The final program for handicapped students offered through the Intermediate district is the Hospitalized and Homebound program. This service provides an educational program to those students who are unable to attend school due to some physically disability. This program services approximately twelve students at a time. The total number for any one school year will be nearly 35 students.

In addition to these direct service programs the Intermediate District also financially supports six locally operated programs for the educable mentally handicapped student as well as two such programs for the trainable mentally handicapped student. For the current school year there are 80 students in the educable mentally handicapped programs and 26 students in the trainable mentally handicapped programs.

The final program supported by the Intermediate District is the Crippled or Otherwise Physically Handicapped program which services eleven handicapped students.

Of course, I am pleased to have the membership fee checks arriving from time to time. Needless to mention, folks, we are counting on them considerably. Our normal commitments this year are going to keep the kitty, so to speak, pretty close to the bottom of the barrel. As I see it, our Ways and Means Committee or the Board at large, including myself, will have to come up with some ideas of fund raising in addition to our normal contributions.

It might interest you to know we are continuing, in addition to other phases, a wide variety of contacts for information, not only for summer holidays of various lengths, but for jobs of one caliber or another, and likewise with housing. Many of them are some people who have merely passed through our fair city and were impressed. Many are persons who have been here for different lengths of time exploring and have decided to make an effort to join our population, as they feel ours is a fine spot in which to live and bring up the family.

Yes, there are times when we have inquiries from industries. We sometimes have specifications the area could not possibly meet, and some are otherwise. So you see, we must have something after all.

For use here at the office, I finally have a directory of so called employment bureaus located within the state, as I have had considerably call for this sort of a publication. You are welcome to use it.

Remember not too many years ago, American Plan lodging places, whether it be hotels, guest houses, resorts, etc., were popular. They say history repeats itself, and accordingly, I noticed the past several months the bulletins received regularly from the West Michigan Tourist Association, which is a confidential list, they send to all their members, which covers names, addresses, etc., of persons contacting them for lodging places, recreation, etc. (We answer quite a number of these if what we have fits any of the specification or close to it). It is noticed American Plan inquiries are on the increase. For instance, a bulletin dated April 17, under the heading of American Plan, has 33 inquiries for different locations. For Motels and hotels, there are listed 45 names and addresses of inquirers, of course, specifying dates and some specify location.

Under the heading of housekeeping cottages there are 76 names and addresses. It is noticed inquiries for camping are increasing, and in this bulletin there are 39. However, this time sports fishing inquiries were off, as it only showed two.

Recently I indicated a number of local persons were very much concerned about a show here in Charlevoix having to do with hobbies. Finally last Wednesday, this good group had their first meeting to begin organization. They chose to call the event Lakeside Hobby-Craft Show, which will include crafts and collections which do not fall in the "art" classification such as the Waterfront Fair. I have observed that some of these fairs or shows have developed into being quite an attraction, and somewhat of a fund raiser to assist in the needs of the local Chamber of Commerce. A real nice gesture of support and cooperation, I would say.

For the moment, I understand, the Art Wexstaff's are very much involved, and Art's wife Bernice will be handling the publicity. At the meeting Robert and Margaret Burns agreed to serve as secretary-treasurer, and Dean Dav-

Would you like to hear a good clean story?

It goes like this: Buy a new Gas range and forget about oven cleaning, forever. Not bad, huh? And that's not the whole story.

The new Gas self-cleaning oven will clean itself automatically, spotlessly and do the whole job for about 2¢. It's a new way of life for the housewife. No more rubber gloves, strong detergents or harsh cleaning agents.

And while we're on the subject, this new Gas range simply cooks food better than anything you've ever used. It provides complete heat control. At all times. No matter what you're cooking. It will cook faster. Cleaner. And do it all for less money. See the new Gas self-cleaning oven today at dealer or Michigan Consolidated Gas Company showrooms. It's great for women who like to cook, period. Cook with Gas . . . It'll serve you right.

Telephone Pioneers join 'New Eyes' drive

This week has been proclaimed by Gov. William Milliken as "Telephone Pioneer -- New Eyes for the Needy Week" in Michigan.

Pioneers are telephone employees who have 21 or more years of service, and, of the 27,000 Michigan Bell Telephone Pioneers of America. What have they to do with new eyes for the needy?

Mrs. C. Marie Rabach, Petoskey club president, said that in the past two years Pioneers collected 100,000 pairs of used eye glasses that were reconditioned, sterilized, and sent to the needy in all parts of the world.

Notes of thanks in many languages have come from recipients from the bottom of South America to the foothills of the Himalayas.

Pioneers throughout the Bell System help New Eyes For The Needy, Inc., a charitable organization in Short Hills, New Jersey. In nationwide collections, the organization receives about a half million pairs of glasses yearly, and sends about 42,000 pairs overseas.

Michigan Bell Pioneers are members of what is named the Wolverine Chapter, which is divided into eight councils and 28 "Clubs"

Part of the Governor's proclamation reads: "The Wolverine Chapter has in the past year contributed in excess of 9,000 hours of time to assist others less fortunate. Its projects include the collecting of clothing and Christmas gifts for children on Indian reservations in Michigan, giving hearing tests, modifying and repairing of several thousands of talking book machines, and making recordings for the blind. . . The Pioneers have been acknowledged by New Eyes For The Needy, Inc. as one of their staunchest supporters."

Mrs. Rabach said containers for those wishing to donate unwanted glasses are located in every Michigan Bell business office throughout the state.

Gov. Milliken urged all Michigan residents to donate old glasses to provide better eyesight "to those who could not otherwise afford it."

The Pioneers are also asking for old jewelry. Stones of some value are saved. Gold and other metal is melted down, and then sold for cash along with the stones. The cash, in turn, is used to buy new eyeglasses for needy people in this country.

Garden Club topic: vines

Members of the Charlevoix Garden Club met April 8 with Mrs. Pearl Rowe. A most interesting lesson was given by Mrs. Jeannette Cameron on "Vines and Ground Covers".

These days, everyone who has home grounds to care for is seeking ways to cut down maintenance costs while making his home attractive. In many cases the answer to this problem lies in the wider use of ground covers which are low growing plants of many different species, possessing the common trait that once established, they practically take care of themselves.

One of their greatest advantages is that most of them can be grown in places where it is difficult or even impossible to get most other plants to survive.

Much of the pleasure in gardening is derived from discovering out of the ordinary plants that will add distinction to one's garden and create new effects.

While especially useful in beautifying shady areas, ground covers are by no means limited to such locations. Among them are species that thrive in very dry soil in either sun or shade and on rough or stoney slopes.

A discriminating gardener who may desire something unusual should try Fuonymus Kewenis, a Bittersweet with dark evergreen foliage to be seen close up around a sundial or pool in either sun or shade. The hardy Baltic and English ivys are lovely in shade and Pachysandra, and a new one is Crownvetch which is the answer for banks and hilly places.

The Silver Beauty Ajuga is perfect everywhere with its varigated contrast of foliage.

And then we have Lily of the Valley and the reliable Vincas or Myrtle to choose from for your trouble spots.

Our club is again selling shrubs through the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce, including several varieties of Flowering Crabs, Scarlet Hawthorne trees, Corkbark Euonymus or Burning Bush, and several types of different colored lilacs.

If you would like more information on these shrubs, call Mrs. Carolyn Rader by April 26.

We are also selling a two purpose hoe for easier gardening. If anyone has an unwanted home furnishing that could be used in the Ironton School to make it more homelike please contact Mrs. Wanda Hill, chairman.

Our Club Flower Beds are cleaned and ready for the new season. The next meeting will be a May Breakfast, at 9:30 a.m. at the home of Margaret Wilson. The lesson topic will be "Do you Wish for Wildflowers," with slides, by Carolyn Rader.

enport is in the capacity of co - ordinator. There are classified committee positions yet to be filled, and accordingly there certainly must be some talent in the bleachers, so to speak, that should come forward and get into the game.

It might interest you local aviators that at Mackinac Island, airport bids have been received and let for a new administration building, and that work is to start this month. Over at Drummond Island airport it is indicated bids were to be received this month for a 1,020 foot for extension of the E-W landing strip. Workers expect to start in May and be done by June 1. Also in Michigan Aviation Publication, by the Michigan Aeronautics Commission, Department of Commerce, there is some interesting bits of aviation history, one of which is "15 years ago, April, 1954 Pan American started Trans-Atlantic Clipper service from Detroit to London using the old dependable DC 6 B, which was named 'Clipper Great Lakes' ". I had a most pleasant flight, not a long one; however, it was interesting in one of the Pan Am's Clippers. I thought it was quite a plane and seemed to have the old stuff that was necessary, such as my favorite, a souped up DC 3, both of which are a far cry from the jets, they sure could ride out the storms and other turbulance.

Some time back I mentioned that over in the Cleveland, Ohio, area they began explorations in a small way having to do with the Coho Salmon. A year or so ago they had some eggs and made a plant at Holden Arboretum in Kirkland, and left were the stubborn little five to seven inchers to leave this pond area and eventually pass into Lake Erie in the far out East side of Cleveland. The Department's men had to get into the pond and flail the water to make the fish move, as it seemed they did not want to leave the pond environment. I just received three Cleveland newspaper clippings from my sister, one entitled "Don't Try to Catch Those Coho Fugitives," "Jail Break 31,000 Coho Flee Arboretum", and "State Officials Optimistic on Coho Escapte Artists". It happened early in April when he earthen damn, because of the forceful high water of Chagrin River, gave way at the wrong point and away were the little fellows out into the fast water headed for Lake Erie, whether they wanted to go or not. They were not ready to be leased, intentionally or otherwise. So, it is wondered whether these fellows will come back to the original location.

If any of you know any private cottages for rent, summer homes, etc., please let us know, as our list has become exhausted and many of the commercial premises are nearly booked at this writing, and the inquiries will continue to be received.

Generation gap

WE HEAR MUCH TODAY about the so-called "generation gap," and the difficulties parents have in communicating with their kids, and Dan Van Eyck, Dean of Students and Dean of Men at Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., discussed this last fall in the school's alumni magazine.

"This year's (college) seniors were born about 1947, after Hiroshima and the Bikini atoll. Their first years were the years of the Berlin blockade, the diplomatic conflict between the United States and Russia, the beginnings of television and of commercial jet travel, conversation about magadeaths. They have grown up during a period of unparalleled prosperity: many live in new homes, and many of their parents have borrowed on credit to enjoy possessions and opportunities. Many of these student have worked to provide their own spending money, few have had to contribute to family support.

"Our freshmen were born during the first year of the Korean War; they were in the second grade when Russia launched Sputnik and when Little Rock High School was integrated with the help of Federal troops. The sit - ins at Southern lunch counters occurred during their grade school years; they were in the eighth grade when President Kennedy was murdered in Dallas. They know little about mastoid operations and scarlet fever, and their schools have never been closed during a polio epidemic. New countries have been formed in Africa; and familiar empire colors of red, orange and green have disappeared from the map of Asia. In virtually one generation, these familiar elements of our environment have changed.

"Today's undergraduate has probably not seen a final solution to a single world or national problem with which he has lived. The established processes of government, of bureaucracy, of mediation and conciliation show few results to him, and he distrusts, or at least questions, the efficacy of the 'system.' The frame of reference of his generation is so different from that of his elders that there is often serious lack of understanding, a gap of sufficient proportion to make communication difficult.

"Much of the philosophy which has dominated their world and upbringing postulates that little is of value unless it has been personally experienced, unless the individual himself feels it to be of value. It is a philosophy which urges each individual to be his own judge, to refuse to accept without question the stated values of others, the pronouncements of established institutions of law, church and school. It is an ethic in which the definition of the right, the good, the true and the beautiful often depends on the situation, the specific conditions, the persons involved."

With this in mind. Van Eyck goes on to a key comment about these kids and their attitudes.

"Many students believe that the world can be changed, that life can be better; that ills can be corrected and reforms made. They are convinced they can influence the direction of these events while they are still students. Only a few believe that the structure must be destroyed, or that society must individually or collectively retreat into some kind of drug-induced stupor in order to survive."

Any analysis we might add would be superfluous. He hits the nail on the head.

Old age

by John Reddy of the Birmingham Eccentric

I had an opportunity recently to peek into the future. To put it another way, I sat and watched how two people dealt with what-is-or-will-be-a-major problem for most of us--old age.

One is a 69-year-old woman who retired at 65. She lives alone in a modest house. The other is a 79-year-old man. He is a pharmacist who lives alone in a comfortable three-room apartment.

The woman's sole function is to go to her doctor, disregard what he says and complain about her health and the neighborhood kids that play around outside her house. She also makes a federal case out of where her daily newspaper is deposited by the delivery boy.

THE MAN, on the other hand, works two days a week in a pharmacy some 15 miles from where he lives. He commutes by public transportation, which even requires that he transfer once each way. He goes to his American Legion meetings, the wakes of friends and participates in the social activities that widowers plan for the group of retirees who live in the building.

To be fair, the man needed the money and had to work. The woman didn't. But regardless of whether the circumstances resulted from the exercise of free will or not, it seemed to me the man had much more vitality and interest in life.

In deciding how to avoid the pitfalls of advanced years, it struck me that perhaps one had better plan, even if the game plan never has to be used.

ONE OF THE essential ingredients of fruitful old age, I concluded on the basis of my observations, is to have a schedule in which somebody else relies on your keeping. So even if one doesn't need an income producing job, it would seem almost essential to an active life that one participate in some task that fulfills the need to feel wanted.

The thought of sitting around reading, smoking, working the crossword puzzle and going to the doctor twice a month seems about the worst possible way to pass the time, unless of course you threw in watching television also.

My resolution is that if I live long enough to retire, I'm going to find something or somebody who lives on the other side of town and make it a point to go there and back tree times a week for as long as I can.

There's gotta be an honorable way to go.

on the Flip Side

A friend down Florida way found himself filled chuck full with resentment towards people who wouldn't do anything, sat down at a typewriter and took out his feelings on the keys.

He sent the letter he wrote to no one in particular along to us for review. We're sending it on to you, just as it came, as this week's editorial comment.

Dear Fellow Citizen:

My name is George.

I'm an all around handyman, and I'd like you to feel free to use my services for any and all chores, errands and duties which you may be too busy to perform. Anytime there's something needs doing and you'd rather not get involved, you just let old George do it.

I'll write to your Congressman for you! Hell, better yet, I'll pick him for you. I'll write your newspaper editor or serve on the school board in your place. In fact, I'll do anything you are too tired, too pre-occupied or too lazy to do. With me around you can be as lack-adalsical and self-satisfied as you like. You can just have fun and let the future be damned!

THE MORE the merrier, I always say.

My services are available to you for all the tedious time consuming things you'd rather not get hung up with.

You haven't time to vote. . so let George do it!

And certainly you don't want to bother with all those messy precinct meetings that pick people and get out the vote. George will be glad to take over for you. There certainly is no need for you to concern yourself with town meetings or helping to shape policy, or attending business meetings. You don't want to bother with those committee assignments and extra responsibilities.

YOU JUST let old George tend to them.

And I know you don't want to take a stand on anything controversial. . it might slow down your social climbing or lose you a five cent sale, so, O.K. . . let George do it.

Now, you ask, why should you leave all those important things to me, someone you've never met? Well, that's a reasonable question, so let me put you at ease.

I'm no Beginner.

MAYBE I'M not as famous as Krushchev, for instance, but if it hadn't been for me, you'd never have heard of him. That goes for Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler, too. I made those guys. While the others were saying it couldn't happen, I made it happen. And the big time boys in the rackets in the United States who pull the strings behind the scenes to make things work the way they want them to . . you name 'em, and without me those guys would be nowhere.

Why do I want to run errands for you when I'm the guy who is really behind all these Big Wheels? Don't you see, I get my kicks from picking Presidents, school boards, running unions, establishments, counties and countries.

ALL THESE things you used to do before you took up chasing dollars, total security, golf balls and the like.

Oh, don't you feel that you're imposing, because I'm glad to be of service. In helping you, I'm really helping myself, you see. How do you think I was able to take and run a third of the world already? Because nobody else wanted to bother with it. Oh, I guess a few did, of course, but it was easy for me to name-call them back to oblivion and get the "leaders" to listen to me instead.

AFTER ALL, who picked these leaders? Well, since you didn't want to and said "Let George do it". . I did.

Now, I'm taking over a lot more cities and counties in the United States and doing quite well at the colleges also, thank you. And I figure it's just a matter of time until I'll have the whole country in my pocket.

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for making all this possible for me. Remember now, if there is any way in which I can be of help, I'm at your service. You just have fun. . and don't worry about a thing. . I'll even do your worrying, too!

Sincerely,
George

Fires, burglaries and freak accidents have taken a large toll of U.S. Savings Bonds, but not a penny is ever lost by the owners. Any Bond lost, stolen, mutilated or destroyed is replaced free of charge by the Treasury.

Owners of U.S. Savings Bonds need not worry about their investment, should they fall victim to a sudden disaster such as a flash flood or tornado. The Treasury acts quickly to replace or reissue Bonds in such hardship cases. The first major instance in which such action was taken came in Cleveland, Ohio, following an explosion in 1944 -- just a little more than three years after the first Series E Bond was sold.

Since then, claims have resulted from the Texas City, Texas, disaster, the LaSalle Hotel fire in Chicago, tidal waves which struck Hawaii and California, the Columbia River flood, the Alaskan earthquake, the hurricane and flood which hit South Texas, in 1967, the floods in Southern California in January, 1969, and tornadoes, fires, hurricanes and other disasters which have visited areas of the U.S. in recent years.

Secretary's silly syllables

This middle-aged woman came into my office, obviously troubled, and she had some good questions. I couldn't give her any good answers.

That night I was reading about Defense Secretary Melvin Laird and I thought Gee, if I had his smooth tongue I could have given that nice lady some bad answers that sounded good.

Secretary Laird was explaining the Vietnam situation to a Senate committee: "Our orientation seems to have been more on operations than on assisting the South Vietnamese to acquire the means to defend themselves," he said.

Marvelous. Can you think of a daintier way of saying that the U.S. is doing the fighting while the South Vietnamese watch?

More from Laird: "It is apparent that a successful infrastructure effort will thus require a substantially higher enemy rate of attrition than has yet been realized."

Beautiful. What the man means is that we must kill the bad guys faster than they are being born.

Laird also said the U.S. has not yet achieved "the development of indigenous forces which would be capable of suppressing insurgency on their own if North Vietnamese and U.S. forces were withdrawn."

How about those syllables? No one is going to accuse our Defense Secretary of using 4-letter words. What Laird was saying is that if the U.S. and North Vietnam troops dropped out, the South Vietnam army would be smeared by the Viet Cong.

And what it all amounts to is Laird's admission that, after 15 years of spending and bleeding in Vietnam, the U.S. has not nearly accomplished its objective. Remember, we were going to send a few of "our boys" over there for a few months to train the South Vietnamese troops, to show them how to stop Communism from spreading (any closer than Cuba?). Sure, it was a civil war and really none of our business but, what the heck, it wouldn't take long for our military experts to get things going the right way. Remember the Bay of Pigs? The boys will be home for Christmas for sure.

You bet. Over 500,000 young Americans have had their last Christmas. Santa Claus failed them in Vietnam. Ten thousand American soldiers have been killed since the stuffed shirts sat down to talk peace in Paris. And if you think that's the worst of it, you should visit some military hospitals where there are teenage boys who will never walk or talk or see or move again.

"Why does it have to be? When will the killing end?"

That's what the middle-aged woman asked me. She had brought me a picture of her son to go with the story I was writing about him. He had been killed in Vietnam the week before, 10 days after his 20th birthday.

She couldn't stop the tears. I couldn't give an answer.

Secretary Laird should be forced to mouth his bloody nonsense to the mothers of these dead boys. He should look them in the eye and tell them their sons are part of the necessary U.S. attrition if there is to be a successful infrastructure effort whereby indigenous forces may suppress insurgency.

I wonder if Laird could spout all those silly syllables with a mouthful of Vietnam mud?

The Postal System

Our Postal system has of late come under much fire for its inability to function effectively and economically.

The Department has long been recognized as a bureaucratic, money-losing club.

However, times may be changing. Merit selection of Postmasters, instituted this year by the Nixon Administration, will help remove politics from the Post Office, and should produce far better management.

From Congressman Philip E. Ruppe comes this report on the selection of Postmasters. . .

The postal patronage system is now being broken for the first time in the history of the Republic. Since the days of Benjamin Franklin postmasters have been designated by "advisors" of the incumbent President's party, usually the Congressman or Senator for the community where the vacancy exists.

Now appointments will be based on merit--not politics. Vacancies in the largest 400 post offices will be filled by an impartial National Management Selection Board. Vacancies in the other 31,800 post offices will be filled by an impartial Regional Management Selection Board.

The Regional Boards will be comprised of an outstanding postmaster from the region, selected by the Postmaster General; a representative of a nationally known management consulting firm; an individual supplied by the Dean of an outstanding school of business administration in the area; an official of the Civil Service Commission; and the fifth will come from the Arbitration Administration. Postal management may nominate up to three qualified postal career people for each postmaster vacancy. The board will select one. If none are nominated, or none are found to be qualified, the board will call for open civil service examinations. People outside the postal service may compete in these examinations, and the board will choose one from the top three finalists.

The Nixon Administration intends to submit legislation to eliminate Senate confirmation of postmasters which in the past has had political overtones. By the informal rules of "Congressional courtesy" each Senator has been able to veto any appointment in his State.

Removal of these essentially career jobs from patronage is a vital step toward achieving the goal of the best possible postal service. One knowledgable Democratic Congressman said after the election, "The best thing about Nixon's victory is that I won't have to make those. . .postal appointments anymore. You end up with ten hard-working Democrats mad at you because they didn't get the appointment, and one ingrate who feels he deserved it because of his outstanding qualifications".

The "indestructibility" of U.S. Savings Bonds also crosses international boundaries. One person took a $1,000 Bond with him to Cuba, in 1961. Since Government regulations made it illegal for him to hold the Bond, he buried it in the ground. When he left Cuba, he could not bring the Bond back. The Treasury deemed it unrecoverable and a new Bond was issued.

U.S. Savings Bonds are synonymous with indestructibility. If you lose yours, no matter how odd the circumstances, you can get a replacement at no cost from the Treasury. Take the situation of a boy in a rural community who went out to the mailbox to get the mail. On the way back to the house, the wind blew an envelope containing a Savings Bond into the path of a rotary lawn mower. Bond and envelope were shredded. The Bond was replaced.

WILL HURT

"It's going to hurt either way. It is a very serious problem to both agriculture and fishing interests."

"The problem needs considerably more research than done thus far," stated Keller.

"It may be found that in the cooking process, the pesticide residue may be spread in the fish to the point it would be reduced to a safe level."

LONG LOOK

"The time has come to take a long, hard look at all the research which has been gathered," and make a stand.

If the federal government does enforce the 3.5 level, Keller and his staff would begin sampling fish at different points in Lake Michigan to see if during certain times of the year some fish would be useable.

Keller hasn't panicked. But he does feel that the loss of the lake as a fishing resource this soon after reclaiming it would be a tragedy.

The final economic and recreational damage is not yet known; hopefully, it will not be too great.

SERIOUS CONCERN

Ralph A. MacMullan, director of the Department of Conservation, adds, "This is a matter of most serious concern to us, with potentially important implications for Lake Michigan and its sport and commercial fisheries. We have known for several years that there is a pesticides pollution problem in the lake. A year ago, we lost more than 700,000 baby salmon in our hatcheries owing to what scientists at MSU said was most probably DDT poisoning. That loss, the canned salmon incident earlier this year and now this one are all very worrisom, to say the least.

"Although disturbed by this latest evidence of pesticides pollution of Lake Michigan, I cannot honestly say that I am greatly surprised by it. We have been saying for quite some time that the use of 'hard' pesticides must be brought under strict control to the point of virtual elimination. Important progress toward this goal has been made in the past couple of years, but these incidents prove we must keep working hard at it."

little children because it is safe and close," Forbrig stated.

He hopes parents of youngsters who use the facility will urge their children to show consideration of the premises. "If the children will clean up after themselves, remove the worm cans and other things they bring, it would be a big help."

Why did Forbrig open the pond to Charlevoix boys and girls?

"I had children and know it's hard for them to find a place to fish. So, we took a washed-out creek and restored it. We have had fine cooperation from the Conservation Department and the city," he said.

"The first year, all the fish in the pond came out of the lake, but since then it has been stocked. This year, about 500 legal sized trout will be stocked, after the opening rush of the first month. Right now, the pond is loaded with fish."

Last year, according to Forbrig, the largest fish taken was a 10½-pound coho, followed by an 8½-pound rainbow. A couple of years ago, a youngster hauled an 18-inch native brook trout from the water.

Forbrig also invites parents to accompany their children to the pond. Though they cannot fish, they'll undoubtedly catch a lot of fun.

Board calls meeting to hear budget gripes

Residents of the Charlevoix school district will have the chance to give the School Board their opinions, when the Board opens the doors May 26.

The open meeting will be held two weeks prior to the June 9 election, when the electorate again votes on the 1969-70 school budget. Millage requests totaling 4.75 mills were voted down April 7 by approximately 3-2.

Don Brown and Jim Marshall of the recently formed citizens' sounding board told the schoolmasters they were "disappointed by the response of the public."

"Only three people came to City Hall when the committee was available last Friday and Saturday," Brown said.

Marshall stated he felt the "public thinks we are a tool of the Board or the teachers. . .they feel this is not on the 'up and up'."

Marshall added that the sounding board had received criticism of the district in two categories, but would not disclose them. "Let's wait until all the information is in," he said.

In discussing the open meeting May 26, the Board expressed the hope that residents will air their views and ask questions concerning the school system.

For those who do not care to speak, forms will be provided for written opinions and questions.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium.

MIDDLE SCHOOL

In other business, the Board answered Jim Richey's question concerning the remodeling of the Middle School.

The Board said the remodeling job may not be put out for bid, but given on a contract basis to Barnes Construction, builder of the new elementary building.

"We might hire a concern outright, without securing bids," Glenn Kenney, Board president, said, "as bids would be very high because the job is not particularly attractive."

ADULT ED

Del Terrill told the Board that adult education costs this year would be approximately $4,470.

Defraying those costs were $2,500 collected in fees and $3,009 in state aid.

The program will close the year with a balance of $700 to $1,000, including the salaries of 19 instructors who teach in the program.

Terrill also announced that the "clamp-on" skates purchased for the roller skating program, but unused since the acquisition of shoe skates, have been sold to a Saginaw school for $1,000.

GOLF REVIVED

Recinding a previous decision, the Board gave unanimous approval to the high school golf team.

Teacher Barry Anderson will coach the team, with no renumeration. According to Superintendent Rex Milligan, 14 boys have indicated they will participate in the sport this spring.

SMITH PLAN

Vane Smith, high school principal next year, received Board permission to explore a six-period school day. Smith also expressed the desire to upgrade graduation requirements from 16 to 19 or 20 units.

Band wins top honors at orchestra festival

The Charlevoix High School Band was awarded the highest rating possible from all four judges last Saturday when it received an I rating in the State Band and Orchestra Festival.

It marks the thirteenth time since 1950 that the local group has received the top rating; yet only the second time that all judges have been unanimous in their rating.

A total of 101 students made the trip to Ovid-Elsie High School, outside Lansing, the site of the festival.

Saturday afternoon, following the performance, the band proceeded to the Capitol Park Motor Inn, where the group was housed overnight.

Chaperones were Mrs. Harold Wilson, Mrs. Don Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Del Terrill, Louis Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Odmark. Driving the band busses were Mrs. Maurice Cudd, Mrs. Gordon Wolgamott and Al Thorpe.

Judges for the event were Leonard Falcone, director emeritus of the Michigan State University band; Dr. Harold Wright, head of the music department at Northern Michigan University; Herman Berg of Joliet, Illinois; and Robert Clark, assistant professor of music education at MSU.

Harney is top writer

Martin P. Harney, Managing Editor, Central Skiland, a mid-America ski newspaper, published by the Courier Corporation has been named the outstanding ski writer in the Central Division of the United States Ski Association for the 1968-69 season.

The announcement of the award was made by R.P. Bartolameolli, Dearborn, Mich., chairman of the USSA-CD Awards Committee, at the annual meeting of the Division in Chicago, April 25, 26, and 27.

Annual sports banquet Sat.

Nick Eddy, former Notre Dame All-America, and now an All-Star halfback with the Detroit Lions, will be the main speaker at the annual All Sports banquet in the high school Saturday.

Also highlighted will be a film of the Lions' 1968 season.

Sponsored by the Sports Boosters, the banquet is held in honor of Charlevoix High School athletes from all inter-scholastic teams.

Tickets are available at Charlevoix County State Bank, First State Bank, Lieberman's, LaBlance Insurance Agency, Cellner's Barber Shop, Schroeder Drugs, Rexall Drugs, and Hess Furniture. Price is $3.50 for adults, and $2.50 for students.

Kenney will not seek re-election

Charlevoix School Board President Glenn Kenney will not seek re-election.

Kenney made the announcement last week, stating he does not have the time to devote to the job.

GLENN KENNEY

"Who ever is elected to the job should have the proper amount of time to devote to the problems. I just do not have the time to do the job justice," Kenney said.

Kenney served four years on the Board, two of them as president.

He feels the major problems faced by the Board will relate to a lack of communications. "The rapport with the teachers has improved greatly. I feel there is increased respect and trust between the Board, administration and teaching staff, but there is still a gap in the flow of communications," he stated.

"The communications problem was most surprising to me, because we live in a small community. But, I most definitely feel that our residents are proud of their city and townships," he added.

Will Kenney remain active in school affairs? "Not officially," he says, "but I'll still be an interested citizen and work toward solving any problems which might arise."

Waterfront Fair party will express "thanks" tomorrow

The Charlevoix Waterfront Fair Committee will sponsor a "Thank You Party" tomorrow from [illegible] to 4 p.m. at the Weathervane Inn. Refreshments will be served and music will be provided by popular pianist Les Payne.

The party will honor over 80 men and women who have volunteered their time over the last ten years and helped the Fair to become one of the finest art shows in the Midwest. A friend is underwriting the cost of the party.

Mrs. Paul Olsen has agreed to take the chairmanship again this year. Other former chairmen who will be present are Mrs. Jack Rader, Mrs. Kit Carson and Mrs. Edward McNamara.

Mrs. Paul Olsen has agreed to take the chairmanship again this year. Other former chairmen who will be present are Mrs. Jack Rader, Mrs. Kit Carson and Mrs. Edward McNamara.

Many outstanding artists and craftsmen return year after year from all over the United States to display their work on the rolling terraces of East Park on the shores of Round Lake.

The fair is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Lyle Miles, president says, "We are most fortunate in having such an outstanding group of people who are dedicated in promoting this successful cultural event every August. Very few people realize how much hard work is done by the committee who begin planning in February.

"Posters must be designed and printed to be placed in museums and art schools downstate. Application forms must be mimeographed and mailed early so that people can make their summer vacation plans. Pictures of the artists' work must be approved, and receipts mailed. Publicity releases must be given to newspapers and radio.

"Hostesses must be recruited for the information booth. Programs giving the artists' work must be approved and receipts mailed. Publicity releases must be given to newspapers and radio.

"Hostesses must be recruited for the information booth. Programs giving the artists' name, address and alloted space number in the park must be printed along with name tags.

"On the day of the Fair, volunteers are needed to help artists load and unload their cars on Bridge Street. Not only is parking a problem, but I am told we are running out of space. Last year the Fair spilled over to the adjacent park on Mason Street."

Mrs. Olsen, says, "Not only does the Fair promote Charlevoix tourism, but it gives many children a chance to see original works of art perhaps for the first time. And it also gives our local Sunday painters a chance to exhibit."

"Anyone who has helped on the Waterfront Fair over the last ten years, or anyone who is interested in helping this summer, is most welcome to come and celebrate," says Mrs. Julius Gilbert. "We expect this Fair-our eleventh year-to be outstanding, and we're getting off to a jolly good start on Thursday."

Mrs. Arthur Skelton who is in charge of the hostesses adds, "We are happy to have the opportunity to thank all of the wonderful volunteers."

City Council sells land to Electra Machine Co.

Charlevoix City Council approved a plan to sell a plot of land to the Electra Machine Company for plant expansion.

The sale calls for immediate acquisition of approximately three acres, bordering the present Electra plant on Petoskey Avenue, and an option on 17 additional acres.

According to Council, the company plans to begin construction of one building now, with plans for three additional buildings at a future date.

Mayor William Fochtman appointed Conrad Klooster, Jr., as Third Ward Alderman. "I feel Klooster has the qualifications to do an outstanding job as Alderman," Fochtman said.

In other business, Robert Straw came before Council and requested permission to close the alley between State and Bridge Streets, from Park Avenue to Clinton Street, for construction purposes.

Council approved the request, which will close the alley for a one week period while a wall is constructed.

Scheid Realty asked for permission to transform three 132-foot lots into six plots. Council rejected the proposal, noting that minimum sized lots must be 100 feet.

The State Department of Highways asked the City Fathers for 50 percent participation and maintenance of the traffic light at the corner of Bridge and Clinton Streets. Council tabled the request until more information is received.

Council also:

Signed a contract for sewer work on May Street with W.A. Porter Co., totaling $32,714.

Adopted the Charlevoix Municipal Airport rules and regulations.

Agreed to meet with representatives of Williams and Works, planning consultants, to discuss the proposed annexation of Charlevoix Township.

Agreed to send Fochtman, Jim Taylor and Jack Mol to the Region 8 Michigan Municipal League meeting May 15 in Traverse City.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Birdsall of Boyne City are the proud parents of Charlevoix County's newest twins, Joanna Collette and Judith Coleen, born last week in Charlevoix Hospital. Both babies were big, weighing in at 9 pounds, 11 ounces; and 8 pounds, 11 ounces. Parents are both small, but large children run in the family. The Birdsalls have four other children, three girls (ages 9, 6 and 3) and one boy, aged 5.

Are you this girl?

The Charlevoix Courier is looking for a "special girl".

She is personable, intelligent and enjoys meeting people, and can type.

The woman selected will be taught the "basics" of the newspaper business. She will be responsible for running the Courier office and double as a writer.

The girl we are looking for will receive top wages, plus many fringe benefits. If you qualify, call Fiske Martin, Courier Editor, at 547-6558, for a confidential interview.

LANSING--Members of the Charlevoix High School Senior Class conducted their first annual state government field trip to Lansing recently. State Senator Thomas F. Schweigert (R-Petoskey) front row left, and Rep. Robert Davis (R-St. Ignace) front row right hosted the group. Informal discussions with their legislators on the mechanics of the legislative process, visits to the Senate and House of Representatives and other Capitol locations enabled the study group to obtain a better insight into their textbook and class projects in state government. Touring with the group were Max Novak, instructor; Mrs. Dale Boss, Dale Boss, treasurer, Board of Education; Jerrald H. Redeker, member Board of Education, Mrs. J.H. Redeker and Mrs. Melvin L. Plumb, Mrs. Robert Anderson, Dr. Robert Anderson; Mrs. George Lusk and Mrs. Barry Wood.

Locals

Linda Curtis has returned from a visit with her friends in Memphis, Tenn.

Charles Pease and Randy Penn planned to leave Wednesday for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where they will visit briefly and return home later this month with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Pease who have spent the winter there. The Irving Drosts who were there with them will also return home by May 1.

Drum Lodge anniversary

The 30th anniversary of the Indian Drum Lodge of the Order of the Arrow will be climaxed when members of the Lodge serve as hosts to the Area 7-J Conclave at Camp Greilick on June 6-7-8, announced Harold Brown of Traverse City, Lodge Lay Advisor.

The conclave, conducted annually at the camps of the seven Boy Scout Councils of Western and Northern Michigan, will bring together representatives of the best in Scout camping. To become a member of the Order of the Arrow, a Scout must be elected on the basis of his leadership in the field of camping and camp promotion.

Selection of Camp Greilick was made possible by the continually improving facilities provided by the many friends of Scouting throughout the 18 counties of the Scenic Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, Concluded Brown.

The program of the conclave was drafted at a planning meeting held at Alma College of February 22nd.

Miss Coleman engaged

Mrs. S.E. Coleman, of 102 East Hurlbut Street announces the engagement of her daughter, Martha Elizabeth, to Gary Edward Stilwell, son of Mrs. Sheila Stilwell, and Mr. J.C. Stilwell, both of Mackinaw City. Miss Coleman is also the daughter of the late S.E. Coleman. Miss Coleman graduated from North Central Michigan College and is presently a senior at Western Michigan Michigan University, Kalamazoo. Stilwell attended North Central and Wayne State University. He is a veteran of the 82nd Airborne Division and is currently operating his own business in Mackinaw City. A May 24 wedding is planned.

Concert Association membership campaign

The Northern Michigan Concert Association is prepared to launch its annual membership campaign May 5 through 10. This marks the twenty-third season that the association has brought concerts to this area.

Its membership covers 20 communities in this area. About half of the nearly 125 workers are in Petoskey, and each other community has its own chairman and workers. The campaign co-chairmen are Mrs. Allan McCune and Mrs. William Todd of Petoskey.

The campaign will begin with a kick-off dinner at 6:30 p.m. at the Perry-Davis Hotel in Petoskey, which all workers and board members attend. The first order of business in the campaign week is to see that all former members have a chance to renew their memberships. Then new members may join, and everyone is invited to participate.

Last year's campaign ended with a complete sell-out of the auditorium of the Junior High School in Petoskey, where all concerts are presented. Workers are confident that the same situation will occur this year. A successful campaign assures members that the world's finest artists can be cooked for the series of four concerts.

This year, the association's selection committee has been fortunate enough to be able to secure three "hold" attractions to be announced at this time. First is The Canadian Opera Company, which will present Rossini's Barber of Seville in English. They bring with them a 16-piece orchestra, their own ingenious sets and beautiful costumes. This opera company is assisted by the Canadian government in its financing, and this fact has enabled it to move through about 10 years of sold-out tours.

Their repertory consists of about eight operas they can mount and tour. The presently booked "Barber" is an entirely new production.

Secondly, the Association will present The Lee Evans Trio. Pop goes the music in this attraction! Pianist Lee Evans, masterfully supported by bass and percussion is equally at home in the realm of popular classics or the world of classic pops.

Evans uses new and different versions of the popular standards by Cole Porter, George Gershwin, and Irving Berlin. Good pop music with no flimsy tricks, recognizable melodies with a compelling rhythmic beat, familiar tunes treated in a new way--these are the hallmarks of the Lee Evans Trio. The past success and bright future of Lee Evans and his Trio attest to the unmistakable fact that fine "pop" music which makes people sit up and listen, and which brings them back again and again, will always be in demand.

The third "hold" has just recently been secured on David Bar-Illan, the famous Israeli pianist. His debut was made with the New York Philharmonic in January, 1960, and it won the unanimous praise from the New York press. To quote one critic, "He has thorough technical mastery and polish, constant musical tone, and sensitive communication of mood." He has appeared with 17 major orchestras in the United States, and with many leading European orchestras. He records for RCA, and is an artist who had generously offered his services to entertain the soldiers in Israel during the harrowing summer of 1967. His is a mercurial and sensitive personality, who lives to share his love of music with others. Away from the keyboard, Bar-Illan is an avid student of archaeology and ancient history.

Attendance at all concerts is by membership card only. No single admissions are ever sold.

Christmas Seal campaign over

With the official closing of the 1968 Christmas Seal Campaign on March 31, Michigan recorded a sizeable campaign total of $1,642,920. This represents a 5.7 percent increase over the 1967 campaign which is an increase of $89,084.

Winthrop N. Davey, M.D., president of Michigan Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, state Christmas Seal agency, and professor of internal medicine at the University of Michigan Medical School, Ann Arbor, expressed sincere appreciation on behalf of all the state's TB-RD associations to the citizens of Michigan who contributed so generously to the campaign. Contributions support the many projects and activities of the associations in the fight against tuberculosis and the many other respiratory diseases.

Funds contributed to Christmas Seals will be used in smoking education in schools; smoking withdrawal clinics; breathing exercise classes for persons with asthma, emphysema and other breathing difficulties; air pollution programs; tuberculin skin testing and chest X-ray promotion.

In addition funds support professional education about respiratory diseases for physicians, nurses and other para-medical personnel; research being conducted at Michigan's three leading universities; and many other important programs.

Recipe of week

With Michigan producing 99.9 percent of the navy beans grown in our nation, we asked some of the growers' wives if they had any secrets or nuances they followed in cooking beans for a salad. The answers varied but the most common was, when boiling a pound of navies that will be used for any variety of salad, add nothing more than a heaping teaspoon of plain sugar to the water. Cook them till tender, drain and cool.

That done, how about this for a real cool it super salad: Quarter, then slice and break up 1 large purple onion. Put in a bowl with 2 crushed garlic cloves, covering liberally with olive oil or your favorite salad oil. Let this soak for about an hour. Then take 3 cups of boiled beans and add to the onion mixture with a 7 ounce can of tuna, broken up, and a half cup of green scallion tops cut into 1/4 inch lengths. Sprinkle with 3 teaspoons of wine vinegar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and either chopped or dried parsley. Mix thoroughly and marinate for at least two hours, turning ingredients occasionally. Serves four.

C OF C MEETING

The Chamber of Commerce supper and business meeting held Tuesday evening at the American Legion Hall was very successful and encouraging to all those who are working so hard to improve our village.

A delicious dinner prepared and served by the American Legion Auxiliary was served at 7 p.m. with Rev. H. Diller of the Wesleyan Church leading in prayer. There were around 110 guests who enjoyed the meal, coming from here as well as Charlevoix, East Jordan and Central Lake.

Master of ceremonies Bud Chellis, introduced Mr. Burke of Escanaba, who is Northern Area representative for natural gas. This interesting possibility for gas here in the future was encouraging.

Chellis then acknowledged the following business places, which have been improved or started this past year: New trailer development for Ellsworth on the east side of the lake by Bill Stevens and Ron Donaldson; new meat packing owner, Wayne Daining; Beauty Shop by Barbara Jansen; Miniature Golf development to be in operation by May 30 by Jerroll Drenth; new manager of the Sunoco Gas Station, Bob Vollmer; remodeled stores, John's Health Center and Farmers Exchange, also the inside and outside remodeling of the Charlevoix County State Bank Branch Office Building. The large block building built by J.C. Smith and sons of St. Louis, Mich., which is used as a garage to store and service trucks for hauling shale, and bulldozers and other equipment, and a small building which is a weigh station.

Chellis reported that this year, an electronic gear plant, 80 x 100, will be built at the north end of town by Glen Mudge, a former teacher at Wayne University who lives west of the Atwood Reformed Church. Also, Morry Foster of the Charlevoix County State Bank said plans were being made for a full time bank service for our village.

Elmer Road, Chamber President, gave his report on what was done the past year, and the audience was thrilled with the progress Ellsworth has made. He also remarked on what should be done in the future and reminded us again, that it takes everyone working together to accomplish this.

Election ballots were passed to elect 3 members to fill the vacancies of Willard Vander Ark, Bill Mulia and Mrs. Ron Ritsema, whose terms expired this year.

Elected were Mrs. Wayne Daining and John Best. Other members are Elmer Rood, Harold Jansen, Harm Sitzema, Roy Rowe, Bud Chellis and Mrs. Chester Farrell.

Willard Vander Ark gave the treasurer's report, with a balance on hand of approximately $325. First plans this year are to buy the property for the factory and a cement floor for the shelter in the village park. A membership drive will soon be held with fees of $20 for business places and $5 for individuals.

Rood, whose 80th birthday was April 29, is the "go-go man" for the C of C and his sincerent desire is for his home town to be a good and pleasant place to live.

Mrs. Henry Ruis, teacher vice president, took charge of the P.T.A. meeting at the Ellsworth Community School Tuesday evening. The voting of officers for next year was the main point of business. Mr. Cook, Peter Vander Ark and John Burns were appointed as tellers. Elected were Peter John Drenth as President; Robert Drenth as father vice president; Mrs. Max Bolser, mother vice president; Mrs. Henry Ruis, teacher, vice president; Mrs. Harold Heeres, Secretary; and Mrs. George Jake Drenth, Treasurer.

Boy Scouts, Keith Heeres and Jay Potter showed the new flag, recently purchased by the P.T.A. for the school. The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was given by the audience at the opening of the meeting. Also at this meeting, a style show was given by the 9th grade girls with Mrs. Thompson of Home Ec in charge. Patty Drenth and Nannette Vander Ark were the narrators. A fine display, which the boys made in shop were shown with Mr. Cook, as teacher.

Mrs. Grant Hastings, program chairman, announced, Parker Seiler of East Jordan, will be the special speaker at the annual P.T.A. Banquet held at the meeting, May 20.

Member of a prominent Chicago family, she was a granddaughter to the late John Edwin Scott, a founder of Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and was interested in various Chicago charitable activities, including the Visiting Nurse association and the American Cancer society.

In addition to her husband, she leaves four children, Scott Keep, Mrs. Lindsay Keep Hess of Dayton, Mrs. Alice Carlson of Denver, and Mrs. Sandra Keep Notz; and three grandchildren. Scott and Mrs. Bess and her daughter, Jennifer, were in the automobile with Mrs. Fitzmorris, but were not injured seriously.

She is survived by a sister and one brother.

He was born March 16, 1888 at Manistee and came to Charlevoix in 1905.

On February 19, 1913 he married the former Ella Matchett who preceeded him in death in February, 1956.

There will also be a Work Bee that same day to clean the yard at the church.

It has been a wet rainy Sunday, just what everything needed. The grass is really growing as well as the spring bulbs and other perennials; even the tree buds are swelling. It has also been wonderful for lake fishing. Some nice Rainbow Trout have been caught this weekend, but the opening of the Brook Trout season this Saturday was a disappointment to all who tried their luck at that spring sport.

The supper at the church Saturday evening was a wonderful success. They had 140 who came to enjoy the menu. We surely have some good men cooks in our community who really deserve much credit for their fine work, and they wash the dishes also, and leave everything spotless. Now what more could we ladies ask for?

We have received word that Mrs. S.E. Chamberlin, one of our summer Sequanota friends, has had a coronary thrombosis and is under intensive care. Her address is 55 South Gore, Webster Groves, Mo. 62119. She will appreciate hearing from her local friends.

Old Manistee Indian station doomed to inevitable failure

In the two short years of its existence from 1837 to 1839, the aborted Indian station at Manistee provided a microcosm of the white man's inability to deal fairly and competently with the Indian.

That's a conclusion of Dr. George Blackburn, a Central Michigan University history professor whose article on the Manistee Indian station appears in the spring issue of "Michigan History," a quarterly publication of the Michigan Historical Commission.

The station, created by the Treaty of Washington of 1836, was doomed to failure even before it was established, Blackburn says. And the evidence he cites illustrates that the entire project was a series of errors, beginning with devastating eleventh - hour changes in the treaty and continuing through site selection and surveying of the 70,000 acre reservation, construction of basic buildings, and personnel problems among the white governmental employees.

Historical documents tracing the failure of the station, Blackburn claims, are rare examples of official, white records that "clearly demonstrate that the government failed to deal fairly with the Indians."

Usually, he points out, "the history of Indian-white relations has been written almost entirely by whites, and the sources have been largely white also. Therefore, it is no wonder that an Indian can claim that the full story of white injustice remains to be related."

The documents studied by Blackburn in the Clarke Historical Library at Central Michigan University provide ample evidence of the white man's failure to succeed with the Manistee Indian station.

The treaty resulting in the station originally promised that the government would furnish agricultural supplies and equipment and hire teachers, farmers, blacksmiths and interpreters to aid the Indians. The Indians were also granted several reservations in northern Michigan.

"These were to be permanent," Blackburn says, "and there the natives would be instructed in various branches of learning and introduced to the mysteries of agriculture."

The treaty was amended by the U.S. Senate, however, to state that the reservations were to be granted to the Indians for five years rather than in perpetuity.

"Within this brief period, however, it would obviously be impossible to induce the Indians to settle on the reservations, clear the land and practice agriculture," Blackburn claims, adding that the Bureau of Indian Affairs was aware of this shortcoming.

The reservation was foredoomed to failure for another important reason, according to Blackburn. Few Indians lived there and the region had always been unattractive to them.

Despite this, the government plunged ahead. Henry Schoolcraft, acting superintendent of Indian Affairs in Michigan, recruited Lucius Garey, a "plain, no-nonsense, competent" Vermonter, as government farmer and agent in charge.

Motivated largely by altruistic and religious motives to improve the lot of the Indian, Garey and his wife and two children took charge of establishing a station. Joining them were Benjamin Read, also a Vermonter, as government carpenter, Chester Buck as blacksmith, an assistant blacksmith and an interpreter.

Personnel problems developed immediately.

"The quality of Read's work did not measure up to his credentials," according to Blackburn. "His downfall was the attempted construction of Garey's house. Not only did the work proceed very slowly, but the roof caved in."

Read was quickly dismissed.

Blackburn's research indicates that Buck was competent, but had other problems. By the summer of 1838, Garey was accusing him of running afoul of an old problem in the Indian service -- taking pay from the natives.

Because of this, Schoolcraft promptly dismissed Buck, but reinstated him when the blacksmith explained that his error was a result of misunderstanding of the regulations.

"Eventually Buck and Garey became bitter enemies," according to Blackburn's article, and the blacksmith once "told the Garey family that they 'had tried to injure him and all he wanted was to injure them.' "

Even surveying the boundaries of the reserve proved to be a frustration. The Indians had expressed a desire to have the reservation run from points two and a half miles north and south of the mouth of the Manistee River straight east to include the authorized 70,000 acres of the reserve.

The government agreed to the proposal and hired a surveyor to begin delimiting the reserve. Soon after he began, however, the government decided that the survey would be done by the Surveyor General's office and the private surveyor was directed to suspend his activities.

"The false start and stop and confusion in what should have been a simple task was typical of events at the Manistee station," says Blackburn.

Other petty differences of opinion were evident.

"As if there were not enough problems, Garey and Buck could not agree on the valuation of a government cow which Buck butchered in the fall of 1837. When the station closed two years after the demise of the animal, Garey argued that its value was from $30-$35, while Buck insisted it was not worth more than $20. Schoolcraft, who presumably had never seen the beast, had to make the valuation; he decided $25 was a fair price," Blackburn writes.

The Indians themselves presented difficulties in the establishment of the station. The key problem was in getting them to live on the reserve.

At one time, Blackburn's research shows, not a single Indian was in residence and never did the reserve contain more than 44 permanent residents.

Blackburn cites several reasons to explain the failure of the Indians to settle on the Manistee reservation.

"Never had it been the site of an important Indian settlement. Its stipulated five-year term of existence provided scant incentive to settle there. Since the frontier had advanced no farther than the Grand River, the Indians living in the north were under no pressure from white settlers to move. On the other hand, the Grand River Indians wished to purchase land south of Grand Rapids and did so."

The Indians who did move to the reservation were reluctant to engage in farming and Garey apparently was too preoccupied with his other problems to give them proper instruction in agriculture.

The agent once reported that "the prospects of making good farmers of them (are) rather discouraging."

Garey also noted that liquor was one of his chief problems, and once reported that a man from Muskegon had spent a week at Manistee selling whiskey and robbing the Indians "of all he could get."

Mrs. Carey bitterly declared that it was impossible to get them to work while the traders were continually furnishing them liquor. "There had been barrels of it carried" to the reserve, she related.

These and other difficulties finally led Schoolcraft to order on May 15, 1839, that the station be closed. "The result of two years efforts at the Manistee," wrote the superintendent, "has convinced me, that the Indians cannot be induced to come in, and settle at the point in sufficient numbers, to justify the expense of keeping the mechanics and farmers at that point."

Blackburn concludes that "the Manistee station was foredoomed to failure. The five-year provision for the reserve, the disinclination of the Indians to practice agriculture, the bitter quarreling and the incompetence of reserve officials, and the trade in liquor made the establishment of a thriving agriculture settlement impossible."

(Blackburn's article, entitled "Foredoomed to Failure: The Manistee Indian Station," is scheduled to appear in mid-April. Blackburn has been a member of the Central Michigan University history faculty since 1959. He holds the A.B. degree from State Teachers College, Albany, N. Y., and the M.A. and Ph.D. from Indiana University.)

The skaters' what?

Ever since I got caught in that mob of enthusiastic roller skaters last Thanksgiving weekend when skating started, I had been dying to try the sport. It looked so easy and like so much fun, but let's face it, I hadn't been on roller skates in 20 years and at that time they were of the sidewalk variety. This was real high powered roller rink stuff at the elementary school gym.

Well, for the first week or two I knew that I shouldn't try to learn, for the skates were in such demand that one thing that Del Terrill didn't need was an adult beginner. He was having enough trouble picking up the five-year-olds.

I promised myself that as soon as the novelty wore off I'd go down alone some quiet evening and try it out.

Well, as things go it didn't happened that way. The night that I determined to recapture my youth roller skating was the same night that I had a whole car full of children; my own and neighbors.

Children! They acted like high powered spectators in the Roman colosseum encouraging the martyrs to fight the lions.

"Go on Mrs. Begrow, you won't hurt yourself."

Action and Reaction

"If you can ski you can skate."

"Keep your feet close to the floor and just glide."

"There's nothing to it. Watch me!"

"Lots of old ladies skate."

That last remark did it. I started out with a brave look fastened on my face, but fear gripped my feet. After all, when an old lady falls it's quite a fall and doesn't pass unnoticed.

Warily, I started skating with tiny steps and arms balancing like a tightrope walker. Anyone could see that I was prepared for the worst, but the worst never happened. The first couple of times around the rink were touch and go, as I tried to recall how to do such simple things as stop.

But soon I was skating easily and having the time of my life, much to the surprise of my cheering squad and to the surprise of myself as well. All of these things that I had been saying about roller skating really were true.

Skating is a real bargain, for it costs only thirty-five cents to rent the skates and to skate. The rink is open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday and at special times for private groups. Last Monday night, 128 children skated with the Baptist youth group.

So if you want to fill in with a good sport between skiing and boating you'd do well to don some skates and swirl around to the skaters' waltz. Since the bond issue didn't pass last month it might be your last chance for quite a while.

Library Notes

It's spring clean-up time, and the man of the house and the boy of the house are preparing for the jobs and tasks ahead. One Library patron took a book from the Library last week, which helped him repair his roof. With this in mind, the following list of books is presented with the hope that they will prove useful to other patrons.

How to Build Your Cabin or Modern Vacation Home, by Harry Walton offers specific directions and detailed drawings on the subject. There is a chapter on a simple pole cabin and carport. Another chapter on building the true log cabin. Others chapters give instructions for building porches and outside walls, fireplaces, chimneys and interiors.

How to use Hand and Power Tools by George Daniels is a complete guide with over 320 photos, drawings and diagrams. Practical advice on tool selection, maintenance and safety is included.

Practical Home Repairs and Improvements published by Popular Science Publishing Co., deals with just about everything from sagging floors to painting a ceiling. There is a chapter on manual training for housewives. Another chapter on washing windows inside and out. Other chapters deal with how to keep leather from tearing, how to tile a floor and how to clean a furnace with a vacuum cleaner. Numerous pictures accompany the instructions.

Kitchens by Virginia Hart Wheeler is a definitive book by one of the top authorities in the kitchen planning field. The book is illustrated with drawings by Helen Schiava and included a photofolio of noteworthy kitchens. There are wonderful ideas for those who yearn to choose, plan, equip or decorate a kitchen.

How to Build Walls-Walks-Patio Floors is a Sunset Book filled with valuable instructions and information on bricks, adobe blocks, poured concrete, retaining walls, patio floors, flagstones and pebble mosaic. In general, most of the materials and projects described can be handled by an amateur who has no more than the usual number of thumbs, although a few of the projects do call for a high degree of craftsmanship or special and expensive equipment.

For the boys, we suggest "It's Easy To Fix Your Bike by John McFarlane. It is almost entirely pictorial with detailed photographs to describe every phase of bike repair from the saddle and handlebars to the spokes and rims.

Furniture Boys Like to Build by Richard Shaver was written especially for boys who are capable of producing really fine examples of furniture. End tables, console tables, sewing cabinets, china cabinets, gate-leg table, even a four-poster bed are discussed in detail with handsome photographs showing the finished results.

Of special interest to all youngsters is the new How-To-Do-It Encyclopedia published by Mechanix Illustrated. There are 16 volumens each dealing with various phases of building, repair, hobbies, etc. Volumne 1, for example, deals with automobiles, barbecues, basements and boating. Volume 16 deals with walls, water skiing, weeds and wiring. There is something here for everyone. It is a most useful and comprehensive set.

NHS sets induction

By Jeanne Mutz

The National Honor Society will induct new members tonight in a special ceremony at the high school. The students who qualified were announced at an assembly held in the gym last Wednesday.

Paul Fiedorek, president of the local National Honor Society, conducted the assembly and announced the new members. They are: Elizabeth Davison, Rebecca Hiller and Linda Wilson, seniors; Sharon Boss, Stewart Coleman, Ralph Corwin, Robert Crain, Mary Dhaseller, Lynn Fiedorek, Linda Gill, Rebecca Hansen, Ellandah Lambert, Kraag Lieberman, Carl Novak, Charles Novak, Gail Potter, Elizabeth Wimmer and Tricia Young, juniors; elected honorary members were exchange students Ineke Romeyn, Holland, Henrik Christiansen, Denmark, and Menchu Tantoco, Philippines.

To be a possible candidate, a student must be either a junior or senior enrolled in our high school for at least 1 semester and have an accumulated B or better average since ninth grade. Final admittance is based upon leadership, character and service.

Each student is rated by the faculty on the basis of these standards. The faculty only rates those students he is familiar with.

The Charlevoix high school National Honor Society was organized in April, 1958. The society is advised by Mrs. Marion Kohn.

Retired profs meet May 8

Great Pines Chapter of Michigan Retired Teachers Association will meet at 2 p.m. Thursday, May 8, in the community room of the new State Bank and Trust Company building on the corner of Mitchell and Petoskey Streets in Petoskey.

The nominating committee will report, and election of officers will be held. A report will be presented of the annual meeting of Michigan Retired Teachers Association held in Mount Pleasant.

Youngsters opened the trout season with some good catches at Hal Forbrig's pond. Here, several fishermen relax, waiting for a bite.

Pool is Kiwanis subject

Charlevoix's Kiwanis Club hosted area businessmen and owners of local industries Monday to discuss the swimming pool project.

The result was a decision to actively determine public opinion and support.

Ralph Hamilton and Don Anders moderated the discussion, which centered largely around the $100,000 price tag placed on the pool and recreation center. According to Anders, operation of the facility would cost $62 per-open-day.

Raymond O. Carr, high school principal, said enthusiasm among Charlevoix students was high. "When told of the possibility of such a facility, the student council asked what way they could help," Carr said.

Len Garrett added that among the many benefits would be the advent of competitive swimming locally. "Swimming in the U.S. is at an all-time high, but we have no facilities here," Garrett said.

Luedke names BB committee

Big Brothers of Charlevoix County held its second meeting recently at the Top of Michigan Building, Boyne City.

A screening committee was appointed by Lt. Don Luedke, president, for Boyne City. Named were George Lasater, John Kujawski and Byron Neidhamer. Lt. Luedke also appointed a publicity and recruiting committee naming Robert Simons of Boyne City and Bob Elliott from Charlevoix.

The group thanked the Kiwanis Club for a donation. This was achieved through Edward Shanahan, a Kiwanis Club Member, who has also agreed to join the organization, and was appointed to serve on the finance committee for Charlevoix.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, May 6, in East Jordan.

Norwood Woman's Society of Christian Service is sponsoring its annual spring luncheon at the Friendship Hall today, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Tiger Tales

Detroit is the only city in the American League whose "membership" is older than the league itself.

It alone moved from the old Western League into the American as Ban Johnson renamed the circuit and eventually forced major league recognition in 1901.

Baseball in Detroit, however, received its baptism in the National League, a fact often overlooked. In existence from 1876, the National had a team in Detroit from 1881 through 1888. Games were at Recreation, where Brush and Brady streets now cross, and the club was operated out of the mayor's office since Hizzoner W.G. Thompson was president of the team.

While never above fourth in its first five National League finishes, the Detroit entry boasted of some brilliant individuals, including Outfielder Ned Hanlon and Charley Bennett, second only to Buck Ewing among catchers of his day and the first to wear a chest protector outside his uniform.

After the 1885 season, the "Detroits" startled the baseball world by buying from Buffalo the "Big Four" infield of Dan Brouthers, Hardy Richardson, Jack Rowe and Deacon White. The purchase for $8,000--big money at the time -- enabled Detroit to advance to second in 1886 and then capture the 1887 National League pennant.

Frederick K. Stearns, wholesale druggist and president of the team, followed with a challenge to the St. Louis Browns, champions of the American Association, and Detroit won a 15-game "World Series" which wandered all over the country and threatened to never end.

Despite that success, finances were shaky and Detroit dropped out of the National League following a fifth-place finish in 1888, the franchise going to Cleveland.

Detroit next bobbed up in the International Association to win a pennant in 1889 and finished second in 1890. But the fans did not warm up to minor league play and the city was out of baseball, except for 29 games in the Northwestern League, from 1891 to 1894 when Ban Johnson awarded it a spot in the Western League, which he was reorganizing.

It was a significant move, because in 1900 Johnson changed the name to the American League and the following season gained major league recognition for the circuit.

Playing at a park on the eastern city limits at Helen and Lafayette (then Champlain), the Detroit team never finished higher than third in the Western League but the era is of great historical interest.

It was in 1896 that the Detroit club came to be known as "Tigers." Philip J. Reid, city editor of a Detroit newspaper, is believed to have first used the nickname in print but the man who took credit was George Stallings, Detroit manager who later piloted the miracle Boston Braves of 1914.

"I put striped stockings on the players, black and sort of yellowish brown," Stallings recalled. "I didn't think of their resemblance to a tiger's stripes at the time but the fans and some of our early writers noticed it and soon started calling the club the Tigers and they have been the Tigers ever since."

After that season, Stallings was promoted to a job in the National League but he returned in 1899 and was at the helm when Detroit and the rest of the new American League challenged the National League on major league footing in 1901.

Owner of the franchise was James D. Burns, hotel man and sheriff of Wayne County. The Tigers made a respectable third - place showing with a 74-61 record in their American League debut but Stallings had so much trouble with both Burns and Johnson that he was forced out of the organization at the close of the campaign and Burns sold out soon after.

The transition from the Western League to the American League also was marked by a move to the Tigers' present playing site at Michigan and Trumbull although the facilities were far from those of today. Originally the Haymarket and later Woodbridge Grove, the field once was paved with cobblestones. For baseball, a layer of dirt was put down, but fielders still had to be alert for wild-hopping grounders.

Eventually it was named Bennett Park in honor of the catcher whose career was cut short at its peak when he lost a foot and a leg under the wheels of a train. At the time, the wooden stands held barely 8,500 -- not including those in "wildcat" bleachers across the fence.

Bennett Park was used only for week - day games until 1910. Because of a Michigan blue law strictly enforced in Detroit, Sunday contests were at Burns Park on Dix in Springwell Township beyond the western city limits.

Successor to Burns as Tiger owner in 1902 was Samuel F. Angus, an insurance man who brought along a young bookkeeper, Frank J. Navin, whose name was to mean much in Tiger history. A poker-faced native of Adrian, Mich., who studied law as well as business, Navin grew in stature and wealth until he owned half the club, became the president and was recognized as the No. 1 power in the American League after Johnson's retirement in 1927.

The 1902 Tigers, managed by Frank Dwyer, former pitcher - outfielder - umpire, plunged to seventh and there were rumors the franchise might be moved. But better days were coming as Edward Grant Barrow, then 35 and due to become one of the game's great figures, was hired to succeed Dwyer in 1903. Added at the same time were two players of real note in Tiger history, Pitcher "Wild Bill" Donovan and Outfielder "Wahoo Sam" Crawford.

Barrow lifted the Tigers to fifth but at the end of his first year as manager there was another change in owners. Angus offered the club to Navin and Barrow, if they could find a backer. Navin interested William Clymer Yawkey, lumber and ore millionaire, but he died before negotiations were complete. Navin then turned to Yawkey's son, William Hoover Yawkey, uncle and foster father of Tom Yawkey, present owner of the Boston Red Sox.

Only 28 but jingling a $10,000,000 inheritance in his pocket, young Yawkey paid $50,000 for the Tigers. Angus kept a small interest which Yawkey later purchased while Navin received $5,000 and Barrow $2,500 in stock for arranging the deal. A year later, Barrow sold out to Yawkey for $1,400 but Navin parlayed his holdings into wealth and power.

Although the Tigers dropped back to seventh in 1904, Barrow succeeded in buying three players who were to pave the way for the Tigers' first real success---Shortstop Charley O'Leary, Third Baseman Bill Coughlin and Outfielder Matty McIntyre. The deals were not without their price for Barrow, however. Frequent clashes with Navin over spending Yawkey's money led to the manager's resignation and he was succeeded by Bobby Lowe the final few weeks of the unhappy campaign.

Bill Armour, one of the last managers in the majors to wear a mustache, directed the Tigers to third place in 1905, a year marked by the initial appearance of Tyrus Raymond Cobb in a Tiger uniform. Only 18 but destined to become the greatest all-around player the game has ever known, Cobb was bought from Augusta of the Sally League for $700, plus an additional $50 for immediate delivery.

He played the first of his 3,033 major league games on Aug. 30, 1905 and when his brilliant career ended in 1928, he had collected more records than any player in history.

Armour, who had difficulty recognized Cobb's latent talent, was fired after the Tigers finished sixth in 1906 and that brought on the scene the most colorful manager the club ever had. He was Hugh A. Jennings, red - haired, freckle-faced infielder of the old Baltimore Orioles. A keen judge of talent, his trade-mark was a resounding "Ee-jah" yell of encouragement from the coaching box, where he was accustomed to chew grass and hop around on one foot.

With Jennings' arrival in 1907, the Tigers immediately perked up - winning three straight pennants to launch Jennings on a 14-year managerial career which landed him in the Hall of Fame.

Jennings' acquisition illustrates the acumen of Navin. Although then 36, Jennings still was an active player and Baltimore had a $5,000 price tag on him. Navin balked at the price but discovered Jennings could be drafted and that is how he was obtained--for a paltry $1,000.

Cobb celebrated Jennings' arrival in Detroit by winning the first of his 12 American League batting titles in 1907 with a mark of .350. Crawford rapped 34 doubles and 17 triples with the dead ball of that day, while Donovan and Ed Killian each won 25 games and George Mullin contributed 20 more victories. With that, the Tigers took the pennant on a 92-48 record, beating out Philadelphia by 1 1/2 games.

Detroit was jubilant over the Tigers' success but there were a couple of sour notes, too. The club drew a discouraging total of 297,079 fans that season, then lost the World Series to the Chicago Clubs. An opening day 3-3 tie was followed by four straight Chicago triumphs.

Discouraged by the lack of attendance, Yawkey began to lose interest and in the winter of 1907 sold Navin enough stock to give him a half-interest. The price was $40,000 and Yawkey loaned his employe the down payment. Navin became president and held the post until his death 28 years later.

In the Open

Michigan has a state fish. It is a handsome fish, the brook trout, salvelinus fontinalis, also known as speckled trout, and in waters of the Great Lakes, called a square tail to distinguish it from the lake trout, which has a forked tail.

If the state fish had been decided by popular vote it is doubtful that the brook trout would have been elected. It it not a common fish in most Michigan waters. Originally it was found only in streams flowing into the northern end of Lake Michigan. Then it was introduced in spring-fed streams in all the counties where it was subjected to heavy rod pressure until worthwhile trout fishing is now found only in the northern part of the state.

A free - for - all popularity contest would find bass, pike, perch, and maybe bluegill, giving brook trout strong competition, simply because more Michigan people are familiar with these fish. Then there are regional favorites to be considered. In towns where the annual smelt run is a big event, it is possible that these silver delicacies would lead the balloting.

However, in the segment of Michigan with the heaviest concentration of people it would be safe to bet on the wall-eye or pickerel to top the return. Pike-perch is a better name for this fish. The books tell us it is a true perch. Vitreum is part of its Latin name, referring to its glassy eye, which helps it see at night. The wall - eye is a night prowler and when the spring run is on between Lakes Huron and Erie, earnest fishermen will be trotting long after dark.

Long before outboard motors came into use, a skinny kid, craving the approval of year - around residents of the St. Clair Flats, found himself pulling the oars of a heave skiff all night while a hefty passenger operated a trolling rig. Chugging was also an approved method of taking wall - eyes. The chugging rig was supposed to have originated with the Indians. It consisted of a polished bar of lead, six inches long, an inch in diameter, with triple hooks at its lower end. It had to be kept in constant motion, close to the bottom.

Wall - eye might average around a pound and a half, with bonus fish of three and four pounds not unusual. Wall-eye in excess of five pounds are taken now and then from Michigan waters, and it is recorded that in Kentucky, in the good old days, wall-eye were known to exceed 20 pounds.

In Kentucky, by the way, wall-eye were known as "New Light," so named because wall-eye became abundant at the time the countryside was evangelized by a religious cult known as the New Light.

Wall - eye fishermen in southeastern Michigan have learned that wall - eye move upstream to their spawning grounds at the time lilacs come into bloom along the river bank.

If eating quality is taken into consideration, the wall-eye must rate near the top. Too frequently a wall-eye is butchered into filets. It may be superstition, but confirmed fish eaters believe that the process sacrifices a definite amount of flavor.

The late Jim Essery, dean of Ontario guides, could filet wall - eye while building a beach fire. No amount of pleading availed, a wall-eye had to be sliced. Another solid prejudice held by Jim was that northern pike was not for human consumption. Out of the old waters of Lake Kabinakagami, where Jim Essery was on the staff of Watson's Pine Portage Camps, pike is as delectable as any fish that swims. But all pike brought to Jim Essery's boat were destined for sled dog rations.

To fish for wall-eye, quite an outfit is required, including boat with motor. Automation has crept into the sport, and ultra modern trolling is carried on with the aid of a spring turn table, such as were found in old fashioned phonographs. With a machine to haul in the trolling line or wire, an angler needs only to go up and down over likely grounds.

There are now, along St. Clair River, marinas equipped for wall-eye fishing; shanty boats permanently anchored in mid - stream. Tackle and bait are available. A shanty boat even has a stove to lend off the night chill. With a portable radio a city dweller can catch wall-eye, view the stars, lacking none of the luxuries of downtown.

'Rules of the Road' Basic to Safety

In the years since World War II, and particularly in the last ten, there has been a phenomenal increase in the number of pleasure boats on the water and in the number of people taking part in recreational boating.

It would be nice if we could do without regulations, but unfortunately we can't. Basic to safety and common sense on the water are the "rules of the road," advises Evinrude Motors.

The rules of the road are a broad set of federal regulations that set up a "predictability of action." They are not a set of hard and fast rules, but they do give direction for action, particularly where a threat of collision may exist. They have also been used as a standard for legal judgment in the courts.

Here are a few of the basic rules of the road which will make you a better boatman:

HEAD-ON MEETINGS: When motorboats are approaching one another from opposite or nearly opposite directions, each must pass on the port (left) side of the other. Each boat should alter course to starboard (right).

PASSING TO STARBOARD: When the courses of the two boats are so far to starboard (right) of each other so that they are not in a head-on or nearly head-on position, the boats may pass starboard-to-starboard. In narrow channels, however, and a 300-foot channel has been held to be narrow, motorboats are required to keep to the starboard side of the channel, thus passing port-to-port. At night if you see both the red and green running lights of another craft, you are probably in a head-on position.

CROSSING SITUATION: To distinguish a crossing situation, every vessel approaching you from dead ahead to two points abaft (behind) the starboard beam (right hand side) has the right of way. Another way to say it is when two boats are crossing, to prevent risk of a collision, the vessel which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the other's way. The skipper of the "privileged" boat (the boat with the right of way) not only may hold his course, he must. You, as the "burdened" boat, may alter course to starboard so as to pass behind the other vessel, or you may slow, stop, or reverse, whichever is safest. Generally, motorboats yield the right of way to boats under sail alone, because of the motorboat's greater maneuverability. If, at night, you see the green running light of another vessel, but not its red, you have the right of way. If you see only the red, the other has the right of way. If you can see neither light, and you seem to be gaining, you are probably in an overtaking situation.

OVERTAKING SITUATION: Every boat about to be overtaken is a privileged vessel and has the right of way. The passing boat must keep out of the way until passed and clear, even if it means swinging wide to stay well clear. In no case should the boat being passed alter course so as to cross the bow or get in the course of the passing boat. If you are in doubt as to whether you are in a crossing or an overtaken situation, you are required to assume that you are overtaking.

These are some of the basic rules of proper boat handling. They become second nature as a boatman gains knowledge and experience.

Courier Sports

Sports Shorts

We have just submitted ourself to pure torture. . .not that we couldn't have avoided it.

We made the mistake of believing that we would enjoy watching a baseball game on the boob tube. The Tigers were "playing" the Yankees last Sunday afternoon, and channel 8 picked the game up. Now, normally our Sundays are spent watching a REAL sport, hockey.

But, as we only have one CBS outlet on the cable, and the Tigers have commandeered that station, we only were able to catch the last period (plus two minutes of the last second).

When you see a fast-moving game, such as football or hockey, right after viewing baseball, it is easy to see why our former national pastime is rapidly losing its hold on the sports fan.

When we were growing up near San Francisco, we "lived" for baseball. The San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast League were our heroes. We dreamed of taking the field alongside the likes of Albie Pearson, Al Lien, Dario Lodigiani and company.

Then we discovered the Pittsburgh Pirates and Cleveland Indians, and saw baseball at its finest.

We took the route all baseball crazy youngsters do. First, a midget league, followed by Little League, Babe Ruth, Legion and high school ball.

As we progressed, so did football and basketball. Suddenly, watching baseball didn't have the magic it once commanded, but playing still did.

Soon, playing became a bore. At first base or in left field, there just wasn't enough action. The ball was in play so little that it became hard to concentrate on the game.

And, you know what? It turns out we weren't alone. Football replaced baseball as the nation's most popular spectator sport.

Baseball has been knocked by all the writers, but we are not attempting to jump on the bandwagon.

We have the world champions in our front yard, and no other state can make that claim. Yet, we are finding it almost impossible to enjoy a slow, dying game.

It can only be termed tragedy when the most exciting moments at the ballpark turn out to be drinking a cold beer and eating a hot dog.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER

CHAMBER MANAGER

Saturday afternoon, April 26, a young, well mannered, neat appearing lad about 12 years-old came to this office to report one of the large mirrors in the men's room here in this public facility had been badly broken. I thanked this young man for reporting and told him that this mess and much other, even in the ladies' room was first observed early this morning by the custodian and accordingly reported to the officials, who made inspection. Too bad, folks, but a certain element last evening had a wing-ding, so what do they care?

I wish to call to attention that the Michigan Retailers Association made available a little booklet, and on the face of it appears "Attention Teenagers, Shoplifting Is A Crime". We have a few copies available here for those who would like to read this little story.

Two issues developed recently, and it was necessary to call a special meeting of our Board of Directors Tuesday evening, April 22. A quorum was present. The issues had to do with the Waterfront Art Fair and the Lakeside Hobby Craft Show. It was decided to ask two members of the committee of each event to be present at the next regular Board of Directors meeting, Tuesday, May 6, at 7:30 p.m.

The Michigan Amateur Golfer's Association Tournament, which again is to be held here June 25 through June 29 at the Belvedere Club, was discussed. The most direct benefactors of the event be contacted for a contribution to assist the chamber in underwriting $1,000, part of the amount necessary to have the sizable number of dollars to come into Charlevoix, as well as several hundred persons, many of which include it in their vacations here, stay, of course, longer than just the time of the tournament. I agree that is a pretty fair way so far as this $1,000 is concerned. These businesses involved will first be approached by letter.

Many of you realize that there are not too many "natural locations" left in Michigan. There are various efforts made to establish them for public use and not destroyed by commercial ventures. One which seems to be of much concern to many people is the Sleeping Bear Dunes down the west shore from here. Of course, there is opposition and there is considerable effort to restore these 60 odd thousand acres as a natural and to be protected and continue as such. I have a recent communication from one of the U.S. Senators calling the situation to attention, and accordingly it should help somewhat if some of you people having some appreciation for this sort of situation, to write one of your honorables at Washington, or even your State senator and representative. It might be well not to wait too long.

In line with an earlier paragraph, I might add a certain element seems to be getting further kick by removing the letters from the Chamber of Commerce sign on the display out in front of this office. What next? You know these replacements are not donated. They have to be paid for, and the same was as the situation in both the ladies' and the mens' room here in the Harborside Building.

Reference to current "Marine News Publication". There was quite an article on Coho in the lower Lake Huron area. Among other things, it was stated that on Monday, April 14, commercial fishermen lifted 9,000 pounds of coho from lower Lake Huron.

A demonstration, of many fishermen in the Petoskey area recently apparently further stimulated action by the City having to do with the stepped up sports fishery. More recently as many of you have probably read, there was a full size scale program underway expanding their harbor, etc.

It was interesting to learn from a recent contact by Judith Mann, camp director of Charlevoix Brownie Scout Day Camp, out south of town in the vicinity of the Belvedere Country Club. It appears that particular dates, June 9 through June 13 they have quite an affair for the little Brownies. Having had some experience with the younger set before moving here, this idea really has merit. Therefore, you Brownie Mothers or any other interested persons are urged to contact Judy Mann or Barbara Timms if you are not fully acquainted with the situation.

It is reported that Abraham Lincoln once said "You cannot establish sound security on borrowed money."

The perfect gift for any occassion! A family portrait. It's yours FREE, now, with a new or renewal subscription to the COURIER.

In a recent release from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States based at Washington D.C., Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Vice-President of the said Chamber stated "Up lift is good business. The greater our proportion of proud and self reliant citizens, the less relief, the less crime, the more chance will be for lower taxes, and the greater per capita spendable income that means better business."

County buys second boat

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has purchased a Boston Whaler, a 16' 7" boat for marine law enforcement.

A rough-water boat to be used for search and rescue as well as law enforcement, the craft will be placed in the water at Walloon Lake shortly, according to Sheriff Philo Sumner.

This is the second boat now in use in the program. The other is a 16 feet Evinrude Sportsman powered by an Evinrude 90 horsepower outboard motor.

The boats will be operated by Edward Snyder, who is returning as a marine officer, and James Rypkema, who joined the department earlier this year and who will complete special marine training this week.

The program is conducted by the Sheriff's Department in cooperation with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources with the latter paying two-thirds of the cost and the county the remainder.

Revival services at Nazarene Church

The Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Bohannon will conduct revival services at the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene, Maple Street, North Point.

Services will be held nightly May 2 through May 11 at 7 p.m. Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Letters to the editor

Wants info on history

Editor, Courier:

I am interested in old time pictures and history of Charlevoix for my scrapbook.

I would like to obtain a picture of the old roller rink on Round Lake, where we played basketball in the 20's; also, a picture of the boat house on Lake Charlevoix.

Also, I am interested in the history of the old schools in Charlevoix--the white brick one and the red brick one. When I went to school, the grades were in the one on Clinton Street (white), and the high school was in the one on Mason Street (red). But, I have heard that the white school was the high school at one time.

Yours truly,

Who runs your town?

Rudy Petzold, publisher of the Tuscola County Advertiser, dusted off an old column from 1966 when he went on vacation last week.

It was a good column and one which should be must reading for every community. It points to what happens when apathy strikes the citizens of a town. It is a gentle call to service for every person.

"Who runs your town?" was a question recently asked of me by a visitor to our community.

We answered rather flippantly that a lot of people think they're running it but that probably none of them actually are. Our conversation drifted to other subjects and his question was forgotten.

But later, after the visitor had gone, I thought again about his question and realized it was one that deserved more than a flippant response. It was an important question, which deserved a frank and honest answer.

"Who is running your town?"

The question is as old as man himself. It's a question that involves the elements of power and influence. It's a question which has made some towns grow and some towns die. It's a question every community should constantly ask itself and which it should be able to answer proudly and without embarrassment.

Because of some of the unfortunate episodes in our American past, the question today remains tainted with the implication that every community has its "Boss Tweed" who once a week calls together his henchmen in a smoke - filled room and there outlines what he wants to have happen in the next seven days.

It subtly intimates that in every community there is a group "on the inside" that is working for its self-embellishment at the expense of those "on the outside."

DOUBLE STRUCTURE

Although the idealistic American hates to admit it, every community--whether it be the village you live in or the federal union you are a part of--has a double power structure.

On the surface every community has the formal power structure composed of the elected and appointed officials of local government, schools, the business community, and its social world.

But behind this formal power structure there is an informal "behind the scenes" power structure that has a continuing and significant effect on the way the community is run.

When this informal power structure has the true interest of the total community at heart, it enhances and broadens the effectiveness of the formal power structure. But when this "behind the scenes" power structure is dominated by selfish interest groups, jealous antagonists and self-centered "me first" individuals, then a town has problems.

Perhaps an individual citizen cannot change much in his community. But when he bands together with others who believe like he does and have an interest in the same things he does--then he can become an effective force in his community. This is the whole basis of grass roots democracy.

If a town has a "Boss Tweed clique" which has forgotten the best interests of the town--then the rest of the community's citizens have an obligation to counterbalance this over-concentration of power with their action and influence. "Boss Tweeds" develop where other citizens have forgotten their civic responsibility. The proper answer to the question "Who is running your town?" should always be "the people." And remember, everyone one of us is a part of "the people."

Human survival

(The following is a guest editorial from the Ingham County News. The pesticide problem has reached enormous proportion recently, and with the commercial fishing season ready to begin locally, many questions must be answered.)

Will man survive his environment?

Possibly not if we do not heed warnings until the situation becomes critical.

For years scientists have been urging the ban of pesticides but nothing was done. Now that the fishing industry is in question and the individual's health is in danger the cry is finally rising.

Unfortunately, it is too late.

This week the Department of Health Education and Welfare--Food and Drug Administration is supposed to formally adopt 3.5 parts per million as the acceptable level of pesticides in fish.

According to John Scott, fish biologist with the Michigan Natural Resource Department most of the fish particularly chubs and Lake Trout, 25 inches and longer already have a much higher concentration than this, however.

Naturally Lake Michigan is the worst, but even in Lake Superior fatty fish such as salmon have accumulated large amounts of pesticide.

What will happen? Will we be able to eat any fish at all if this 3.5 level goes into effect? How detrimental to our health will the pesticide be?

No one has the answers.

It is known, however, that DDT and other pesticides such as Dieldrin must be banned as even now the average person has from 10 to 12 parts per million DDT stored in his body from many different sources.

Prohibiting the sale of hard chemicals such as DDT, Aldrin, Dieldrin, Heptachlor and Methoxychor would have little economic significance to agriculture since phosphate insectides have taken their place over the last 5 years.

Mulvany points out it is the homeowner who is the culprit. These hard chemicals are used for gardens and mosquito control with heavy amounts sprayed in concentrated metropolitan areas. Much of the chemicals is flushed down storm drains into our waterways.

It is up to us, the homeowners, to insure that legislation is passed to prohibit use of these chemicals and that we stop personally using them in our gardens.

The Charlevoix Courier has made arrangements with the Detroit Tigers to give our readers the "Tiger Tales" column each week. See the opening column on today's sports page.

* * * * *

Speaking of the Tigers, we first became interested in the Detroit ball club while living in Pennsylvania.

Two Tiger players are from our former home area in the Keystone State. Don Wert is the pride of the small town of Quarryville. Don was a standout athlete at Solanco High School in Quarryville, but few people are aware he was actually a better football player in high school than he was a third baseman (he had the old problem of collecting the base hits even then). Wert was the star quarterback of the best team the school ever had. During the off-season, Don works for the Sears store in Lancaster, Pa., and also is involved with the First National Bank of Strasburg.

The other Tiger from our former home is Jim Price, reserve catcher and player representative. Price hails from Hershey, Pa. (home of the renowned chocolate bar).

With these two men on the roster, the Tigers are watched closely in Central Pennsylvania.

The Janesville (Minn.) Argus offered the following comment on schools: "In today's schools, the teachers are afraid of the superintendent, the superintendent is afraid of the Board, the Board is afraid of the parents, the parents are afraid of the kids, and the kids aren't afraid of anyone."

"There's plenty of room at the top, but there's no place to sit down," says The Guttenberg (Iowa) Press.

The Steuben Republican of Angola, Ind. says, "Among the few certain things in this world, no woman is wearing shoes too large for her."

When a youngster drinks a bottle of beer that is illegal to him, when a motorist exceeds the speed limit, when a violator shoots a deer out of season the law stomps on him hard for his affront to the peace and dignity of the community.

But when a group of anti-American conspirators shoot a policeman to death, seriously wound a second and openly declared their intention of opposing the peace, dignity and authority of the people of America, their treason is left essentially unpunished. Instead of action, we see the case clouded in a swirl of questionable court actions and a lot of hot air.

The action of the Detroit circuit judge in the recent case involving anti-American militants is not only disgusting but itself borders on disloyalty to the country whose laws and way of life he has sworn to protect.

Treason is the very lowest crime that a man can be charged with. Treason whether conspired or carried out, is despicable. Traitors, and what else can one call such elements of the society, are deserving of the harshest and most summary of reactions from the law of the nation.

It is high time that the courts of this country begin to remember just what they were established for. Judges who are so misguided in their thinking that they cannot distinguish between honest and fair protest and out-and-out treason defile the dignity of the American court system. They should be hastily removed before their ignorance and their misunderstanding of what America is all about further threatens and endangers the peace, dignity and honor of the people they were elected to serve. (Tuscola County Advertiser)

If it Fitz

There will be more Ikes

Seeing as how I used to wear his jacket, it should be ok if I add a few late words about Dwight Eisenhower.

This country does a magnificent job of burying its super-heroes. The national orgy of mourning is splendidly reported by TV and newspapers. But as a man who winces when brought eyeball to eyeball with another person's grief, I am about all winced out.

The TV camera kept trying to peek through Mamie Eisenhower's black veil. The same way it bored in on Jackie and Ethel Kennedy and Coretta King when they were new widows. I looked, but then I looked away. Finally, I pushed the "off" button.

I don't think Mrs. Eisenhower's tears are that much of my business. Some people like to follow ambulances and sit in the front row at wakes. TV caters to viewers who want a close-up look at how the family "is taking it." To each his own, but not for me, thanks. I kept thinking someone should pull down the shades.

But what I stated to say is that the communication media were obviously ready for Ike's passing. His death was a threat for several weeks and the obituaries were written and ready to print. Old news film was racked and poised. All over the world, big shots had their eulogies rehearsed and mimeographed. Not much was left unsaid. But there were a couple of things. . .

There seemed general agreement that Ike had served as a "father image" for his country. He was Mr. Nice Guy, stern but with a wide smile that crinkled his eyes and forgave his critics their sins. More than anything else, "it was the character of the man," said President Nixon, that made him a beloved leader.

I wouldn't argue with any of that. But so many of the mourners went on to add that Ike was "the last of his kind." Their meaning was clear: No more Mr. Nice Guys. The world is full of hippies and crooked politicians and crime-in-the-streets and Communists and tax loopholes. There'll never be another Father Eisenhower to lead us to victory over our foes and our bad habits.

I don't agree. I think the potential leaders, the saviors, are out there somewhere. Egad, it could even be some young radical wearing a beard and carrying a sign. Or a Peace Corps volunteer in India. This country is producing young men and women who care about the future of the world-all of it. They see through the fuzzy thinking which preaches equality but flinches when black touches white. They smell the phony stench when a politician decries muggings while doing business with the Mafia. They see the hyprocrisy in decrying bloodshed while dropping bombs.

The Ike-like leaders are there, but with no World War II to shine in. They are doing and saying what must be done and must be said. The trouble is, not enough people are listening. Yet. But the stirrer-uppers are mostly young. There is time and I am optimistic: They shall overcome.

The last comment is for Ike's last moments. He died in bed, his heart worn out, at the age of 78. No one shot him. It was nice, for a change, to have a national funeral with no blood dripping.

This country needs more lives like Ike's. Also more deaths.

The issue:

Guess Who?

GUESS WHOOOO???. . . . An anonymous reader from Florida sent along this picture of one of Charlevoix's most prominent citizens, taken in the summer of 1942. Even at this tender age, it was apparent he was "going places". If you said the boy was Mayor William Fochtman, give yourself a star. Bill doesn't know the picture is appearing in the COURIER, so please don't show it to him.

School journalists attend conference

Members of the Charlevoix high school journalism class and annual staff traveled to Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant last Friday to attend an Interscholastic High School Press Conference.

Over 350 high school journalists from 35 schools attended the event. The program opened with a welcome by Dr. Gilbert O. Malenknect, chairman of the Journalism Department at CMU. Dave Miller, news editor of the Bay City Times also spoke to the group. Following this speech, the students formed two groups, one for yearbook and one for new high school newspapers and heard speeches on "How Can We Improve the High School Newspaper?" and "How Can We Improve the High School Yearbook?"

The afternoon session began with a speech by Norris Ingells of the Lansing State Journal entitled, "Reporter with a Camera." This was followed by section meetings on advertising, reporting, layout and make-up of high school newspapers, photography and other topics.

The conference was closed by an assembly and the presentation of awards of excellence. The "Crimson Flash", which is published by the Charlevoix high school journalism staff, was awarded an Excellent rating in its division.

It's Clean-up week in Charlevoix, and Chamber of Commerce Manager Wally Loder joins the effort to keep Charlevoix the Beautiful, beautiful.

Hospital plans open house

Charlevoix Hospital and related health care facilities throughout Michigan will receive public recognition as a part of the celebration of National Hospital Week, May 11 to 17.

Rollie Dudick, new administrator at the hospital, announced that the Hospital Guild will sponsor an open house at the hospital on Sunday.

Area resident are urged to visit the hospital to view many of the services available, including surgery, radiology, pathology, pharmacy, emergency room, inhalation therapy, physical therapy and cardiology.

H. Allan Barth, executive director of the Michigan Hospital Association, noted that the observance and open house in Charlevoix has received added emphasis in a proclamation by Governor William Milliken.

Milliken said, "The people of Charlevoix and the State of Michigan have long demonstrated their interest in the development and improvement of hospital care through their contributions of time, effort and resources."

The Governor continued, "The medical and osteopathic hospitals in Michigan have joined with private and governmental agencies to provide a health care system and much more. Hospitals of Michigan also serve as centers for research and health education as well as offering facilities for the prevention and cure of illness. In addition, the voluntary, nonprofit hospital such as the facility in Charlevoix is a vital example of the noble American tradition of voluntary cooperation toward the common good.

"With the help and cooperation of many others, the Michigan Hospital Association is not only ready to meet the challenges intrinsic in the search for better health care, but is actively developing new methods, new techniques and totally new processes to enable Michigan hospitals, big and small, to realize their manifest responsibilities.

"Therefore, I do hereby proclaim the week of May 11 through 17, as Michigan Hospital Week and salute Michigan hospitals for their continuing pursuit of excellence, their contributions to the health of our citizenry, and their important role in health education and research.

The theme for Michigan Hospital Week this year is "Your Hospital-Pathway to Progress in Community Health."

Hobby show plans final

Plans are complete for the first annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Show slated for Saturday, July 12, at East Park in Charlevoix, according to general chairman, Mrs. Norman Helms.

Several Charlevoix residents have already signified interest in the event and pledged entries both for display and sale purposes. However, the show is open to all qualified hobbyists and entry blanks will be available through the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce office or directly from Mrs. Norman Helms at 507 Meadowlane, Charlevoix.

Due to the exceptional success of the Charlevoix Art Fair in August, which has been held annually for the past decade, the promoters of the Lakeside Hobbycraft Show are confident this offering will fill a special need for those hobbyists who do not qualify under the "art" category.

For those in retirement or semi-retirement from the business world, this show should offer a much needed showcase for stamp collectors, coin collectors, rock hounds as well as those with hand crafted items of interest.

A hearty invitation is extended to shine the pennies, polish the pebbles, fire up the pottery kilns and put the finishing hooks in the hooked rugs for the Lakeside Hobbycraft Show in East Park from dawn to dusk, July 12. In case of rain, facilities will be offered undercover.

Assembly of God dedicates hall

Dedication of the new fellowship hall and education unit of the Charlevoix Assembly of God church is scheduled for Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The Rev. C.L. Strom, Crookston, Minnesota, will be speaking at the worship service at 11 a.m. and also will speak and officiate at the dedication ceremony at 2:30. On Friday at 6:30 p.m. the church is having a fellowship supper at which time grandparents of the church will be honored guests.

Roy "Friday" Maclem talked to sparse crowd at All Sports Banquet Saturday.

'Friday' Maclem sparkles, but all-sports banquet deserted

"I'm no football expert...that's what I tell everyone, as I've seen a lot of 'experts' come and go in my 34 years with the Detroit Lions. I'm working under my thirteenth head coach right now."

The words were from Roy "Friday" Maclem, public relations executive and equipment manager of the National Football League Lions, at the annual All Sports Banquet, Saturday night in the high school.

Sponsored by the Sports Boosters group, president Tom LaBlance and staff expressed worry over slow ticket sales earlier in the week. Their fears were proved warranted, as the community boycotted the affair en masse.

Maclem carried the night for the Charlevoix athletes, coaches and handful of residents who showed up.

He was pinch-hitting for Nick Eddy, Lion halfback who was scheduled to be the featured speaker at the banquet. Eddy informed the Boosters Tuesday he would not appear due to a "prior commitment".

Maclem, showing his PR instincts, excused Eddy with the comment that it is hard getting any Lion player to show his face in public with the team they have had the past few years.

During his tenure with the NFL team, Maclem has worked with the Lions' greatest stars, including "Dutch" Clark, Byron "Whizzer" White, Doak Walker and former player and now coach, Joe Schmidt. In addition, he had a feature role in the movie version of George Plimpton's "Paper Lion".

During his talk, he stressed that size alone does not make a pro football player. He cited the case of Garo Yepremian, Lion kicker who is 5'6" and weighs a solid 140 pounds.

However, Maclem added that he is the exception to the rule in the NFL.

Maclem feels that average football players who want to see sports action in college should attend a small college. "Not only do you get a better chance to make the team, but you also receive a better education at a smaller school... you won't be lost in the crowd," he stated.

Following his talk, Maclem showed a film about the NFL and answered questions from the athletes and coaches.

The Rev. Lawrence E. Tenhopen, pastor of the First Congregational Church, offered the invocation. Bill Supernaw of WJML radio served as master of ceremonies.

Coaches Don Carey, Del Terrill and Jim Bystrom introduced members of the football, basketball, track and ski teams, and Mrs. Paul Osterberg introduced the cheerleaders.

Athletes introduced were:

Bob Etienne, Paul Flodorek, Jerry Fochtman, Nancy Fochtman, Davis Gill, Roy Grunch, Russell Grunch, Ken Heeres, Ray Jones, Mark Kantola, Victor Kantola, Cheryl Kenny, Kraag Lieberman, Don Livingston.

Mike Lord, Georgia Lusk, Georgia Lusk, George McClellen, Bruce Meggison, Hilton Moore, Terry Murry, Carl Novak, Charles Novak, Norm Ostrum, Jerry Parsel, Chuck Pease, Randy Penn, David Plum.

Larry Potter, Gordie Solomon, Larry Straw, Carl Swanson, David Swanson, Kevin Swanson, Mike Thorpe, Don Ward, Stan Warner, Mark Westenbroek, Leon White, Ed Whitley.

Health tests for residents

After attending a preliminary planning session recently Dr. R.S. Libke, Director of District Health Department 3, announced that adult health screening tests will soon be offered to area residents.

Sponsored by the District Health Department, Northern Michigan Medical Society and the Michigan Department of Public Health, the tests are designed to discover hidden chronic illness among apparently well people.

"These tests are our way of asking 'How are you?' Although the chances are there really isn't anything wrong with you, it makes good sense to take advantage of the program. The tests themselves are painless and will only take about a half hour of your time," Dr. Libke commented.

"Each individual participating in the program will be informed whether the findings are normal or abnormal," he continued. "The person's physical will be sent the complete results."

The actual testing will start at Boyne City Christ Lutheran Church, June 2.

Dr. Libke urged eligible residents to phone for an appointment as soon as possible. The number to call is 547-6524 between 9 and 12 a.m. weekdays.

The Health Test Trailers will also be set up in Emmet County, Petoskey at Gray Memorial Building on May 19, and appointments for that location can be made by calling 347-2421 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

Dr. Joseph Baillargeon of Charlevoix visited kindergarten classes last week to talk to the youngsters about caring for their pets. Over 90 boys and girls were in this session, from the classes of Mrs. Edward McNamara, Mrs. Ralph McRae and Mrs. Clayton Smith.

Smith sees discipline, communications a 'must' in new job

Martin: This is not your first stint as a high school principal. How does Charlevoix compare in size with your last school?

Smith: Before I returned to Charlevoix to teach, I was the principal of Potterville Junior-Senior High School. It is about one-half as big as Charlevoix; approximately the size of Harbor Springs High School.

Martin: What are some of the areas which will receive your immediate attention when you assume the principal's job?

Smith: As Glenn Kenney said recently, there was a communication gap between the teachers and the administration which has been partially bridged. But, it still exists to a degree. I feel we must continue to close that gap. The School Board went to departmental heads this year, which was a move in the right direction. Now, it is up to us to meet more departmental needs...gain a better sight of the total high school operation. In other words, we have to become more concerned with our 450 high school students as a whole, rather than direct our operation at the individual youngster.

Perhaps some people do not realize that our schools are no longer a small operation...we're large now, and cannot operate as we did 15 years ago.

Martin: Just what does it take to do a better job for the student body as a group?

Smith: We're getting to the point of a "comprehensive" high school, where we would meet the needs of every student; whether he is in the academic course, general or vocational studies. We have made strides in this direction by adding courses and programs to fill needs. Today, more and more of our graduates are staying in Charlevoix, and we have to keep pace with programs that will prepare them for new jobs. Job requirements change, and we must change, too, to ready the graduate for the working society.

Martin: How do you start such a program?

Smith: One of the first steps would be to raise the minimum course requirement to five per student each year. Youngsters today are able to handle five courses and society demands better preparation. One more course per year would give us better utilization of our elective course offerings. Students could be exposed to subjects they never even thought of. They could explore a number of new fields...it would have to be beneficial.

John Jurgenson, superintendent of the Ellsworth Community School, alerts all parents of kindergarten age children that the annual pre-school enrolling for next term will be held on May 15, at 1 p.m. in the kindergarten room.

This will not be a meeting to introduce the children to school, but a meeting to discuss activities and health with the county nurse, with hearing and vision tested also.

Mothers are to be sure to bring the child's birth certificate and medical records.

This year the children will be invited to visit school, May 15-23, and a time will be scheduled May 15.

Jurgenson feels this is a much better way to become acquainted with school.

Modern times are better for today's homemaker

Back in Grandmother's Day, a housewife proved her efficiency by the long hours she spent washing, ironing, scrubbing and cleaning. Rising at the crack of dawn -- or long before -- to be the first in the neighborhood to have the family wash strung out on the backyard clotheslines was a sure sign of homemaking superiority.

Times have changed for the better. Partly, the reason is the multitude of wife-saving products that have been developed since the days of the washboard and rug beater.

One by one, the dreaded chores have given way to progress. Washing has become automatic, fabrics stay permanently pressed, vacuums and attachments have given the broom the brush. Incinerators get rid of garbage and trash, machines do the dishes, refrigerators make ice cubes and defrost themselves.

Until recently, the chore rated "most hated" by women -- cleaning the oven -- still had to be done the old-fashioned way, scrubbing and scraping. Now at last that has changed with the advent of the self-cleaning oven, which does all the work itself.

The new self-cleaning ovens uses pyrolysis, or extra heat, to burn away all grease and grime, leaving only a fine ash which can be quickly wiped away. As for the housewife, all she has to do is close the oven door and set a simple control. In less than two hours, at an average cost of about two cents, the oven is clean as new.

Some ranges have continuous-cleaning ovens which have a catalytic system. A chemical substance is mixed into the coating of the oven liner panels. Whenever oven temperatures are 300 to 500 degrees, or normal cooking temperatures, cleaning automatically takes place.

All those who worked cleaning the church yard Saturday are given a Great Big Thank You by those who were unable to lend a helping hand in this much needed annual spring project.

Mrs. Nina Ouderkirk has purchased the Joe Williams cottage and will make it her home, near her son Robert Ouderkirk. We welcome her to our community.

ARBOR DAY

Did you plant a tree this Arbor Day or find a May Basket on your front door, a custom most popular a few years ago?

Most schools planted a tree in the school yard and were also busy making May Baskets to hang on someones front door. I miss the gentle knock and the scurrying of feet at mine when two little girls, Nancy Price and my daughter Jane, would hang a paper basket of spring wild flowers on mine. Arbor Day has been observed in Michigan since 1885, but was first started in Nebraska a hundred years ago and history tells us that more than one hundred million trees were planted on that first Arbor Day. What is more beautiful than a tree, and it takes several years for one to grow, to be of use, and how easy it is for some of our people to cut them. The time may come when this custom will be popular once more on May first and training our children to hang baskets of Friendliness and Good Cheer on their neighbors front door.

Bethany to participate in service offering

Members of Bethany Lutheran Church, 1407 South Bridge Street, believe that letting servicemen know the folks at home care should be more than just a matter of words.

That's why the congregation will participate in a nationwide offering on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11, designed to raise $400,000 for the work of the Armed Forces Commission of The Lutheran Church -- Missouri Synod.

According to the Rev. Duane Imig, Pastor of Bethany, the Synod's program for servicemen is one of the most extensive among American Church bodies. Besides supplying chaplains to the military services, the commission sends out literally tons of material each year to about 36,000 members of the Synod in mailings at least once a month.

Included are devotional materials, worship orders with hymns and meditations, information on chaplains, times of services and chitchat from home.

The Missouri Synod also has more than 120 active-duty chaplains and over 400 civilian contact pastors who serve parishes near military installations. Nationally, Lutherans provide one of every ten chaplains, even though only one of every 20 Americans is Lutheran.

Special attention will be focused on the work of the commission through the offering and wet-weather worship cards and prayer cards. Pastor Imig will also wear an identifying cross that is sent to all Lutheran service men. The cross is a Celtic cross with a replica of Luther's emblem on the center.

As they bring their special offering, members of the congregation will be reminded of the words of a fellow Lutheran returning from overseas who wrote, "I would like to thank you for the materials you send each month. Without God's love and guidance I don't think I could have made it through the months in Vietnam."

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER
CHAMBER MANAGER

A beautiful day like today while preparing a few lines; Saturday, May 3, certainly brings about many smiles, more traffic, more people stopping here at this office; this Saturday more than several previous Saturday's, which Saturday's were also busy. I notice also a number of the large cruisers which have been in winter berth at our different marinas are now afloat on Round Lake, and Junior and Senior Ward's have their doors wide open, starting to prepare for the season, and other stirring about indicating things soon will be in full bloom.

You motel and other lodging place operators, in case you have not already heard, be advised that during the Michigan Amateur Golfer's Association Tournament to be played here this year, I am told there will be at least 100 more golfers this year than last year. And they are compelled to keep the register at not more than 340. In addition to 340 persons, of course, there will be many others, and many of the golfers will have their families here for as much as a week, from June 22 to June 29.

The qualifying activity, prior of the starting date of the tournament, June 25, will be divided between the Belvedere Club and the course down at Shanty Creek. The tournament proper will be played here at the Belvedere Club. Shanty Creek during this qualification happens to be having a full-house convention, which of course, means the lodging accommodations are booked.

Instead of the estimated $100,000 over all left by these golfers, this year it ought to be considerably higher.

I received a clipping from the Cleveland, Ohio, Daily Press, dated April 23, which indicates Coho Salmon caught in Lake Erie show no evidence of harmful pesticides. R.W. Teater, assistant director of the Ohio State Natural Resources Department, states, "As of now we have not found evidence of harmful pesticide residue."

He further states that "Perhaps part of the answer is the fairly rapid turnover of water in Lake Erie. The lake renews itself every 3 years." He also indicated that the water to refill or renew Lake Erie comes mostly through the Detroit River and the upper lakes area --Lake Superior, Huron, and the Georgian Bay. He states that Lake Erie gets very little water from Lake Michigan, which is out of the main stream.

Of course, as indicated before, stocking over in Ohio of the little coho began last year, and we're not near the size of the promotion that has been underway here in the state for the last four years. I do recall that the state of Ohio for quite some time has been working on pesticide control, and through the Agriculture Extension Service at Ohio State University, Agricultural Development Research Center at Wooster and the Ohio Department of Agriculture, which by the way, Teater indicated, had done an outstanding job in educating the users in proper use of pesticides.

It has been interesting to read that a number of communities have developed their harbor and/or marine programs, to the point where they are off the drawing boards, approved, etc., and very likely will be available a little later in the season in time for any possible influx of sports fishermen. Charlevoix??

Today I received, as did many of you, I am sure, what is called News and Views, Charlevoix School Newsletter, including a list "Children Learn What They Live". This statement, to me, further proves that home environment, teaching, example by parents, etc., plays a big part in the making of a son or daughter.

The other portion of the newsletter brings to mind one I received a couple of months ago, wherein there was a little paragraph, which I cannot remember word for word, but it did imply that the quality of custodians we are fortunate to have at our schools bring about the very clean classrooms and other allied conveniences, (Commonly known as johns), which because of cleanliness and discipline more or less demands respect from young students, our citizens of tomorrow.

No doubt this respect is carried on, into the home, but unfortunately, it does not go far enough. I am referring to conditions here in the public facility on the street level for males and females in the new harborside building. I should like to point out again that all of the last summer this building was open, that is the street level, to the public, 24 hours a day, and that all during the summer season there was not any filthy mess, damage or any other disturbance in these facilities until school started.

IRS helps taxpayer

Detroit,-If you have a problem concerning your federal income tax, help may be nearer than you think, said A. M. Stoepler, District Director of Internal Revenue for Michigan.

He explained that there are 28 IRS offices in Michigan which help more than 750,000 people each year. He suggested that taxpayers needing assistance can find local IRS offices listed under "United States Government" in the telephone directory.

He said that refunds are the subject of many taxpayers' questions at this time of year. Almost all taxpayers receive either their check or an explanation within ten weeks after filing, Stoepler added.

If taxpayers will wait this length of time, most won't need to make an inquiry.

what's a funny place for a phone?

That depends a lot on your sense of humor. If making tracks across a clean carpet to get to a telephone leaves your wife a little less than happy, then perhaps there's nothing so funny about an extension telephone in the garage or workshop.

Extension telephones make sense. They save time by letting you use a telephone wherever you are.

Call your Michigan Bell Business Office or ask your telephone man. For as little as ninety-five cents a month (plus tax) you can put an extension in any funny old place you'd like.

THE OLD SWINGING bridge used to tie up traffic for longer periods than today's draw bridge does, but not as often. Photos of Charlevoix many years ago are welcomed by the Courier staff.

Concert campaign moving toward season sell-out

The Membership Campaign of the Northern Michigan Community Concert Association is proceeding at "full speed ahead", with headquarters in the Perry-Davis Hotel in Petoskey.

If, to date, no worker has gotten in touch with you, and you wish to purchase a membership, be sure to phone the Headquarters, which is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., through Saturday, May 10.

Adult memberships are $10, and student memberships, $5. These annual dues entitle each member to attend all the concerts given each season. Three "holds" have been announced: The Canadian Opera Company with a 16-piece orchestra, presenting "The Barber of Seville" in English; the Lee Evans Trio, a fine "pops" group; and David Bar-Ilian, the outstanding Israeli pianist.

The membership chairmen and workers predict a sell-out at the Junior High School Auditorium, where all concerts are held.

In Charlevoix, the co-chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Odmark, assisted by Mrs. Charles Bellinger, Mrs. Wayne Woods, and Mrs. Wayne Beitel.

Recipe of week

It's Hasty, But Tasty, This Chili

Some like it hot, some like it mild. That's how it is with chili. The following recipe calls for moderate spicing which may be decreased or increased, as desired.

It's the ground beef that makes this chili an especially flavorsome one, declares meat authority, Reba Staggs of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. It's ideal for the hurry-up days of any season.

Hasty Chili

- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 2 tablespoons lard or drippings
- 2 small onions, chopped
- 1 can (1 pound 13 ounces) tomatoes
- 1 can (16 ounces) kidney beans
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons chili powder
- ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper

Brown the beef slowly in lard or drippings. Pour off drippings. Add onions, tomatoes, beans and seasonings. Cook slowly for 1 hour. Water may be added if desired and the seasonings can be adjusted to taste. 4 to 6 servings.

Cakes 'n Candles

Kevin Patrie will be ten years old May 8. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Patrie of Charlevoix, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. G.A. Patrie of Charlevoix, Mrs. M.A. Page of Chicago and Dr. Page of Oak Park, Illinois.

Beaver influenced Michigan settlement

by Dr. Philip Mason

The beaver, an animals of great usefulness to Michigan Indians; influenced the pattern of settlement by the white man in the State.

The path of settlement in tho State followed beaver colonies principally because white men wanted beaver hair to make felt hats, which in the early 19th Century were fad items of wearing apparel. The newcomers bartered with the Indians who lived near these colonies and did much trapping of their own.

Beavers also influenced the State's landscapes through dam-building activities. This, too, indirectly affected settlement.

The dams paved the way for many of the valley meadows which exist in Michigan today. These meadows, often called "beaver meadows", were created when beaver ponds gradually silted in and flat-bottom valleys remained.

These same valley bottoms of good soil were especially attractive to the settlers.

Because his flesh was delicious, his furred skin valuable for bed robes and clothing, and his hides convertible to thongs, the beaver had for many centuries served Michigan Indians as the buffalo had served Indians of the plains states. He was a major staff of life. Later he supplied the necessary peltry to barter with traders.

Michigan Indians employed various devices to capture the beaver. Traps were used extensively; and often the Indians tapped the beaver's dam, catching the animals when the water dropped.

The Indians never killed a whole colony of beaver in a particular lake or pond; they always left enough to insure a future supply. The French soldier, Lahontan, observed that the Ottawa hunted beaver in the Saginaw Valley "every other year," so as not to kill off all of the animals in that area.

White settlers added a special touch to man's appreciation of the beaver when they started using beaver scent glands, known as castors, to produce castoreum, a fixative for perfumes.

Today the beaver is still playing an important role in water conservation. His dams slow down the rush of excess water downstream, and the stored water seeps into the ground.

Michigan has various seasons and quotas for beaver trapping, based on abundance in any given area. Beaver meat is still eaten by epicure sportsmen who consider the paws and tails special delicacies.

Only experienced woodsmen can even catch sight of a beaver in his native habitat. Shy and quick, he is under water at the first sound of an intruder. Before diving, he slaps his tail to create a resounding danger signal that every beaver knows. Thus the searcher sees only a quiet pond, home of a most influential but extremely shy resident of our State.

They say that cats have nine lives. I'm convinced of this, and also convinced of the fact that they enjoy every one of them. Cats are dedicated actors and for them all the world is a stage on which they perform the lives of men.

Soxy Suzy is my neighbor. She is a black haired creature who slinks around like a real femme fatale. This cat really knows her way around and attracts all the young tom cats in the neighborhood by acting just a little bit aloof and just a little bit come hither.

Oh, if only I could ever be sexy like that cat, for Suzy really turns on the charm and has all the young males waiting on her doorstep to pay court.

It's true as fate that some girls just have it and some girls don't, but after all Suzy is a mature 15 years.

Some cats love to act pitiful. They moan and groan and howl like they are suffering the tortures of the damned. I know a lady, some call her a crazy lady, whose tom cat came in one morning with a cut and bleeding foot. Obviously she had to doctor Rascal up.

Now those of you who know cats know that when they are upset they shed, and this pussy was no exception.

Knowing this, the crazy lady locked herself and the cat in the bathroom, stripped down to her unmentionables and proceeded to minister to the howling cat. She struggled to hold him still while she cut away the hairs from the wound and bathed his foot in a warm water solution.

Now if her cat had even suspected that she meant to harm him he could have easily scratched her and jumped away, but Rascal was obviously smart enough to understand what was going on and smart enough to play it to the hilt, so he preferred to yowl and howl for 20 minutes.

Action and Reaction

Naturally when the ordeal was over the other members of the family crowded around to give him comfort. They petted Rascal and made a big fuss over him, indulging him in every way.

And where was the crazy lady?

Oh she was lying unnoticed on the bathroom floor completely overcome by a sneezing and coughing fit triggered by the abnormally high quantity of cat hair floating around the room.

Although cats have nine lives, sad to say they sometimes loose their last, but even after death they often get the last laugh.

My mother and two of her friends were driving along the highway to a suburban shopping center when they hit and killed a cat. Naturally all three ladies felt terrible and they pulled over to the side of the road and asked at the two houses nearby if the cat belonged there. Since they couldn't find the owner, and didn't have the heart to leave the dead cat in the road, they put the cat in the back of the car and continued on their shopping spree.

When they got to the parking area they didn't want to leave the cat in the car for they were afraid that it might get smelly, so they put it in a shopping bag and left it beside the car.

About an hour later, Mother went into the ladies restroom and was only there a few minutes when she heard a shriek.

"Look, she's fainted," someone yelled.

There on the floor of the restroom was a woman completely passed out. Beside her was Mother's open shopping bag, and in that was the dead cat.

How's that for having the last laugh?

TO HAVE STATES 1st. CABLECASTING STATION

Friday will see the introduction to northern Michigans new cablecasting service on Great Lakes Cable Television system. Channel 3 will carry a regular schedule of local, regional and national news, sports, documentarys, cartoons, feature films and special events coverage.

Bruce G. Freel, President of National Cablecasting Service, Inc., owners of the new cablecasting service announced today that new video tape machines, cameras, audio equipment and stage properties have been installed and is ready for official scheduling starting on Friday. Eight people are already on the payroll and more will be added as the service expands to cover additional systems. A large Cortez Van is equipped as a mobile studio, to be used for on-the-spot news coverage and sports programs.

The studios, located in the Cook Electric Bldg. in Petoskey, is equipped with Associated Press Wire News service and Essa wire weather service. Live programs as well as video taped productions will be part of the offering of the new station. New 16 mm sound film projectors and slidesprojectors will bring the cartoons and feature films to your set with the greatest of clarity, Freel said. The company also has the capability of producing its own films for showing over the system.

Advertising rates over the new station are comparable to am-fm rates and much lower in cost than local broadcast television rates. The company therefore feels that many business people who could not afford television coverage of their business or products in the past, can now fit this low-cost tv advertising into their budget.

Following are some views of the new facilities and personnel.

Tiger Tales

Last week, we traced the history of the Tigers from their inception to their pennant-winning year, 1907. This week, the Tiger story continues from spring training 1908, to last year's comeback win over the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series.

A siege of holdouts and poor spring training hampered the Tigers at the start of 1908 but Jennings again drove the team to a championship with a victory on the final day which was good for a 90-63 record and a half-game margin over Cleveland. The Tigers again met the Cubs in the World Series and again went down in five games.

In 1909, Detroit pushed to a 98-54 record and once more won the pennant, 3½ games ahead of Philadelphia. But it was the same old story in the World Series, with Pittsburgh and Hans Wagner besting the Tigers and Ty Cobb in seven games.

A quarter of a century was to pass before the Tigers again reached the fall classic. Third place was their fate in 1910, when Sunday baseball was inaugurated at Bennett Park. In 1911, the club won 21 of its first 23 games and led the race until August 4, but finished second.

At the end of that season, Bennett Park was rebuilt and renamed Navin Field. The diamond was turned around, with home plate removed from what is now right field, and a single deck concrete grandstand seating 23,000 replaced wooden structures which were taxed when 14,000 showed up.

The new park was dedicated April 20, 1912. Mullin pitched the Tigers' first no-hitter July 4 that year and Cobb batted .410 for the season. But the campaign also was marked by a strike of the players over a suspension handed Cobb for taking a punch at a fan in New York and a pickup aggregation of sandlotters in Tiger uniforms absorbed the worst beating in the club's history, 24-2, at Philadelphia.

So the Tigers finished sixth and repeated in 1913. In 1914 Federal League bids for Cobb's services pushed his salary over $20,000 for the first time but the Tigers were fourth.

Then came 1915, which Jennings called "the biggest disappointment" of his career as the Tigers wheeled through 100 victories but failed to overtake the Red Sox, who won 101. Detroit was third in 1916, when Harry Heilmann became a Tiger regular; dropped to fourth in the war-torn 1917 campaign; and nose-dived to seventh in the shortened season of 1918.

With peace restored in 1919, the Tigers pushed back to fourth and Cobb, then 32, won his final batting title with a .384 average.

Yawkey died March 5, 1919, and in April of the following year Navin persuaded Walter O. Briggs Sr. and John Kelsey, two of Detroit's leading auto industrialists, to purchase the Yawkey stock for $500,000. It was a notable move because Briggs, a true sportsman, was to play an outstanding role in the Tigers' future.

When the 1920 Tigers sagged to seventh, Jennings was released and the managerial reins handed to Cobb. In his first year as manager Cobb hit .389 but the Tigers won only 71 games and finished sixth. Both improved in 1922 but both fell short--Cobb's .401 shaded by George Sisler's .420 and the Tigers' 79-75 only good enough for third. The club moved up to second in 1923 but was 16 games behind first-place New York.

Charley Gehringer wore a Tiger uniform for the first time in 1924 and the Navin Field grandstand was double-decked from first base to third. The team was in the race until the last week but wound up third with an 86-68 record which turned out to be the best of Cobb's six seasons as manager. When the Tigers fell to fourth in 1925 and sixth in 1926, the Georgia Peach drew his release, although playing two more seasons with Philadelphia to post a lifetime average of .367.

Cobb's successor in 1927 was George Moriarty, onetime Tiger third baseman who had become an umpire. Detroit ran fourth that year and sixth in 1928, so Moriarty returned to umpiring and Bucky Harris was the new manager in 1929. In five seasons under Harris, the Tigers showed promise but failed to finish higher than fifth, despite the arrival of Hank Greenberg and Tommy Bridges as early as 1930.

CHEERING THE RAYDERS on to victory next school year will be these five varsity cheerleaders, chosen last week. Making their cheering debut for the varsity will be Kris Osterberg, Terri Wood, Kay Fiedorek, Sherry Austin and Annette Hansen.

Babe Ruth was Navin's first choice to succeed Harris in 1934. Unable to land the Babe, he next sought Mickey Cochrane, for whom the Philadelphia Athletics were asking $100,000. Lacking that kind of cash, Navin went to Briggs who promptly put up the money and thereby opened another new era in Tiger history.

With Cochrane as catcher-manager, the Tigers soared to a 101-53 record and captured the 1934 pennant with a seven-game margin over New York. Schoolboy Rowe set a record with 16 straight mound victories, while Gehringer hit .356 and Greenberg .339.

In the World Series, the Tigers lost to the "Gas House Gang" of the St. Louis Cardinals. It was a bitter seven-game grind which will be remembered best for the "garbage shower" aimed at the Cardinals' Joe Medwick in the final game.

The following year, the Tigers finally crashed through to their first world championship. The pennant race was an easy one for Cochrane's crew, which led by nine games on Labor Day and finished three ahead of New York with a 93-58 record. Six games were required to down the Cubs in the 1935 World Series, Cochrane making a daring dash from second to score the winning run in the ninth inning of the sixth game on a single by Goose Goslin.

The championship was worth $6,544 to each Tiger and Navin pledged the club's share to another enlargement of Navin Field. But on Nov. 13, 1935, the Tiger president was stricken by a heart ailment while horseback riding and a few hours later was dead at the age of 64. Briggs, who had bought Kelsey's stock after his death in 1927 but remained a silent partner, then became sole owner by purchasing Navin's interest. He also assumed the post of president, making Cochrane vice-president as well as manager and naming Walter O. (Spike) Briggs Jr. secretary-treasurer.

The new regime did not get off to an auspicious start. Cochrane was ill and forced to take a rest which caused him to miss the All-Star game in which he was to have been a manager. The Tigers closed second, but were 19½ games out of first. The following May, Cochrane was the tragic victim of a "beaning" which ended his playing career. Without him behind the plate, the Tigers settled for another distant second.

Before the 1938 season started, the Tigers' home was Briggs Stadium with a seating capacity of more than 53,000. This final expansion was made possible by the closing of Cherry street and Briggs' generosity in remodeling. The plant was completely double-decked and all seats roofed with the exception of the center field bleachers. Ever since, it has been recognized as one of baseball's finest parks with home attendance of a million or more virtually every season.

By August, the 1938 Tigers were down to fourth, where they finally finished, and Cochrane was released. Del Baker, a coach who had filled in frequently, became the new pilot. His 1939 team finished fifth but in 1940 the Tigers were back on top again, nosing out Cleveland by one game with a 90-64 record.

Jack Zeller, who had become general manager in 1939, took the blame when 91 Tiger farm players were declared free agents by Commissioner Landis early in 1940. But he also received credit for the Tigers' pennant success that season when he persuaded Greenberg to move to the outfield, to create an opening at first base for Rudy York, and also obtained shortstop Dick Bartell from the Chicago Cubs.

Bobo Newsom, big man of the Tiger staff, pitched two 1940 World Series victories over Cincinnati but his bid for No. 3 in the seventh game resulted in a 2-1 loss and it was the Reds who took the world championship.

The Tigers finished fourth in 1941, when Briggs outbid all others to sign Dick Wakefield for $52,000 and "extras." They were fifth in the wartime season of 1942, after which Steve O'Neill replaced Baker.

Fifth place was all the Tigers could do for O'Neill in 1943 but things started to him in 1944, in spite of the continued wartime drain on manpower. Running seventh at All-Star time, the Tigers staged a brilliant rally and appeared to have the pennant sewed up going into the final series of the season. However, last-place Washington held the Tigers to a four-game split while the St. Louis Browns swept four from New York for the only pennant in their history.

A freak finish marked the Tigers' successful surge to the 1945 pennant with an 88-65 record. Because Washington had no title hopes that year, the Senators scheduled their season to close a week early, making their park available for professional football. It developed that Washington was Detroit's biggest threat but when the final week arrived all the Senators could do was sit around while the Tigers nosed them out of the pennant. A dramatic grand slam home run by Greenberg at St. Louis on the final day turned the trick.

The so-called "old men" of the Detroit lineup then knocked off the Chicago Cubs in a seven-game World Series, with Hal Newhouser winning twice, Virgil Trucks once and Dizzy Trout once.

With World War II out of the way, the 1946 and 1947 Tigers both ran second but in 1948 the club faded to fifth and O'Neill was succeeded by Robert (Red) Rolfe. Before the former Yankee star was elevated to manager he was directing the Tiger farm system, a department which was well-stocked with prospects dug up by Wish Egan, the club's "super scout."

After four months of Rolfe's tinkering, the 1949 Tigers suddenly became the hottest team in the league and finished fourth, with George Kell winning the American League batting crown at .343. Carrying on in 1950, the Tigers led the race 119 days to again fan pennant hopes and were in first place as late as September 15. But they slipped to second and the Yankees claimed the flag by a final margin of three games.

The following decade was one of turmoil for the Tigers and disappointment for the fans, with the club able to emerge only twice for the second division despite valuable additions like Harvey Kuenn, Al Kaline and Frank Lary.

Trooper tests to be closed

The State Civil Service Commission said today it will close its open examination for State Police Trooper positions effective May 16.

The examination had been on continuous open announcement.

Applications on file by that date will be more than sufficient to provide candidates for the September State Police Training School which will fill vacancies within the limits of the present authorized strength of the State Police, State Personnel Director Franklin K. DeWald said.

He indicated the examination would be reannounced later this year if the current session of the Legislature approved additional State Trooper positions.

Stewart Coleman is one of the Charlevoix Red Rayders that Coach Del Terrill is counting heavily upon to keep the Rayders on top this track season. Rayders have started out well, dropping only one meet. They met stiff competition at the CMU Relays last Friday, however, and were unable to score.

Sports Shorts

It was rather hard to believe that only a handful of residents showed up to give a pat on the back to Charlevoix High School's athletes at the all sports banquet last Saturday.

The program was entertaining, and too many people missed out on a good evening.

Roy "Friday" Maclem, the substitute speaker for scheduled Nick Eddy, knows how to entertain. Maclem has seen the greatest players the NFL has produced, and could keep the stories flowing for as many hours as you care to listen.

Some of the best cannot be told at a high school banquet; especially some about Bobby Lane.

At this writing, the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers are about ready to tangle in the deciding game of the NBA playoffs, and by the time you read this, one of the teams will be crowned.

No matter who wins, it is impossible not to admire the Celts and Bill Russell in particular.

Nearing the end of his long and magnificent career, Russell is still able to show the youngsters how the game was meant to be played.

It always amazes us when we see him go head to head with Wilt Chamberlain. He's probably the only player in the history of the game who can make The Stilt look like a plowboy on the court.

Sam Jones played his final games in the NBA during this series, and basketball will feel his absence. Sam is the difference between a good and a great Celtic team. He has been the margin of victory for Boston in a score of games.

The marbles championship of Charlevoix is being decided after two months of "spring training". We hear that David McDaniels is challenging for the junior championship.

In the Open

Every fisherman has thrilling accounts of "The Big One That Got Away." One of the best of these stories was told by the late Jim Kelson who was dean of Lake St. Clair guides for many years.

Jim invented his own muskellunge lure, and it was highly effective; a tube of white oilcloth, about 18 inches long, with a metal head representing a fish and at the tail end a triple hook. As this contrivance was towed, with water flowing through it, it imitated the motion of a swimming fish. Jim knew that big fish are partial to big prey.

Jim did his utmost to persuade his clients to handle their tackle correctly, and when they failed, he was outspoken in his criticism. In trolling for muskie, the rod must be held straight out, parallel with the water. If the rod is elevated, a heavy strike may tear loose.

That is just what happened one day with a sportsman who was not inclined to obey orders. Not only did the fish break loose, it tore all the guides off the rod. Jim Kelson freely expressed himself to the cause of this disaster.

Presently, a short distance from the Kelson motor boat, a muskellunge surfaced, went under, came up again, leaping clean out of the water, the lure dangling from a corner of its jaw. A few minutes later, the performance was repeated. It was a day when a number of muskie trollers were on the bay and there were many excited witnesses. In discussing the matter later, native experts agreed that the fish was of record size. Estimates of its weight ranged up to 80 pounds. Jim Kelson refused to commit himself.

"Might have gone 80," he admitted, "but maybe it was only 50 or 60. Anyhow, it was the biggest I'd ever seen.

Muskellunge are unpredictable. There is a brief period, after the lake loses the chill of winter and before massive weed growth forms, when trolling for muskellunge is at its best. A day comes to mind when there was flat calm and cottage thermometers registered close to 100 when a kind of muskellunge explosion occurred on Anchor Bay. Fishermen kept coming ashore to exhibit their catches. It was an occasion that stayed long in local memory.

Muskie belong to the pike family. In Europe, a pike resembling our northern pike attains weights comparable to our muskie. This fish is reputed to live 100 years.

A distinguished writer on fish and fishing says that pike are inferior to muskellunge as game fish and as food. On the other hand, men with much experience with both species say that, taken from the same water, the two fish are about identical. We never could persuade Jim Essery, chief guide out of Watson's Pine Portage Camp on Lake Kabinakagami, to cook pike for our feasts on the beach. Pike were for sled dogs, Jim contended.

Distinguishing pike from muskellunge is not too difficult, if you have seen enough of both. An easy rule to remember is that muskie have heavy dark spots and pike -- which usually are lighter in weight -- have light spots.

Pike and muskellunge are both ferocious predators. There have been instances of pike actually biting a person's hand or foot danged in the water.

One of Jim Kelson's customers, fishing for smallmouth bass, had a fish on his line that made savage rushes, then stopped fighting, making no resistance as it was reeled in.

When the fish came within view of the boat it was seen to be dead and coming after it was a muskellunge, about a 10-pounder. Paying no heed to the fisherman, the muskie tried to make off with the bass, clamping down with big jaws and shaking the bass as a pup would shake a rag, letting go only when Jim made a pass with the landing net.

Famous muskellunge waters include the St. Lawrence River, and Lake St. Clair. In fact, lurking along the channel drop-offs around Belle Isle may be muskies bigger than any thus far recorded.

At last, spring has come to Charlevoix, and it's about time for this is the first week of May and the annual week of fix-up, clean-up and paint-up time. Many home owners have been hard at work for several weeks now trying to repair the ravages of winter so that they can enjoy the summer months ahead.

With Keep Michigan Beautiful Week upon us, there are just too many carefully kept houses in this community to be ignored. Many people in town own houses that are past their prime, but they keep them with such loving care that these houses are a real asset to Charlevoix.

It would be impossible to commend all of the conscientious home owners in town who have remodeled, repainted or simply done an extra good job with their yards, but here is a scattering of houses from different neighborhoods whose owners contribute to keeping Charlevoix-the-Beautiful.

Massed band festival set at CHS tomorrow

Three hundred and sixty-eight student musicians will converge on Charlevoix tomorrow, as Charlevoix will play host to the annual massed band festival, sponsored by District II of the Michigan school band and orchestra association.

School will be dismissed for all students after the morning sessions and the band performances will begin at 12:15 p.m. at the High School gymnasium.

Bands from Petoskey, East Jordan, Boyne City, Central Lake and Elk Rapids will join the Charlevoix Senior Band in forming a massed band for an evening performance at 7:45 p.m. A nominal charge will be made for the concert and all are invited to the program.

John Lindenau, cornetist from the Interlochen Arts Academy will be guest adjudicator and clinician. He will direct the massed band in two numbers in the evening performance as well as presenting a clinic on cornet and trumpet to the assembled students in the afternoon.

Individual performances by each band will begin at 12:15, with Central Lake, directed by Miko Ringgenberg, followed at 12:35 by the Elk Rapids High School band, directed by Walter Williams. At 12:55 the East Jordan High School band, directed by Dwight Smith will perform, followed at 1:15 by the Boyne City High School band, directed by Dennis Johnson. At 1:35, the Petoskey High School ninth grade band, under the direction of Max Smith, will perform, and at 1:55 the Charlevoix Senior band, directed by C.A. Odmark will close the individual band performances.

These individual performances are open to the public. Admission will be charged, which will also entitle the ticketholder to attend the evening massed band concert.

At 2:15 the musicians will join in rehearsal under the direction of Lindenau. At 3:45, Lindenau will present a cornet clinic to the group, following which the rehearsal will be resumed until the 5:30 p.m. dinner hour.

Supper will be served the bandsmen in the high school cafeteria by the Charlevoix chapter of the FHA, under the direction of Mrs. Odmark, assisted by Mrs. Marie Biessett.

The evening concert will begin at 7:45, and it is hoped that the people of Charlevoix will demonstrate again their support of these activities by attending the concert.

A similar festival will be held in Bellaire, while today festivals will be held at Benzie Central High School in Benzonia, and in Rogers City High School. The Charlevoix Reserve Band is participating today in the Benzie Central Festival and is scheduled to perform at 1:55 p.m. with the evening massed band concert scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Hospital Guild

The membership coffee of the Women's Guild of the Charlevoix Hospital was held April 29 at the home of Mrs. G.B. Saltonstall.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Saltonstall, Mrs. Floyd Brown, and Mrs. Gordon Freedman, president. The Guild extends its thanks to those who attended.

Over 80 memberships were received and many volunteered for work in various capacities.

The puppet committee met last week in the home of Mrs. Conrad Klooster. The puppets are given to each child entering the hospital. Anyone wishing to join this group or any other, may contact Mrs. Freedman.

The membership drive will continue through the month of May. Active and inactive dues are $1. National Hospital Week will begin May 11 with an open house at the hospital from 1 to 4 p.m., sponsored by the Guild.

Mrs. Freedman, Guild president, said, "We are looking forward to seeing all our friends, old and new. This is a great opportunity for us to show our neighbors the hospital facilities."

Suomela scholarship offered

The Uno Suomela Memorial Scholarship will be awarded to a Charlevoix High School senior in June.

The new award was announced by members of a scholarship committee formed last year after the unexpected death of teacher Uno Suomela, who died during the summer of 1968. Suomela had taught industrial arts at the high school since 1944.

Members of the committee are Vane H. Smith, Bill Stephans, Bob Cook, Dean Davenport, and Suomela's two sons, Neil, a shop teacher in Grosse Pointe, and Dale, an architect in Flint.

Applicants for the scholarship must be CHS seniors and plan to study in one of three areas: industrial education, architecture or engineering.

The $200 scholarship is open on a competitive basis to seniors.

Applications may be obtained from Dr. William Ratigan and must be submitted by May 15 to Smith.

Oleson donates picnic food

Gerald Oleson, of the Oleson Food chain, will again donate all the food for the event which is called "Michigan's greatest annual community effort," the Northwestern Michigan College barbecue.

The event will be staged May 25 on the college campus, with proceeds to benefit the school's proposed Great Lakes Maritime Academy.

This will be the 14th annual all-day outdoor picnic on the college grounds, sponsored by the NMC Wigwam Club to raise funds for new college equipment and programs. Each year a full-course barbecued beef dinner is served at $1 per person; and hundreds of volunteers sell tickets, prepare and serve the food, and handle such special events as a cake walk, fish pond, movie, and a college open house.

A special feature this year will be an open house aboard the school's new maritime academy training vessel, the Allegheny.

The planning committee hopes to top last year's record attendance of close to 10,000 persons.

Advance tickets will go on sale in Traverse City and all surrounding communities during the week of May 12. Tickets will also be available for purchase on the day of the Barbecue during serving hours from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Leonard offes rallye movie

Alma-Leonard Refineries, Inc., announced today it is making available for use by service clubs, classrooms and other interested groups a color feature movie of the recent "Press On Regardless" National Rallye. The POR, long a prestigious American rallye, was named earlier in 1969 the "best national rallye of the year."

The film runs 21 minutes and was photographed during the actual running of the rallye, as driver/navigator teams drove 800 miles through Michigan's backwoods on two successive nights.

Requests for use of the film should be made to: Leonard Refineries, Inc., Advertising Department, Alma, Michigan 48801.

The refinery suggests that 30 days be allowed for delivery of the film and that requests should indicate alternate dates.

Sounding board meets in Norwood

Members of the citizens' sounding board met last Friday with residents of Norwood Township to discuss the school millage issue.

According to board spokesmen, the meeting provided comments on the school administration, curriculum, counseling and building design.

The group will meet with members of the Charlevoix PTA tonight at the high school.

The American public is eating and drinking more outside the home today than ever before. Restaurants and bars, which employed more than two million people in 1968, are expected to provide jobs for more than three million workers by 1975, according to Labor Department forecasts.

Maverick's hot!
Any questions?

Measure it any way you like. By the crowds. The news stories. The sales. Few cars have caused a sensation like Maverick or broken so many records. Every day more and more people are asking questions about it. Here are the answers.

Q. Why did you build the Maverick?
A. We think of Maverick as another one of Ford Motor Company's answers to the gold drain. Now Americans who want small car economy don't have to send their U.S. dollars overseas.

Q. Why did you call it Maverick?
A. You know what a maverick is. A maverick breaks the rules. A maverick is different. Maverick plugs the big gap between the compacts and the imports. It has a wheelbase eight inches shorter than a '69 Falcon, eight and one-half inches longer than a VW 1500. Nothing else like it.

Q. Why did you make it this size?
A. Maverick pinches pennies, not people. We gave Maverick more leg room. More shoulder room. More luggage room. Good example: the front seat of a Maverick offers you nine inches more shoulder room than the front seat of the leading economy import and its trunk can handle all the luggage for a family of four, including a set of golf clubs.

Q. What do I get for the price?
A. You get your money's worth. A complete, built-for-Americans kind of car. Room. Hot styling. Color-keyed interiors. Even the heater is included. Some economy car interiors are about as luxurious as a park bench. Not Maverick's. You get plush seats. Cloth and vinyl upholstery with unique tartan plaid cloth inserts. You also get safety features like smart pull-out door handles. Strong safety door locks. Two-speed electric wipers. Safety belts. Head restraints. Plus conveniences like armrests, coat hooks, lighted heater controls . . . important little things that add so much to your driving comfort.

Q. What about options?
A. You can get 'em if you want 'em. You can order integral air conditioning. (It's built in, not hung on.) Other options include 3-speed automatic or low-cost semiautomatic transmission, and a hefty 200 CID Six. But lots of people won't put an extra cent into this car. Because it's all there. A complete car all ready to drive home.

Q. What kind of gas mileage can I get?
A. That depends on you as well as the car. You can get as much as 25 or 26 miles per gallon—if you have an educated toe and the right road conditions. If you have a lead foot, or do a lot of city driving, you will get a lot less. In tests by professional drivers at our tracks, where we do our best to duplicate actual driving conditions, Maverick averaged 22.5 mpg.

Q. What kind of power does Maverick have?
A. Maverick's Six lets loose 105 galloping horses. That's 52 more than you get in the 4-cylinder VW 1500. Maverick can cover 417 feet in ten seconds from a standing start. That means you can get up to highway speed in a hurry. When you enter a 70 mph turnpike, you won't feel like a retired bookkeeper thrust into the middle of a pro football game.

Q. If it has an eight inch longer wheelbase than the leading import, does it still handle and park easily?
A. Maverick can U-turn in a tighter circle (35.6 feet) than the leading economy import (36.0 feet). Maverick can slant through traffic like a halfback. It can turn on a dime and give you nine cents change. If you've been driving any other American car, you'll find Maverick's neat size adds up to 5½ feet to any parking space.

Q. Can Detroit really build a small economy car that's tough and long lasting?
A. It's not easy, but we did it. Maverick's unitized body construction makes it light, strong and durable. It's welded like a battleship. Rustproofing compound goes into deep crevices that never see the light of day. Then all that strength is covered with four coats of paint for lasting beauty. Result: one tough little car that's put together to stay together. (The service schedule in the Maverick owner's manual goes up to 108,000 miles or nine years; that ought to tell you something about its rugged durability.)

Q. How about parts and service?
A. Maverick is designed to be unusually easy to service. You're dealing with made-in-America parts and 6,000 easy-to-find Ford Dealers. Fast repairs and easy replacements mean extra savings in both time and money.

Q. Is Maverick really easier and less expensive to maintain than an economy import?
A. Definitely. Maverick oil changes come only every 6,000 miles and chassis lubrication once every 36,000 miles. The leading economy import recommends oil changes every 3,000 miles (twice as often as Maverick) and chassis lubrication every 6,000 miles (six times as often as Maverick!) Those are just a few examples of the many ways Maverick lessens inconvenience and lowers operating cost.

Q. Can I do my own maintenance work?
A. Yes, if you have an average amount of mechanical ability. The Maverick owner's manual contains 24 pages of detailed diagrams and easy-to-follow instructions for routine maintenance jobs you can do yourself, if you wish. You'll find it easy to change spark plugs, replace ignition points . . . plus many other do-it-yourself repairs and replacements.

Q. Can a small car be safe? And how safe is safe?
A. This small car incorporates the latest advances in engineering. Maverick's brakes are as big as a standard compact's—designed to stop cars weighing hundreds of pounds more. Maverick gives you weight . . . power . . . stability. Designed for American driving conditions.

Q. How does Maverick ride?
A. Here's where Maverick's longer, wider stance really pays off. You get a smoother, quieter ride. Maverick's tight, strong, unitized body helps eliminate squeaks and rattles. Special insulation blocks out road noise. The people who brought you a Ford that was quieter than a Rolls-Royce now bring you a small car that doesn't sound like a power mower.

Q. Is there an advantage in the fact that Maverick is really a 1970 car?
A. Slower depreciation is one money-in-the-pocket advantage. Maverick's 1970 model designation means it keeps its trade-in value higher, longer. (Maverick is built to be a good investment from the minute you buy it to the minute you sell it.)

Better come take a look at this one. You'll find it where the action is . . . right in there with other great Ford values like specially equipped Ford Galaxie 500's . . . Fairlanes . . . Mustangs and Falcons.

You'll find them at your Ford Dealer's . . . the place you've got to go to see what's going on.

For an authentic 1/25 scale model of the new Ford Maverick, send $1.00 to Maverick, P.O. Box 5397, Department NSO, Detroit, Michigan 48211 (Offer ends July 31, 1969)

Who is kidding?

When we came to Charlevoix a couple of months ago, one of the first comments we heard was, "Charlevoix is a great sports town. The community supports high school athletics all the way".

The old cliche, "Actions speak louder than words," was quite in evidence Saturday night at the annual All Sports Banquet in the high school.

Remove the athletes, coaches and press, and the remaining patrons (interested parents and members of the community) could have easily been seated and fed in the small kitchen at our home.

True, word spread that Nick Eddy, the scheduled speaker, backed out, and arrangements were up in the air until the last minute; but the fact remains that "a great sports town" became fiction.

Nobody, least of all this writer, claims that a high school sports dinner will keep you on the edge of your chair with excitement.

Yet, it is the only time that the third-string tackle can take a bow on equal terms with the star...the only time a student manager can be singled out by the main speaker and move from the obscurity of towels and kicking tees to the limelight for a brief moment.

These are the times when a good sports town turns out. Such was not the case Saturday in Charlevoix.

Do you care?

"April showers bring May flowers," so the old saying goes. But they also melt March snows and bring forth a different bloom, one hidden all winter long. This "bloom" is not so pretty -- not by a long shot. It's called a lot of things, mostly unprintable, but the common term is litter.

Paper products, tin cans, soft drink and beer bottles, old auto mufflers and tailpipes, rusty bed springs, crates and wooden boxes, empty cigarette packs, hubcaps and worn-out tires -- you name it and our affluent society has discarded it along a public street, a vacant lot, or by the side of a country road.

The cost, either in loss of beauty or the amount of money and time spent in cleaning up, is considerable. The state of Michigan estimates that the price of litter cleanups for all agencies within the state is more than $8 million per year -- and steadily rising.

And, moreover, the time and trouble and money needed to control the problem is so beyond the capabilities of most governmental agencies that vast areas go uncleaned, the trash piling up higher and higher each year, and spreading into new areas.

Perhaps worst of all, though, is that there are no really adequate solutions to the problem, or even laws to control it.

A ban on throw-away bottles might help some, but unless the return deposit were prohibitively high, many people would simply ignore it and throw the bottles out anyway. Or turn to cans, which these days don't even rust away because they are made out of aluminum.

The fine for littering is high -- $50 to $100 in most places -- but the offender must be caught literally red-handed before he can be given a ticket, and there is so much of it going on that most police officers don't bother with citations, except for the most flagrant of abuses.

The most successful attack upon litter comes when citizen groups become involved, clean up an area, and force their governmental officials to supply attractive, and numerous, receptacles for waste throughout the city and at all places where people congregate and recreate.

Litter attracts other litter, but where the people of a town care, and show they are by cleaning up, the example they set will help to remind others.

How much do we care?

The stat game

Statistics, it is said, can be used to substantiate any fact. However, according to Sterling T. Tooker, president of The Travelers Insurance Companies, statistics cannot prove how many accidents have been prevented through safety education.

Writing in the 35th edition of his company's annual booklet of highway accident data, Mr. Tooker said, "Our rationale back in 1931 was that if reasonable people know the truth about a problem, the truth will help them solve the problem. In 1969, 65 million booklets later, it is still our rationale.

"Ironically enough, this conviction cannot be based on hard statistics," he said. "Yet we know that hundreds of thousands of accidents have been prevented by drivers and pedestrians who have learned to drive and walk with safety. And the ever-mounting number of miles traveled on many poorly engineered roads clogged by more and more cars and trucks and busses give us real reason to believe that these ghastly casualty totals could be much higher," he added.

"Alcoholocaust" is the title of the 1969 edition of The Travelers booklet. And for the first time it takes a long, hard look at the mixture of alcohol and gasoline. But the booklet does not contain statistics to support the title. Here's why:

The numbers and the classifications are distilled--no pun intended -- from monthly reports furnished by state motor vehicle departments (a voluntary service gratefully acknowledged by The Travelers). Energetic and thorough research has nailed down drunk driving as a major accident cause, but absolute precision is still out of reach. A dead driver can't be asked to heel-and-toe or take a breath or blood test. The injured driver frequently needs swift emergency treatment. Technical examination for alcohol in his blood stream must come later when the aberant ingredient has been diluted or has disappeared altogether.

"Some" and "at least" acknowledge that the D.O.T. study is not an exact recap either. The point, however, is sharp to all last-ditch apologists for irresponsible social drinkers or social drinkers-and-drivers themselves.

Get the message?

on the Flip Side

Since arriving in the area some two months ago, we have naturally found similarities and differences between Charlevoix, the state of Michigan, and our former home.

For the most part, the differences have been on the pleasant side of the ledger. However, there is one glaring exception, and that is a state of uncertainty called Eastern Standard Time.

For the past one and a half weeks, confusion has reigned supreme in air terminals, business places and TV listings.

Just how unfortunate our state is became apparent when we eavesdropped on a telephone conversation in the corporate headquarters of National Motors in Detroit:

"Hello, president Murphy?... This is Johnson in sales. I don't mean to be uppity, Sir, but we're going down the drain . . yes, that's right, Sir. Since every important state in the nation went on Daylight Savings Time, it seems all our customers try to telephone their orders to us before we open in the morning.

"That fellow building those stream cars in Los Angeles is getting all the early morning orders, which according to Stitch in Research amounts to four percent of the market. . . and, Sir, with all our call-backs for safety reasons, we're getting quite a pile-up in the Storage Department, or at least that's what Fenton tells me; and, he should know, Sir, he's vice president in charge of pile-ups. . ."

The conversation didn't end there, but that should be enough to show just what serious problems have arisen from Michigan's unfortunate decision to remain on Standard Time.

Tom McDaniels and Martin Harney of the Courier Corporation journied to Chicago recently for the United States Ski Association, Central Division, convention, and neither really cares to return to the Windy City.

Seems both Charlevoixians were the victims of thiefs, as are so many people in our cities today.

Harvey's loss was the large trophy he received minutes before, after being named the outstanding ski writer in the Central Division.

If there was a question in anyone's mind that the campaign for the all-important 1970 elections has begun, a look at the pace of Republican activity in recent weeks should lay the doubt to rest for good.

GOP State Chairman William McLaughlin was repetitively to the point on each stop of his recently completed state-wide tour. "The 1970 elections bring Michigan's Republican Party to the crossroads," he pounded home to audiences in two dozen cities from Ironwood to Lincoln Park, "and the time to start preparing is now."

"There is Bill Milliken to elect Governor in his own right and we have the opportunity to 'promote' Robert P. Griffin to the role of Michigan's senior U.S. Senator."

No less important, however, said McLaughlin, will be two other areas of the ballot, the Legislative races and those for the State Supreme Court.

"The Legislature elected in 1970 will be charged in 1971 with redrawing the Congressional District boundaries with which we will live until 1982," McLaughlin continued. "And if I had to bet one way or the other, I think the final decision on the redistricting of the State House and Senate will come from the State Supreme Court."

The Regional Program Planning Seminar tour brought McLaughlin and key members of the State Central Committee staff face-to-face with more than 2,000 Republican leaders from all 83 Michigan counties during a concentrated three-week swing.

"I think this review of political fundamentals was more successful than we had any reason to hope for," concluded the travel-weary Chairman.

Republicans are active on still another front--fund raising.

The California Governor will deliver a major address in the Motor City's Light Guard Armory under the sponsorship of the United Republican Fund. Tickets are $100 each and Republicans are hopeful that the former screen star will attract another SRO crowd as he did in Grand Rapids last fall.

The GOP will relax briefly Friday evening (May 9) to spend an "Evening with Elly" in Detroit's Statler Hilton Hotel. This is billed as strictly fun, a tribute, of a kind to former Republican State Chairman and now National Assistant Republican Chairman, Elly M. Peterson of Charlotte.

Political observers are beginning to wonder what 1970 will be like with this so-called "off" year as a forerunner.

Motions tabled with class

For days my wife has been coming up out of the basement in a weary condition, moaning, with bloodied fingertips and paint on her shirt.

This is not because they cancelled the Mrs. America contest and she has nothing to train for. It is because she didn't attend Michigan State University and therefore has no class.

What my Patricia is doing in the basement is finishing a table. This is a project of tremendous proportions, as any husband married to an antique-nut will tell you.

When my wife wants a new table (or most anything made of wood) she does not go downtown and buy it. She finds an old aunt on her deathbed. She waits patiently, and kindly, for the dear lady to die. Then she swoops into the deceased's home and makes off with a kitchen table that George Washington slept under.

"I am saving you $100." Pat explains as I get a $1,000 sprain in my back carrying the table into the basement.

You might wonder why the table goes into the basement instead of into the kitchen where it is needed. You must be a bachelor. The thing is, see, that Pat doesn't really like this table. Yet, it must be scraped and sanded and re-glued and renailed and painted 5 times. This takes 14 months. In the meantime, the old kitchen table has been given to a married daughter and we eat off the floor.

Anyhow, that's how it is and that explains what Pat has been doing in the basement.

"Listen," I said, "this has got to stop. I am a graduate of Michigan State University and I can't have my wife sanding and painting a 100-year-old table just to save me $50. I want you to go downtown tomorrow and buy the nicest table you can find. Tell 'em Jim sent you. That's class."

"You'd better explain yourself," Pat answered. "Last week, when you bought our first new car in 6 years, you said we couldn't buy another thing for 15 years. That was the day the grocer caught you trying to return non-returnable bottles."

"Yes," I admitted, "but that was before I read about the table bought by Michigan State. They paid $3,580 for a Brazilian rosewood table to go in the boardroom of the new $5.9 million administration building. This table is 39 feet long and only 8 guys are going to sit at it--the MSU trustees. They can table 1,365 motions at one time. And they meet only once a month."

"I didn't know you went to such a rich school," my wife said.

"Neither did I," I admitted. "I remember when they called it a cow college. If there are still cows at MSU, they probably have split-level stalls with carpeting and color TV. Starlets with no fingernails are probably flown in from Hollywood every morning to milk them.

"As a taxpayer and an alumni, I support that university. And it just isn't right for the strangers I support to have a $3,580 table while my wife breaks her back trying to make a $22 table like $75," I said.

"But I like old tables refinished," she said. "I don't want a 39 foot table. A table that size for 8 people doesn't make sense, especially when they meet only once a month. You might call it class; I call it a waste of our money."

"That's what I get for marrying a peasant," I said.

That's what I said. But if that girl ever gets out of the basement long enough, I am going to run her for MSU trustee.

Smith looks at new job

In addition, we must improve our counselling efforts in occupational and vocational areas. We are doing a good job now, but the field is becoming more complex in the area of testing and college admittance right now. We'll eventually need additional manpower in counselling.

Testing in the past few years has become more and more important. College forms show less emphasis on grades, and much more on testing (which measures potential). This trend tells us we need more in-service training for the entire school staff. In fact, more in-service training in various fields would be a big help.

Martin: Do you feel you will be working with a good staff?

Smith: Contract negotiations created a gap between the teachers and administration last year, but this doesn't have to be. I will have to have the support of the teachers if I am to be successful. I think the democratic approach, rather than an autocratic manner, will be best.

This is a good staff...a real professional staff. But, untapped potential is there. We must draw more ideas and opinions from them. They are a prime source to help set up programs and courses.

We have a large cross section of teachers who can help develop our educational approach.

Martin: What about the students?

Smith: The student council must become more active, but must be "structured" in their goals. They represent the student body and should bring recommendations to the administration. Of course, the School Board is responsible for establishing policy.

Charlevoix has a good student code, but it is not enforced. We must enforce the rules and regulations better. Parents can help us with this problem.

Martin: What will take precedence on your list of initial steps?

Smith: Student discipline is near the top of the list. We must beef up attendance and enforce our rules. One example of our discipline problem is in our study halls. They are so large, there is a perpetual breakdown all day long. Large study halls are always bad. In fact, educators state that the larger the study halls, the cheaper the operation.

Also, I want to implement a pre-planned, but flexible, four-year course of study. Youngsters could plan, with the help of the counselling department, their high school program before their freshman year. It would be flexible enough to allow changes, but the framework would be there.

Our school system has doubled in size in the last ten or 15 years. Growth always creates problems. We must remember that today's educational and vocational requirements are different from those in the past, and the system must change with the goals.

began the fall of 1967. The new addition features a foyer and nursery as well as a fellowship hall with a modern kitchen on the upper level. The lower level is divided into Sunday School rooms, which along with the upstairs are carpeted.

The basement of the existing building has also been completely remodeled along with expending the sanctuary. The remodeling was done by donated labor of the men of the church.

Pastor Don Schorsch reports that the public is invited to attend the dedication service.

Charlevoix Fire Company was called to the home of Fritz Puffpaff, Upright St., Monday night, at 7:15 p.m. Fire was in kitchen oven. There was smoke damage. Above left shows crowd which gathered at the scene. On the right is fish dinner which was burned.

De Young earns WMU degree

A total of 1,724 students were awarded diplomas by Western Michigan University at the close of the winter semester on April 19. Featured speaker for the ceremony was Michigan governor William G. Milliken.

Graduates from this area who received degrees were Nicholas B. DeYoung, 109 W. Lincoln St., Charlevoix, bachelor of science, and Martha Marie Hegener, Petoskey, bachelor of science.

Council signs state contract

Charlevoix's City Council spent Monday night cleaning up a variety of matters, but major action was light.

Council signed a new maintenance contract with the Michigan Department of State Highways to maintain state highways within the borough.

Amount of the contract is approximately $10,000, with the city responsible for the roadway between the Clarke Station and the Wayside Motel.

Renewal of mooring facilities at the city-owned dock for the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew was discussed. At present, the dock is leased to the Coast Guard for $1 a year. Council discussed the damage to the dock, allegedly caused by the Sundew, and will contact the Coast Guard.

In other action Council:

Reviewed the Planning Commission minutes in regard to re-zoning. Mayor William Fochtman indicated that recommendations for a new zoning ordinance should be forthcoming shortly.

Agreed to purchase from Henry Hogan, one foot of property on the alley running between Park and Clinton Streets. Council made this purchase in an attempt to maintain the status quo of the alley.

Reviewed the April police report, noting 185 investigations, 11 accidents involving vehicles, and ten arrests.

Adopted the new Municipal Airport rules and regulations as an ordinance. Violation of the ordinance provides a $100 fine or 60 days in jail, or both, for each offense.

Announced the schedule for Mayor Exchange Day, May 19, when Adolph Prestdio, Mayor of Beaverton, visits the city.

Tabled a Chamber of Commerce request to underwrite the cost of fireworks at the Venetian Festival in the amount of $825.

Councilman Jack Mol told the group that he had received numerous compliments concerning the city work crew's job during Clean-up Week.

Mayor Fochtman swore in Conrad Klooster Jr. as a new councilman, and welcomed him to the post.

Council also paid bills totaling $36,342.44.

Budget request stands: 'We need every penny'

Taking the chance that the populace might go for "two in a row", the Charlevoix School Board will place the same two millage requests on the budget June 9.

"We're in dire need of funds...we need every penny," were the words one Board member chose, as the body voted to ask for 3.75 mills for operational expenses and one mill for teaching aids.

The same requests were placed before the electorate April 7, and were turned down by an approximate 3-2 vote.

The Board briefly discussed alternatives, including a proposal to ask for one mill for a period of three years rather than five.

After discussion, the directors decided to maintain the five year length.

Jerrald Redeker, board member, said he would consider the three-year request if he felt it would make any real difference. "But," said Redeker, "I don't think it would matter."

Jim Richey, who attended the meeting, asked the Board if there was not a method to change the wording on the ballot to reflect the Board's intention to use the one mill for purchases of equipment to be used by the students only.

Rex Milligan, his voice reduced to a whisper by laryngitis, stated that the school attorney offered the opinion that the ballots must be worded in a specific manner.

However, the Board stressed that the one mill would be used "exclusively for the purchase of learning materials and equipment for the students of the Charlevoix public schools."

Some voters apparently were baffled by the wording on the April 7 ballot, which included the phrase "operational expenses" in the request.

Other Board members added that the people think the school district asked for more money than was needed at the first election.

"It just isn't so," said Frances Hooper, "we need all we asked for."

The Board said it has gone over the budget several times, looking for places to apply the knife, but could not pare the $1 - million plus amount without giving up desired programs.

To lower figures of educational programs, or completely chop some activities, according to the Board, would not give district pupils the education they need.

So, voters will act on the same measures in June as they did April 7.

NORTH CENTRAL

The Board called upon Raymond O. Carr, high school principal, to discuss the North Central accreditation visit next school year.

Charlevoix district will be visited by a team of educators representing the organization sometime next year.

Carr noted some of the requirements of North Central:

For a school to be accredited, it must have sufficient students and staff for a balanced educational program.

A three-year high school must require a minimum of 12 units for graduation; a four-year school, 16 units.

Special interest groups and "politics" cannot be tolerated.

Citizens' groups are recommended for specific purposes and to assure communications between the Board and the citizens.

Scholastic requirements include four units in language arts (including English), science, math, social studies; two units of the same foreign language; two in the fine arts (art, music); and one in health and physical education.

An in-service program for teachers must be maintained. The pupil-teacher ratio must not climb above 25 to 1. (Charlevoix's ratio this year is 20.8 to 1).

Teachers cannot have more than 160 pupils per day.

At least 75 percent of the teachers should teach in their major field of study.

There must be one fulltime member of the guidance department for each 450 students.

LIBRARY "MUSTS"

Carr also noted that for a school of Charlevoix's size, there must be 2,500 books in the library, plus eight books for each pupil over 200. This means there must be at least 4,308 volumes in the school library next year.

In addition, there should be film strips, tape and disc recordings accessible to the students and faculty.

In the library, Carr added, there should be an expenditure of $4 per pupil, exclusive of text books.

FAILURE TO PASS

If a school fails to receive accreditation from North Central, what results?

Carr stated that nothing actually happens, except for a loss of prestige.

Added to pride is the fact that colleges would accept a youth from an accredited school before they would accept a student from a non-rated school, if both youths were equal students.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the Board received a letter of commendation from the State, noting that the district was one of only 95 in Michigan which was found to have no defects in its school busses.

It was also decided that no paving of the driveway at the Public Library would take place without discussion of the Board.

Frances Hooper stated that paving the driveway would cause the loss of two trees.

(For your voice to be heard, please complete the questionnaire found on Page 13 of this issue, and return it to the Courier office. Your opinions and questions will be brought to the attention of the School Board at their open meeting, May 26. You are requested NOT to sign the form, so all comments may be kept confidential.)

Opinions, questions from school voters

Residents of the Charlevoix School District are expressing their opinions and asking questions about their public schools through a survey conducted by the Courier.

The unsigned questionnaires have drawn comments from all segments of the community, both pro and con the proposed budget.

Both "yes" and "no" voters to the April 7 request for 4.75 mills are returning the questionnaires at the same rate, with "no" voters slightly in the lead.

The questionnaire appears again in this issue of the paper.

Sampling reasons for voting against the millage request, we find:

"I voted 'no' as it was the only way I as a voter and taxpayer had of voicing an opinion so that it would be heard."

"What I hear from my children about the indifference of the teachers about whether they get a lesson or not, and that they are just waiting for school to get out. If you got rid of some of these (teachers), you could do away with some operational expenses."

On the one mill request: "The request to equip material; it seems a shame that a new school has such a shortage in space that the children who have shop don't even have a place to put their materials."

On the question of whether the school district should operate on the same budget as this year, the almost-even split continues.

When asked what programs should be dropped in an effort to save money, these opinions were listed:

"I feel there are many programs in our school that are unnecessary; however, I believe a better word is activity, rather than programs. A few are: the need of an administrative assistant; excess of paid coaching staff; teachers assistants in lunch room, study halls, hall guards, un-knowing board members buying and ordering supplies."

What questions would citizens like to ask the School Board? Here are a few:

"What are the duties of the administrative assistant?"

"Why have some of the board members been given a physical or active part in running the school, such as the bus garage?"

"Why were operational and equipment costs for the new elementary building not included in the millage voted for building that school?"

"How could any Administration, School Board, or for that matter, any average citizen expect to get the same quality of goods for the same price this year that they did last year?"

"What training have you had to handle a school's financial problems?"

"How would you help improve our school system...not who are you going to get rid of, or what personal ax do you have to grind?"

Readers are urged to fill out the questionnaire and return it to the Courier office.

Questions and comments will be passed on to the School Board at their May 26 open meeting in the high school gymnasium.

TAR elects new officers

Charlevoix Teen-Age Republicans, along with Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix County Republican Chairman, and Mr. and Mrs. Scott Groves, Teen-Age Republican advisors, enjoyed a banquet at the Weathervane Inn May 7.

Approximately 25 students attended the dinner which was sponsored by the older republicans for those young people who did the most work on the past national election.

Charlevoix's Teen-Age organization was started about a year and a half ago by Stroud, and then turned over to the organization's first officers, chairman, Georgia Lusk; vice-chairman, Chuck Terrill; treasurer, Dena VerWys; and secretary, Cherie Potter.

This years' officers are chairman, Cherie Potter; vice-chairman, Larry Anders; and secretary-treasurer, Nancy Fochtman. Advisor for the group is Scott Groves.

Those attending the dinner were: Cherie Potter, Larry Anders, Liz Davison, Nancy Fochtman, Chuck Terrill, Carl Novak, Charles Novak, Menchu Tantoco, Cheryl Kenney, Elaine Putman, Henrik Christiansen, Becky Hansen, Annette Hansen, Kathy VanZant, Sharon Boss, Dena VerWys, Connie Wojan and Ann Willis.

Prom-goers find going fun, but expensive, annual event

By Jeanne Mutz

Charlevoix High School's Junior-Senior prom will be held this Saturday at the Bay View Inn in Petoskey.

Juniors and seniors will don gowns of chiffon, silk and satin and wearing fresh spring flowers will step into the center of attention among families, relatives and friends.

High school proms have become a family affair. To some kids it is the big moment, even bigger than commencement. The prom seems to be one night when each and every kid grows up and are treated like adults.

Proms today have become more popular, elegant, formal and much, much more expensive.

Charlevoix high school students paid $5 a couple for their bid to the prom. Seniors are guests of the juniors and attend free.

Last year, the prom moved out of the high school gymnasium and into the Belvedere Casino. This year it has gone one step further and moved the affair out of town. Reasons for the change vary. The difficulty in decorating the gym seems to be the most obvious reason. Hiding bleachers and the many obstructions used for gym classes is literally impossible.

Today, dress has become much more formal. Boys usually rent dinner jackets; some even go so far as to rent tuxes. Boys in Charlevoix place their orders early at mens' shops in Petoskey for their outfits.

Girls don't have to buy the bids or dinner but they spend much more for their clothes. The long gown is the thing. Dresses are soft, feminine and modest. NOBODY wears strapless, low-cut dresses anymore. In fact, most dresses have relatively high necklines, some with ruffles, and short or even long sleeves. Most dresses cost from $30 to $50. The shoes are the sling back, strappy type and cost from $10 to $15. Jewelry, gloves, evening bag and hair ornaments add to the cost. To add to the price is the professional hair-do and possibly manicure.

The only inexpensive thing a girl can buy is the boutonniere for her date. These are mostly carnations and cost about 50 cents.

Flowers for the prom range from wrist corsages to the plain old shoulder corsage. Girls today favor the wrist corsage or the popular nosegay. The popular flowers are miniature roses, daisies and flowers tinted to match the girls dress.

Transportation is a big problem for today's teenager. If by chance, the boy cannot get a car for the evening, he usually finds someone to "double" with. This arrangement usually proves quite successful.

Prom is an exciting time of the year and many, if not all, juniors and seniors look forward to it. It's a bewitching time. A time when boys turn into real gentlemen and girls into real princesses. It's a real grown-up time. It's a time when all the pride in parents shows through.

First State Bank elects vice pres.

Charles F. Themm, 38, Imlay City, Michigan, has been named Vice President of the First State Bank of Charlevoix, according to an announcement made by Jerrald H. Redeker, Executive Vice-President of the Bank.

Themm has been an officer and manager of the downtown office of the Imlay City State Bank since 1966. For seven years prior to that time, he was office manager for Ude Loans, Inc., of Flint, Lapeer and Imlay City. He is a graduate of Almont High School, attended Michigan State University and the Graduate School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin.

He also holds a Certificate from the Dale Carnegie School of Public Speaking and Public Relations.

Themm served in the U. S. Army from 1953 to 1955 as Tank Commander and in the Finance Center at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Themm has a number of varied civic interests to his credit which include: member and president of the Imlay City Rotary Club; past secretary and treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce of Imlay City; member of the Board of Trustees of the Almont Community Hospital; secretary of the Board of trustees of the Congregational Church of Imlay City; president of the Imlay City P.T.A.; executive secretary of the Imlay Area Red Feather Fund and past treasurer of the Almont American Legion Post.

Library Notes

To commemorate Michigan week from May 18 until May 24, the Library will feature several displays which, it is hoped, will be of interest to patrons of all ages.

The large bulletin board in the outer foyer will exhibit clippings, postcards and pictures of happenings in and around Charlevoix and nostalgic scenes taken a half century ago.

The display book shelves will have books on Michigan for both adults and juveniles. Included in the display will be books about Michigan written by Charlevoix authors.

The handsome bookcase contributed by the Babst Memorial Fund will display Michigan products -- maple syrup, cherries, blueberries, home-canned fruits and Spring morels as well as specimens of Petoskey stones and Michigan artifacts.

The large conversational bulletin board in the main library will display special clippings about Michigan written by Berntee Wexstaff.

The Michigan room which houses the Library's special collection of books and pamphlets pertaining to all phases of Michigan history, will display a particularly handsome pictorial history of Michigan in full color. This beautiful collection, part of the Arthur Ranger Memorial Fund, should be of special interest to children, because each picture tells a vivid and graphic story of such important historical events as the Americans Taking Over Ft. Mackinac, Mme. Cadillac's Arrival in Detroit, The Lewis Cass Expedition, Sieur de la Salle and the "Griffon". Massacre at Michilimackinac, Father Marquette's Arrival at Sault Ste. Marie, and Henry Ford Putting the World on Wheels.

Of special interest will be the large colored map of Michigan authors published by the University of Michigan. The map has been lent to the library only for the Week commemorating Michigan.

The Library salutes Michigan during the special Week and hopes patrons will enjoy the exhibits which were specially prepared for the occasion.

NOTE: POTENTIAL EMPLOYERS FOR SUMMER JOBS. We are accomplishing a sizable list of youngsters ranging from 14 years to 20, both male and female, all of whom seem to be ambitious and most of whom express a need for employment. We hope to be receiving calls from the various employers so as to put these folks at ease.

I wish to remind you of the annual Lilac Festival at Mackinac Island, June 8 to 15. The Coronation Ball and crowning of the Lilac Queen is Saturday, June 14. On Sunday, June 15, there is the Gayla Lilac Parade. They claim that this event is Northern Michigan's must beautiful area season festival.

It is pleasing to report the local folks concerned about a new annual "Lakeside Hobbycraft Show", have just about completed committee and things are on the way, so to speak. This event has quite a potential; however, there is to be expected a year or two of hard scratching for developing. Show is scheduled Sat., July 12.

It is equally pleasing to report that the committee having to do with the annual Waterfront Art Fair is also well on the way and it appears this year's, scheduled for Saturday, August 9, will be another ringer. This year, in addition to the normal first mailing, we have already over 40 new or first timers here requesting applications. Both of these shows are much needed fund raisers and a very appropriate time of the year for the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

I believe it will interest some of you to know that of the Great Lakes Charter Service fleet operation, which is entirely based at Charlevoix already has four of their boats with their respective captains here in the harbor, and are in the process of trial runs, particularly for Lake Trout. This will mainly be their concentration for some time. They have established local docking space and emergency docking, more or less, at North Port.

For those of you who are not familiar, they have had at least two seasons experience up and down the west coast of Michigan, particularly for Salmon, and for several seasons, one of these gentlemen has operated Bass fishing camp package deal out on Hog Island. This camp service is also based at Charlevoix.

I have a bulleten from Michigan State Attorney General's office, Frank J. Kelley. This gentleman warns of a pyramid-style investment scheme which is being sold in several Michigan cities by high pressure tactics involving get-rich-quick promises. This scheme, which emphasizes a distribution system rather than a product, is pushed by trained operators at so-called "opportunity meetings" where prospects are induced to invest from $2,000 to $4,500.

They are told they will receive bonuses for inducing others to join the distribution system. The distributor hires subdistributors who, in turn, engage sub-subdistributors until and multi-tiered pyramid is established. This bulletin has a lengthy detail, and if any of the readers are further interested, call here at the office.

It is also stated that the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office is investigating the scheme to determine if any state laws are being violated. Law enforcement agencies in the counties involved have also been alerted.

In understand our Queen's Committee, headed by Dave Juilleret and Billie Smith are having a rough time of it. How come, girls?

The Michigan Tourist Council, located on the Steven T. Mason Building, Lansing, is publishing an interesting and informative bulletion called Tourist Trends in Michigan, and I quote the following: "Dollar crops. . .Some Michigan farmers may soon be harvesting tourist dollars. New funds provided to the U.S. Department of Agriculture allow loans to farmers and rural communities to develop outdoor recreational facilities, providing for such activities as winter sports, camping, fishing, hunting, and other outdoor recreational pursuits. Long-term, favorable interest loans up to $60,000 are available. Information may be obtained from the Farmers Home Administration, 1405 South Harrison Road, East Lansing."

They indicated that the April edition of Challenge magazine contains a two-page article by Council chairman Ralph Fuller, "Tourism Means Fun, Business". . ."Michigan Steelhead Comeback" authored by John B. Gleason appears in April's Sportfishing magazine. . .The spring issue of Discovery magazine includes a Council color photo of the Mackinac Bridge to help illustrate the article, "Bridges to Cross." . . . Michigan skiing takes most of the attention in a four-page article on midwest skiing appearing in the winter edition of Marathon World. . . .The Sunday rotogravure section of the Youngstown, Ohio, Vindicator devoted one-half page to Council photos and kind words about the Council's promotional efforts.

It also stated, for the benefit of those who do not already know, Monday Holidays. . . Michigan has joined an ever-increasing list of states scheduled to observe Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Veteran's Day, and Columbus Day on Mondays beginning in 1971. The bill has passed both the Michigan House of Representatives and the Senate and now awaits the Governor's signature. The measure was one of five points in the Michigan Tourist Industry's legislative program endorsed by thn Tourist Council earlier this year.

This particular council, like West Michigan Tourist Association do considerable promotion of Michigan's second largest money-making industry, tourism, and are involved in much of the necessary legislation from time to time.

Tired of the tame and the ordinary? Slip into a swinging Cutlass S.

This one's got excitement, even standing still. Makes you glad it's also got an anti-theft steering column lock, too—to discourage the envious.

Turn on the key and you turn on a Rocket 350 V-8 to instant escape—with an action, a ride, and a certain class ordinary cars can't duplicate.

It's all part of the Olds extra value that goes far beyond its price.

About that price: It's lower than many "low-price" models on the road today.

Our space probes and moon shots have brought many of us face-to-face with the wonders of the far future for the first time. Obviously the moon is a first step toward other plants. Now, moisture has been detected on Mars and soon it, and other "near" planets will be visited.

Farmers will go along. True, their soil will be nutrient tanks, and the vegetables and fruits they produce will be an integral part of the oxygen, carbon - monoxide life support system of the star ship. Quite likely, test animals in their care will be used to check the adaptability of earth-creatures to alien ecologies.

Meanwhile--back at planet early, space research will provide satellite weather stations which at first will spot and report weather as it forms, but later will allow weather control, with rainfall and sunshine scheduled for farming areas as needed.

The American Academy of Arts and Scientists has created a commission on the year 2000, and along with others, has prepared a lengthy report which includes the prediction that there will be 320 million people living and eating in the United States at that time.

It is thought that about half of them will be located in megopolis-type cities--huge, continuous city areas extending for hundreds of miles, for example from Chicago to Pittsburgh and north to Toronto.

Tropical agriculture, ocean farming, appetite and weight control, widespread use of synthetic foods and beverages, are other predictions.

Farm-unit numbers are expected to drop substantially, to an estimated 2.3 million compared to our present 3.5 million. Farm mechanization will grow far beyond anything now dreamed of--and farmers will count heavily upon engineers, agronomists and other scientists to help keep production ability ahead of population growth.

The year 2000 is only 31 years away. That's why farmers continue to call for more and more ag-related research.

"A continuing re-evaluation of the scope and character of agricultural research programs is essential if such programs are to meet the growing needs. . ." is the way Farm Bureau members state it, in their current policy resolutions.

Keep It Beautiful

If America hired people for the job, it would take the largest sort of army to keep our country free of litter.

But there's no need to hire anyone. It's a job we can do for ourselves. All of us. Every family that spreads a picnic lunch. Every boatman who cruises the lakes and waterways. Every motorist who uses our roads and highways.

It is the pleasure of the U. S. Brewers Association each year to give its fullest support to the Keep America Beautiful Campaign. Remember: Every Litter Bit Hurts.

This is our land. Let's treat it right.

Printer's ink

By Pat Begrow

So many people have asked me how I ever got started writing that I've decided to finally come clean and tell it like it is.

I've been hooked on the newspaper business for a long time. For those of you who can remember back that far, 1942 and 1943 were the war years and help was scarce. All kinds of help that is; in fact, the situation was so desperate that I became a newsboy or a newsgirl as the case may be. Even though I was a businessman, I was much too feminine and chatty to go it alone, so a girlfrield and I had a weekly suburban route together.

Each Thursday after school we would hurry home, get our wagons and go to the drop-off corner to wait. Before long we were on our way with Sue working one side of the street and I working the other. We were just young enough to be extremely conscientious and I like to think that subscribers to the Heights Press never got better service.

It was either that or newsboys were really impossible to find for I spent a good part of my junior high years peddling papers.

I also spent a good part of my junior high years struggling to write a humor column for the Shaker Scroll. Each week I studied the New Yorker and without a twinge of conscience rewrote their material for the junior high paper. No wonder Scroll won the national Pacemaker award that year. The New Yorker has a pretty good staff.

The older I get the wiser I get, thank goodness, and now when I write I just hate to rely on second hand information because it's so often wrong. Therefore I muddle along interviewing personalities whenever and wherever I can.

This let me to a pretty strange interview when I was in Cleveland last week. On Saturday in the early evening hours of daylight saving time the sun was bright and the temperature was in the high seventies. It was a warm spring evening, the perfect kind of weather to catch even busy people relaxed and in a talkative mood.

Action and Reaction

I drove south of Cleveland snooping out the ski areas, a project that I'd been planning for a long time. After much backwoods trail beating I found my way to Brandywine, a ski resort that has such poetic names for ski runs as Kool-Aid for beginners and Champagne for experts.

There seemed to be no one at home as I walked around, snapped pictures and peered into the lodge. About half a mile away in the field I saw a bearded man on a tractor working furiously on this quiet Saturday evening. Could this be my quarry?

It was hardly likely, but I made my way across the fields snagging my stockings with every step. Finally we were eye to eye and we shouted at each other over the roar of the tractor motor.

"Do you know where I can find the owner of this place?"

"I'm the owner. Who are you?"

"I've come to write a ski story about you."

It's hard to tell who was more surprised, but I guess that I was. After all, most people just expect writers to be a little bit goofy.

Matchett wins MSU scholarship

EAST LANSING--Melvin R. Matchett, Charlevoix was among the winners of the American Society of Animal Science Scholarship Award presenied last week at the Honors program for students in Michigan State University's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Melvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Matchett, Route 1, Charlevoix, is a senior majoring in animal husbandry at MSU. Seven animal husbandry seniors were named for this award for being in the top 10 percent of their graduating class.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Kipke were called to Lansing to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Michael (Lena) Malone on Saturday, April 19. They visited in Holland at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Dona Bambach, for several days before returning home.

CLAUDIA BOST

Claudia Bost joins community, newspaper

Claudia R. Bost has joined the Courier staff in the front office. In addition, she will be assuming a variety of editorial duties.

Mrs. Bost moved to Charlevoix, following her recent marriage to Michael D. Bost.

She is a graduate of McCluer Senior High of Florissant, Missouri, and attended Florissant Valley College and the University of Missouri. While in school, she studied Secondary English and Literature. When she left the U. of M., she began work as a technical illustrator at McDonnell Douglas Corporation in St. Louis.

There she learned the methods used to produce the pieces of art-work used for final presentations by the Engineers.

While in St. Louis, Claudia was a member of a unique singing group known as the Chris-Tones. The group consisted of 15 members and provided their owo music with guitars, a bass, a banjo, bongos, and tamborines. Claudia was one of those members who played the guitars for the group. The Chris-Tones performed throughout the St. Louis area, varying their music from contemporary to liturgical folk songs.

The Bosts reside at the Barnard Pond. Both she and her husband enjoy riding and caring for four horses, belonging to Michael's mother, Mrs. Ethel Bost. Although a new member to the community, Claudia is looking forward to becoming a permanent resident of Charlevoix.

E. Jordan soldier is promoted

PLEIKU, VIETNAM--Michael P. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl K. Lewis, Route 2, East Jordan, recently was promoted to Army specialist five in Vietnam, where he is serving with the 4th Infantry Division.

Spec. Lewis, a cook in Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion of the division's 22nd Infantry near Pleiku, entered the Army in November 1967 and completed basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky. He was stationed at Ft. Lee, Va., before arriving overseas in June 1968.

The 22-year-old soldier is a graduate of Petoskey High School.

Highway accidents must be reduced

LANSING -- A trucking industry spokesman predicted today that sufficient national effort can reduce traffic casualties to a minimum.

Mark Robeson, president of American Trucking Associations, said the motor carrier industry is making steady progress in cutting its accident rate.

Robeson, who is executive vice president of Yellow Freight System, Kansas City, Mo., said that "large trucks figure in fewer accidents than other motor vehicles, on a mileage basis." The accident frequency rate of class one and two intercity trucks under Interstate Commerce Commission regulation, he said, is 2.43 accidents per million miles.

"We have improved our figures over the years while more and more vehicles were entering the traffic stream," he said.

The numbers of automobiles and trucks have increased roughly 50 percent in the past ten years, Robeson noted. "That increases accident odds materially," he said.

Many more autos are moving over the main intercity routes, he added. "That worsens our odds some more. So our holding the line and making improvements represents real progress."

The ATA president called attention to differences between industrial safety and truck operational safety.

"In the plant, on our own terminal property," he said, "we directly establish and maintain safe conditions. We can enforce rules, after training. If a hazard is found, we can block it. In contrast, on the road we're subject to many factors not under our control. For example, there are more than five times as many automobiles as trucks. So a collision with an automobile is mathematically much more likely.

"We lose most of our direct supervisory control over driver and vehicle when they take the road," said Robeson.

He compared the truck driver to a captain at sea. "You can generally instruct all company drivers to get off the road in a bad snow or sleeting conditions. But the driver later has to decide, like a captain at sea, exactly when the rule applies.

"Against these kinds of odds, I personally believe the trucking industry has done well, Robeson declared.

Kindergarteners register May 29

Glenn Snider, principal of the elementary school, reminds parents that Thursday, May 29, has been designated as enrollment day for children of the Charlevoix school district who will enter the kindergarten in September.

Parents of children whose last name begins with any letter from "A" through "K" are asked to register the preschooler between 9 and 11 a.m. on that date.

Children whose last name begins with any letter from "L" through "Z" must be registered between 1 and 3 p.m.

Parents are requested to bring only the child to be registered to school and to bring that child's birth certificate and immunization record.

Mrs. Jeanne Miles, school and community nurse, will be present to confer with parents and begin the school health record.

The School Code of 1960 requires that children entering kindergarten must submit proof of immunization against the following communicable diseases: diptheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio and measles, and vaccination for small pox. They must have a tuberculin test which has been done since the first of November 1968.

Reporting forms for this are available at doctor's offices and the elementary school office.

To be eligible for kindergarten in the fall, a child must be five years old by December 1.

All parents whose children will be enrolled in kindergarten next fall, are urged to register the children on this Thursday, May 29. There will be no school for the current kindergartners on that day to permit registration of the new students.

Mrs. Ross Alexander

Mr. and Mrs. William Peck spent several days the past week in Lansing. The latters mother returned to her home with them after being their guest for two weeks.

William Vanderwall spent the past week in McGregor, Iowa, having made the trip with his brother Ed Vanderwalt of Traverse City.

Mr. and Mrs. Irv Drost have returned to their new home, known as the Harry Foster Cottage, after spending the winter in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Mable and Elliot Bird of Flint spent this weekend in their local home and enjoyed a shopping trip to Petoskey on Saturday.

The Weekly Club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. N.C. Christensen.

Our "Bill Cooper" is the manager for the new National Cablecasting Service which opened this past week in Petoskey. They will carry local news, weather, films and other programs by cable. He has the best wishes of his community friends.

Mrs. Marie Blissett of Charlevoix was a guest this Sunday at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. N.C. Christensen.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edwards have returned to their home on Wickorsham Road after spending since October in their winter home in Clearwater, Florida.

A group of friends met last Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Meyers to help Roy celebrate his birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Alexander were guests Sunday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Jane Friend and family, in Petoskey, and Sam and Evelyn Alexander and daughter Diane were with R. E. Miller in Petoskey.

Robert and Lucille Ouderkirk are the business distributors for the Amway Products in our community and surrounding territory.

The Mother's Day Church service Sunday was well attended and a Mother's responsibility in the home was well given by Rev. Harmon. I, too, have wondered what kind of home training the rioting youth had during their elementary years. Each Mother was given a potted blooming pink petunia by the Ladies Fellowship and also other received one who attended the service.

Tiger Tales

(Last week, we followed the Tigers through the 1951 season, when they finished in fifth place. Our history continues in this issue through the heroic World Series win last October over the St. Louis Cardinals.)

After a fifth-place finish in 1951, Rolfe was released at mid-season in 1952, the year Trucks hurled two no-hitters, and Fred Hutchinson was the skipper when the Tigers concluded the campaign with the only last-place finish in club history. Sixth in 1953 and fifth in 1954, Hutchinson walked out when a two-year contract was denied and Bucky Harris returned for two more fifth-place finishes. His 1955 season was marked by a batting championship at .340 for Kaline, youngest in league history to win the crown, and in 1956 a hot finish created a wave of optimism.

It faded rapidly in 1957 when the Tigers ran fourth under Jack Tighe, who had been one of Harris' coaches. The 1958 highlight was a no-hitter by Jim Bunning but Tighe was replaced in June by Bill Norman, minor league manager and scout. His team that year finished fifth and in May, 1959, Norman gave way to the veteran Jimmie Dykes.

Dykes got the Tigers up to fourth place before the close of 1959, when Kuenn hit .353 to lead the league, but the club was struggling along in sixth in August, 1960, when Dykes was replaced by Joe Gordon. Dykes succeeded Gordon at Cleveland in a so-called "Swap" of managers but neither team improved its position and Gordon quit at the end of the season.

The Tigers front office also was unsettled during this period. After the elder Briggs died Jan. 17, 1952 at the age of 74, his son became president of the club. The Briggs stock was ordered sold and on Oct. 1, 1956, an 11-man group from the radio-television field bought the Tigers for $5,500,000. The three sections of the syndicate were headed by John E. Fetzer, Fred A. Knorr and Kenyon Brown. Knorr was president, to be succeeded by Harvey R. Hansen in 1957 and William O. DeWitt, who served a year of a three-year contract in 1980.

Fetzer gained control of the club and became president in October, 1960, when he bought out the Brown group. Thirteen months later, he also purchased the Knorr stock and became the first sole owner since Briggs.

With Fetzer taking charge of operations and organizing the front office, the Tigers again acquired stability and success. Fetzer personally selected Bob Scheffing to succeed Gordon as manager in 1981 and endorsed a daring plan to rebuild the club with youngsters from the farm system. Scheffing, former National League catcher and manager, did a masterful job in the expanded 10 - team American League race, getting the Tigers off to a fast start and keeping them at or near the top of the standings until the first week of September, when the Yankeee won a critical series and went on to take the title in a two-team battle.

The revival excited Detroit more than anything since the golden days of 1934-35 as the Tigers again won 101 games and Norm Cash entered his name on the list of American League batting champions with a mark of .361.

The home attendance of 1,600,708 was the highest since 1950 and there was every reason to believe that the Tigers were on the threshold of a return to former glory. However, the club dropped to fourth place in 1962 and in June, 1963, Chuck Dressen replaced Scheffing as manager, with the Tigers in eighth place.

Dressen pushed the club into a tie for fifth that year and followed with two straight fourth-place finishes in 1964 and 1985 in spite of serious injuries to key players. But in 1985, the veteran manager was stricken by a heart ailment, missing much of the season, and in 1988 was again stricken, eventually succumbing Aug. 10, 1966.

Bob Swift, who was acting manager in Dressen's absence both seasons, himself became victim of lung cancer in 1966 and died Oct. 17 that year, shortly after the Tigers finished third under the direction of Frank Staff who, like Swift, was recruited from the coaching staff.

Mayo Smith, former National League manager and long-time super-scout of the New York Yankees, took over the reins in 1967 and the Tigers gave Detroit one of its most exciting pennant races in spite of a long string of injuries to key players. The Tigers were in the race until the final day, finishing second by one game to the Boston Red Sox.

Then in 1968 the Tigers crashed through to their first pennant and world championship in 23 years. Under Smith's leadership, the club took the lead on May 10 and never relinquished it, finishing 12 games ahead of Baltimore. Denny McLain was the hero of the campaign, winning 31 and losing only six games. The first hurler in the majors since 1934 to win 30 of more, McLain was the unanimous winner of both the Cy Young and Most Valuable Player awards. Willie Horton was the leading Detroit slugger; the muscular outfielder hit .285 with 36 home runs and 85 RBI.

In a tense World Series, another hero emerged as the Tigers edged the St. Louis Cardinals to become only the third club in history to win after falling behind, three games to one. Mickey Lolich led the Detroiters with clutch pitching, winning three games, the last with only two days rest to clinch the world championship. To get Al Kaline into the World Series lineup after a 16-year wait, Smith moved Centerfielder Mickey Stanley to shortstop and the gamble paid off when Stanley fielded well and Kaline joined Norm Cash as the hitting heroes of the classic.

Professional hockey finally turned off the lights for the season a week ago today, as the Hershey Bears defeated the Quebec Aces, four games to one, to capture the Calder Cup and avert a Canadian monopoly on the championships of the sport's two major leagues.

Hockey, along with soccer, are the only two sports truly international in scope. While many sports are esteemed in a half-dozen countries hockey and soccer are played in virtually every nation.

The ice sport is also one of the roughest, and the only sport which regularly produces a boxing side show.

Which reminds us of the wildest melee we've ever seen in an athletic contest.

It involved then-Hershey Bear, but now Detroit Red Wing Poul Popiel and an aged, scarred veteran of the hockey wars, Larry Zeidel.

Zeidel is a story in himself. Off the ice, he was one of the quietest, most likeable guys you could meet. But give him a hockey stick and a pair of skates, and he became a maniac.

Zeidel, who skated with the likes of Cleveland and Philadelphia, probably holds the unofficial record for number of fights. No game was complete for "The Rock" unless he decked the opposition's toughest player. He made Max Baer look like a piker.

Unfortunately for Larry, he was not that good with his fists, and most battles ended in a stand-off. Of course, Zeidel usually pounced on his opponent unexpectedly, and was able to land a few "first punches" before the startled victim was able to retaliate.

One night three seasons ago in the Hershey Sports Arena, the Cleveland Barons were losing to the Bears, and Popiel was skating circles around Larry. "Pope" was on his way up, a young, tireless defenseman. "The Rock" was pushing 35, and couldn't put out as he once did.

After two and one-half periods of being pushed around and out-maneuvered, Zeidel saw red.

Popiel chased the puck behind the Hershey goal. Silently, Zeidel persued from the rear. He raised his stick and brought it down squarely on the back of Poul's head. Three stick swings later, both player benches emptied, and one of the wildest brawls in Sports Arena history began.

Thirty-four players were fighting for 12 minutes. When it was over, Zeidel was banished to the locker room, sans all from the waste up but a set of shoulder pads.

The "old man" stuck around hockey for two seasons after that, but never seemed the same. He had suffered the final humiliation for a hockey fighter...he had been undressed in front of 7,500 fans.

Consumers info center open

Consumers Power Company announced today the start of extended summer hours at its Big Rock Point Nuclear Information Center, five miles north of Charlevoix.

Effective immediately, the center will be open to visitors from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, seven days a week. The extended hours will continue during the summer and fall, through the end of October.

The Center is a tourist attraction all year round, but receives the largest number of visitors in the summer months. Since its opening in 1963, it has been seen by nearly 600,000 persons, more than have visited any other nuclear information center in the nation. In the 12 month period ending April 30, a total of 72,480 visitors were received at Big Rock Point.

In the Open

By Lee Smits

Larry Totton is an Eagle Scout. Larry was one of more than 300 Eagle Scouts assembled in Masonic Temple for Eagle Scout Recognition night. Each Eagle Scout was accompanied by a sponsor, and because Larry has indicated that he had in mind a career as a wildlife biologist, it was my good fortune to visit the Mouillee Marsh with him in the afternoon and accompany him to the recognition dinner in the evening.

We both were lucky to tour the big marsh with James E. Foote, of the State Natural Resources Department. It is safe to say that no one knows native wildfowl better than Jim Foote. He is also an artist, and craftsman whose paintings and decoys present a perfect image of the good old days of a super-abundance of wildfowl.

On the big Mouillee Marsh we bumped along a three-mile mud road, composed of mud dredged up by the Hy Dahlka outfit constructing ponds on the big refuge.

If a magazine cover pictured what we beheld, this old-timer would be the first to sneer. Never, the old-timer would say, could you see green-wing teal consorting with the broadbill. But that's what we did see. Also, Canada geese and whistling swan. And when Jim Foote pointed to gadwall, there they were! And spoonbill in full spring plumage, and ruddies, widgeon -- all of the native species that pause in our region during their migration flights, plus an occasional muskrat.

Then the dinner at Masonic Temple and a great talk by Jesse Owens, an all-time athletic star. The wisdom he uttered was, like all wisdom, obvious -- that the future belonged to youth.

No one would argue about that. On the list of Eagle Scouts and sponsors was included the chief interest of each scout. What encouraged this old-timer was to note that a large percentage of the Eagle Scouts wanted to be associated with the preservation, conservation, management of wildlife resources. They listed as mammalogy -- subjects that relate directly to the big subject of keeping natural resources; saving them from despoliation; making sure that coming generations will have a livable world.

Let's go back to the Mouillee Marsh, and thousands of wildfowl. Jim Foote, with a trained eye, pointing to a mixed flock, saying "Gadwall. See the white wing bars." The only marsh-duck with white wing bars being gadwall.

It was a great day, a great occasion, and Larry and his fellow Eagle Scouts give me the great hope that Michigan--and America--will be good to live in as another century rolls around.

PTA elects new officers

Only 22 members of Charlevoix's PTA appeared to elect the group's new officers last Wednesday night. These 22 members represented the 260 total membership of the PTA itself. It was only three months ago that the PTA had a standing room crowd for a discussion on the Marajuana problem. The drastic cut in attendance seems to indicate that the members are more concerned with outside discussions than they are with their own membership activities.

Although there was a very small percentage of members present, the election of new officers was held and these people were voted to the following positions: president, Fred Payne; vice-president, Mrs. Pat Bloom; teacher vice-pres., Mrs. Barbara Wilson; program chairman, Janis Glass; treasurer, Marge Saunders; secretary, Elsie Rediker; grievance committee chairman, Mrs. Hanna; membership chairman, Mrs. Verna Helms.

The turn-out at the meeting was not what was expected. But the members of the PTA hope that all those concerned and connected with the group will come out for the meeting of the Board that will be held on May 26.

Bus worth its price

Dear Editor,

As chairman of the Charlevoix School transportation committee, I would like to explain a few things to the voters of the Charlevoix School District. There seems to be a lot of talk about the $20,000 new Rayder bus, which has more or less been a sore spot, I feel, because people don't understand the circumstances relating to its purchase.

In the 7 years that I have been on the Board, six of them have been spent on the transportation committee. It might interest you to know that as far back as 1957, again in 1959, again in 1961, Charlevoix paid over $8,000 for a conventional school bus, two of which didn't even have power steering or 2 speed rear axles in them. In 1963, when I was on the transportation committee, we purchased two new ones, with the above mentioned items, plus a few more deluxe items at $6450 each. In 1965, we went to 66 passenger, which is the largest allowable in overall length in Michigan. That year we purchased 2 busses, and in 1967, we purchased four, and in 1968 we bought one conventional and these were bought for less money than it cost back in 1957. A school thirty miles north of us, just paid $8,900 plus a 1961 trade-in, which would wholesale over the block any day for $600, for a new 66 passenger conventional bus. Now if this isn't $1500 more than Charlevoix spent, I need some correction on my arithmetic.

The first question you are going to ask, is how do we do it? When we are going to make a purchase, we send out our specifications to the chassis manufacturers, and stimulate competition. We likewise, set our specifications high on the bodies that are to go on these chassis, and send out the specifications and receive competitive bids for the bodies. Thus, we are making two purchases per unit, rather than one, saving hundreds of dollars.

Last year, two members of the athletic committee came to the Board and requested that we consider purchasing a cruiser type vehicle because the teams would be required to travel further distances in the new league. At the time this was requested, we knew we were going to have probably between $40,000 and $50,000 balance left at the end of the school year. When the Board and the teachers were all sitting around the negotiations table, the $20,000 paid for the new bus came up, and I reminded one of the teachers that had earlier appeared at the board meeting and asked for this bus, that his request was honored.

In my own mind, I felt I would rather give this extra money to the kids in providing this bus, rather than splitting it up 60 ways among the teachers. First off, let's get this straight. I am not against organized labor. They have their right, but a board member has a responsibility directly to the taxpayer and the students. We were accused by the teachers of hiring an attorney, which some rumorists said would cost $5,000, to work for us in our negotiations. This turned out to cost us $1,500, and was the best money we ever spent. If you will remember that the superintendent of Petoskey had a heart attack over all this negotiating, you can see what a hard role it would be for our superintendent and board. There are some teachers today who make catty remarks about our $20,000 bus, but don't ever forget that the kids are important too.

The night we bought the bus, Traverse City's 1965 pusher bus was parked right out in front of the school doors so all the board members could examine it. They paid $23,500 for theirs in 1965. It is powered by a 401 cubic inch GMC engine, and has a maximum cruising speed of 64 miles an hour. The board voted seven to nothing in favor of purchasing a highway cruiser. Again, we spent months getting together our specifications so that we would have a fitting piece of equipment which we could be proud of. The bus chassis manufacturers were $900 apart in their base bid, and the body manufacturers were better than $1,600 apart. Our bus, in total, cost $20,500, bought three years later than the Traverse City bus. Also, our bus has $400 more engine in it (549 cubic inch) fully automatic transmission, which they don't have, (this lists for $1,900 and we paid $1,210 for it). Also, we have a $110 chrome plated front bumper. Considering the price increases, this vehicle should have cost us around $26,500. This is less than you or I as individuals could buy it, because we would have to pay excise tax, and also couldn't get any factory concessions. This is what can happen when competition is stimulated.

Since 1963, we have possibly saved $13,500 on the cost of our new busses, which we have purchased. If you take this into consideration, the new bus was paid for without costing us a cent, through a lot of time spent and keeping competitors on their toes. Out of 10 schools in our area, the latest figures that are available on transportation costs, show Charlevoix is next to the lowest in cost, and if you [illegible] check with the State Police, they will tell you that we have one of the finest fleets in the whole state of Michigan. They check our busses once a year, and always remark on the excellent condition they are in.

I know that there are many people who disagree with me, but one thing I do not have on my conscience is the fact that our kids are riding around in a bunch of unsafe old junk, that some schools have. I want you to understand that my reason for getting this Rayder bus was for the kids benefit, and not the teachers. The kids are as proud of their Rayder bus as you or I would be if we had a new Electra 225, and they treat it as such. Also, the comfort of the boys who play in sports is far superior to the conventional bus, which is very cramped between seats for long legged fellows. I feel these things are important, too. Also, if we continue to hold our expenses down, we can collect as much as 75% back on the purchase of this vehicle over a ten year period, from the state of Michigan.

I also made a very accurate check on gasoline consumption on our Senior trip, and found that the two Fords took 44 gallons each to Battle Creek, and the Rayder bus took 54 gallons, or an additional cost of $1.43 for the 255 miles. Perhaps you also don't know that the school pays 14.3 per gallon for gas.

It took exactly 60 gallons to go to Mt. Pleasant and back the other day at freeway speeds which is a gasoline cost of $8.58. Will your private automobile go 300 miles for this cost? Our cruiser will be able to keep up with the 1979 models when they come out. The maximum cruising speed GM engineers could come up with, hooked up to an automatic, was 67 MPH. The cruiser is factory governed at 3200 RPM and will cruise all day at 81 MPH if it had to, without hurting a thing. Now, don't get me wrong, just because a car will do 125 is no reason the owner is going to drive it that fast, but at sensible speeds the motor does not have to work hard and wear itself out.

You may like to know that for the last 2 years we have been using some of Frances Michelon tires. A regular BF Goodrich tire cost us $71 and for $90 we can have the finest tire made in the world, according to Consumer's Report. Kids' lives are priceless. Transportation only costs 5½% of total budget and salaries cost 82%, leaving only 12½% for all other fixed expenses. Salaries didn't use to cost over 77% of budget, and this is where the bind comes in.

I still personally feel that Charlevoix has exceptional students, and they proved that on the senior trip they took this year. Kids under supervision aren't any different than 20 years ago when I graduated. I'm still in favor of senior trips and always have been. I can remember that Homer Brady drove our class to Detroit in a bus that was almost new and at 42 miles per hour, it vibrated so bad that that was maximum speed. We left Charlevoix at 6 in the morning and arrived at the Detroit river at 4:30 in the afternoon, or 10½ hours on the road.

Today, with the highways and the cruiser we could make the Detroit river in 4½ hours. This is change, and change we must do, as the world is constantly changing. Teachers are organized, and we must accept this. Kids have to study much harder than we did, and will be more intelligent than we are. This is change.

I think we taxpayers, even though we may hate to face up to our responsibilities, must do so locally, as governmental control will never be as good as local control. Let's have local control for as long as we possibly can.

Support our school and vote Yes on June 9.

Sincerely,

Dale E. Buss

New highway

To the Editor:

It is my understanding that a new primary highway is intended to run from North of Traverse City to the Straits. U.S. 31 will become the scenic route, and one reason for creating the new highway is to bypass the bottleneck at the Pine River Channel Bridge.

The Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission apparently accepts this development and would convert the area east of Bridge Street, between Park and Clinton, to a parking lot, and make a Boulevard out of Bridge Street by placing an island down the middle of the street.

I question the wisdom of these proposals.

The highway plan would bury thousands of acres of additional land under more concrete. It would cost millions of dollars.

The bridge bottleneck would remain and any combination of increased road, and/or, channel traffic would compound the problem. ~~If~~ U.S. 31 were a secondary route it would be far more difficult to obtain State, or Federal, funds to correct it. Instead, I would suggest that Bridge Street curve east, toward Round Lake, at Clinton St. as it circles near the water front it would drop downward and cut back beneath what is now Bridge Street at Park. It would move westward beneath Park St. until deep enough to tunnel beneath Pine River Channel. It would then curve northward and emerge from the bluff above Lake Michigan north of West Dixon. The tunnel road would connect with West Dixon, which would be one-way south, and Pine River Lane, which would be one-way north.

The parking lot area could be retained, but an island in the middle of Bridge St. would obstruct traffic.

Kiwanis pool

With summer just around the corner, and swimming in our lakes in the offing, it will be easy to forget about the Kiwanis plan to build an indoor swimming pool and recreational facility.

We hope the season will not allow our minds to wander too far from this important course.

Kiwanians hosted a group from business and industry recently to discuss the pool project.

Pros and cons were aired by the guests, with a "wait and see" attitude resulting. Business and industrial leaders in the community will not jump on the bandwagon until it is put in motion by individual citizens.

If and when the residents of Charlevoix demonstrate their willingness to donate time and money to the proposal, local business and industry will act to make the plan a reality.

To this point, there has been much investigative work done by the Pool Committee, but the community at large has extended little effort.

Escrow accounts have been established in both city banks, and citizens have been asked to donate money if they are interested in the project. Donations so far have not been overwhelming.

If, indeed, this indicates there is little interest in the proposed facility, it would be foolhardy to continue the effort.

Yet, if those who want the pool have not yet acted, the time is now.

To delay construction for several years will produce needless additional cost. Building costs are skyrocketing, and the project may price itself right out of the feasible range.

Express your desires to the Kiwanis Club, and then back your feelings with a check.

Hold it!

How much longer do our people have to sit by and see our great institutions of learning turned into melees of students fighting faculty, seizing building and otherwise messing up the well ordered lives of decent people.

When such old, dignified seats of knowledge as Harvard university in Cambridge, Massachusetts, Columbia university in New York city, Cornell university and even our own Michigan State university can fall victim to bands of long haired guitar strumming kooks and their sympathizers who seize our schools and force those in authority to bow to their will.

Where are our leaders -- our statesmen, our legislators? Do we not have any one person or group of persons intelligent enough and capable enough to stop these carryings on at our college and university campuses around the nation?

If there is any sanity left in this country, those who have it should step into the breach and put a stop to all this nonsense once and for all.

School funding

(Ed. Note: The following editorial is written by Hank Hogan of the Birmingham Eccentric. It has particular value to Courier readers with the June 9 school millage election approaching.)

The crisis in funding education, which is plaguing every community in the nation, goes deeper than most people imagine.

Three years ago our Michigan law was changed to allow teachers to bargain with school districts as a group rather than individually.

The impact, to the benefit of teachers who have long been underpaid, has been tremendous on school budgets.

Since teachers salaries amount to somewhere between 80 and 85 percent of a school district's budget, every time teachers get a raise it means that the whole base of school financing has to be increased.

And as public school teachers receive increases, private and parochial schools have to raise wages to stay competitive, but they don't have the ability to go to the public for more millage so they are being priced out of business.

And because there isn't enough money, bargaining sessions between teachers and school boards are getting nastier. The former honor and prestige of being on a local school board has now degenerated into a liability, because harder work is required and because you can't please everyone. You become subject to wholesale criticism which is truly unfair.

It was noted the other day that since teachers have been given the power to bargain as a unit here in Michigan more than one-third of the school board members have either resigned or declined to seek reelection.

So instead of having better people on school boards to face this crisis, we are going in the opposite direction.

I certainly would take the position that teachers should have the right to bargain for their worth. Otherwise good teachers would leave the profession and seek employment elsewhere. But the present system is wrong.

Even though the teachers are getting more money, the price they are paying in reputation and stature in an individual community, will hurt them in the long run.

I am told that the word "crisis" in Chinese is a combination of the signs for danger and opportunity.

This crisis could be a real opportunity to review how long we now fund education and how it could be improved, and to review our present laws pertaining to teacher negotiations.

The law in the latter sense must be changed to protect both the teacher and the community, so that strikes can be a thing of the past.

Binding arbitration seems to be the answer, although unpopular to both school boards and teacher associations, but it may save education itself.

Are our leaders prepared to make this crisis an opportunity?

Viewpoint!

As I See It

by Glenn Kenney, Pres.
Charlevoix School Board

Obviously, a couple of years experience does not make a professional athlete or artist or lawyer. Neither does it make an expert on how a public school system should be run.

Nevertheless, the law states that school boards shall be composed of lay citizens (and, I think it is a good law), and highly preferable to a school system controlled completely by the State.

Your school board admits to having made some errors in judgement, or mistakes, over the course of years, and undoubtedly will continue to make them from time to time, as will the administration of the school. But, I can think of no mistake that would be as costly. . .nor as grave in consequences. . .and as unjustified as the error of voting down the millage that your Board is requesting of you now! Both requests must be passed!

School systems all over the state are in trouble--many of them much worse than ours. The state knows that changes in school financing are necessary. . .and in their own slow way will take the necessary action. In the meantime, if we allow our school systems to fall below acceptable standards (and failure to pass the millage would do JUST THAT), then we are asking for complete take-over by the state. I feel this is unthinkable!

Vote "Yes" on June 9! Yes on both requests!

My wife has developed a new respect for the Argonne Supper Club.

We stopped at the club last week, to soak up some atmosphere and listen to Wayne Belding and Al Anderson make music.

You must understand that Janet (my better half) and I have visited the club on other occasions, so our presence is not entirely new to the Argonne.

However, on this visit, after ordering some exotic concoction, they said she didn't look old enough to drink any firewater, and recommended she try a Coke.

Had it been us, we would have been offended to the point of walking out, swearing never to return.

But not Janet. She looked like she had just been named Miss America. It seems that the female, even one as young as Janet, just loves to look even younger.

The end result was one very happy wife. . . .who probably won't want to go anywhere but the Argonne.

Smokey Says:

DON'T BURN ON WINDY DAYS

Good advice — any time!

If it Fitz

It's hard to be a rotten kid

It's incredible -- but comforting - that Scurvy could still be alive and well in a Detroit burlesque theatre.

It's comforting to be reminded that kids didn't always get their behind-the-barn kicks by smoking pot and printing dirty words in school newspapers. They used to skip school and steal away to the big city to see strippers jiggle while baggy-panted comedians panted.

It's incredible that Scurvy could still be at it. I first saw him in 1942 and he didn't look too young then. But there was an ad in the Free Press, just last week, for the National Theatre. "Detroit's biggest & best burlesk." And it said "hilarious comedy by the one and only, original Scurvy." He must be 90 by now, the world's oldest Dirty Old Man.

Ah, nostalgia. . .

A dozen high school boys would leave home for school but go to the poolroom instead. We'd then break up into groups of 2 or 3 and hitch-hike 60 miles to Detroit where we'd assemble in front of the Avenue Burlesk. There was no question of a kid having his own car, or swiping his Dad's. It was early in World War II and everything was rationed except a father's wrath. But thumbing a ride was easy. When a motorist stopped, I'd tell him we were on our way to Detroit to enlist in the Marines. At the same time, my buddies would sing "Remember Pearl Harbor." I remember one old man who not only gave us a ride but also $1 each with the admonishment to "kill one for me."

The box office sign said minors weren't allowed inside the Avenue. But they had a bicycle rack outside. I was 14 the first time I went and the kids with me called me Pop. To be too young to buy a ticket to the Avenue, you had to be a fetus.

We sat in the front row. The comics were always peering down and saying something hilarious, such as "I see kindergarten got out early today." Boy, we would fall on the floor. The first comic who said this to us became famous on TV about 10 years later. Remember Pinky Lee? He was a lot funnier at the Avenue.

The prat-fallers were fun. So were the hucksters who sold pictures previously available only in France. To fully appreciate the photos, you had to hold them up to a bright light. That meant you had to go home before you learned you'd been gypped. There were dirtier pictures in the National Geographic.

But all of that was incidental. We were at the Avenue to see the girls take it off. Zowie. They'd flick their tassels right in our noses. The drummer would whop his drum, a redhead would shake her shaker, and I was a man of the world. What was there left for me to do, except maybe kiss Betty Grable? And hurry back to school to tell the sissies what they'd missed.

That was yesterday. Kids don't sneak off to burlesque houses today. Why bother? On the TV Academy Award show, Barbra Streisand showed as much skin as any Avenue stripper. Many waitresses dress below the belt only, and not much there. If a movie doesn't have a nude scene, it probably isn't a talkie.

This doesn't mean the kids are worse today. It just means the burlesque business is lousy. The strippers have diversified, with outlets on every corner, and you'd better check out the Avon lady before asking her in to meet Grandmother.

We adults have fashioned a world in which it's darn hard for Junior to feel illicit and illegal. He can't do it behind the barn because it's a glass carport. He can't do it laughing at Scurvy because Mom is home laughing at dirtier jokes on the Johnny Carson show.

That's progress, I guess, just like air conditioning and antiballistic missiles. Only an old fogey would knock it.

But please pass me a bright light while I thumb through my old scrapbooks.

Finances plague School Board; cuts likely if millage fails

Charlevoix's School Board met at noon Monday to again rehash the financial condition of the district. During the session Board members began to prepare for the slashes which must come if the operational millage request is turned down again at the June 9 election.

Board president Glenn Kenney noted that the district's $1-million plus proposed budget figure contains 81 percent for salaries. "That leaves little room to cutback without removing important programs," the president said.

The Board discussed possible budget cuts next year, stressing that the reductions are only possibilities. "We are not trying to threaten district voters," Superintendent Rex Milligan said, "only explore all areas which are possible fatalities if the budget is not approved."

In essence, the school directors are faced with the perplexing problem of gaining over $100,000 in funds to simply maintain the status quo.

Prior to the start of this school year, the district boasted a $28,000 surplus. When contract negotiations were finally completed, just before the school year began, teachers and the board settled for a larger contract than anticipated.

Not only was the surplus eaten up, but the district this year is operating on what will end up being a $20,000 deficit. Combined, the budget, due primarily to increased salaries, zoomed some $48,000 over expectations.

Next terms, the final year of the two-year teacher union contract, there is a $62,000 wage increase built-in for teachers. Added to the legal necessity of operating with a balanced budget plus normal operational costs of opening a new school, the district must somewhere find over $100,000 before September, or cut a like amount from the budget.

At Monday's meeting, drastic, distasteful budget cuts still would leave the district with a $16,000 red ledger.

POSSIBLE CUTS

For starters, all sports, music and extra curricular activities would possibly be cut.

Those programs, and the money their deletion would save, include: Athletics, $7,021; clubs, $1,953; class sponsors, $1,449; dramatics, $220; forensics and debate, $220; newspaper, $315; yearbook, $315; co-op program, $1,061; band, $504; summer band, $1,246; attendance officer, $315.

Paring the community school from the scene saves an additional $4,500; dismissing one mechanic who works 20-hours per week on school busses saves $3,000.

The above cuts save taxpayers $89,203.

BUY BOOKS

The Board also discussed the possibility of having all district pupils buy their own texts and workbooks, which the district replaces at a cost of $8,500 each year. As an example of book costs, a third grader this year used $19.62 worth of books; a fifth grader, $21.28.

LESS TEACHERS

An additional $40,584 could be saved by not re-hiring five teachers, split between the elementary, middle and upper grades.

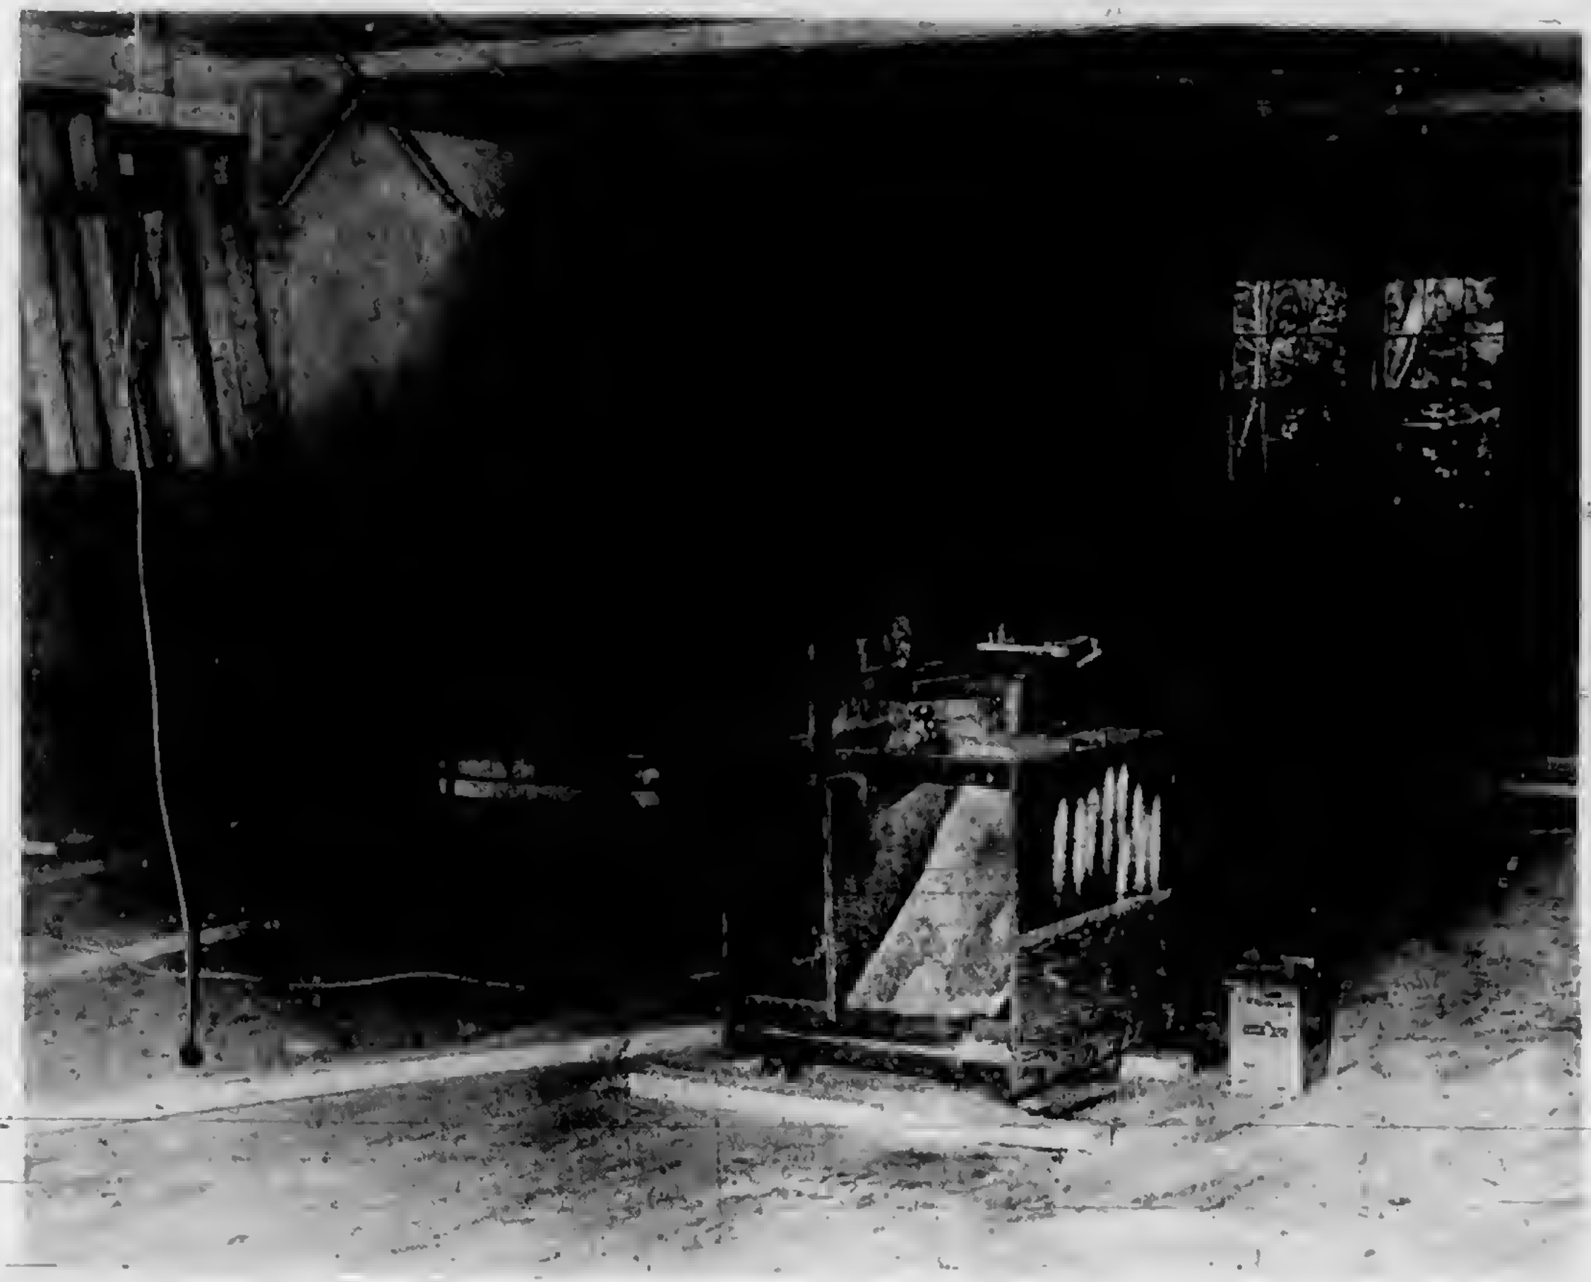
Elimination of the town school bus, all night activities at the schools (to save some $4,000 in lighting costs and extra heat), the area vocational program and travel and conference expense for teachers, are other areas where cuts will be definite possibilities if the millage fails.

COURSE LOSES

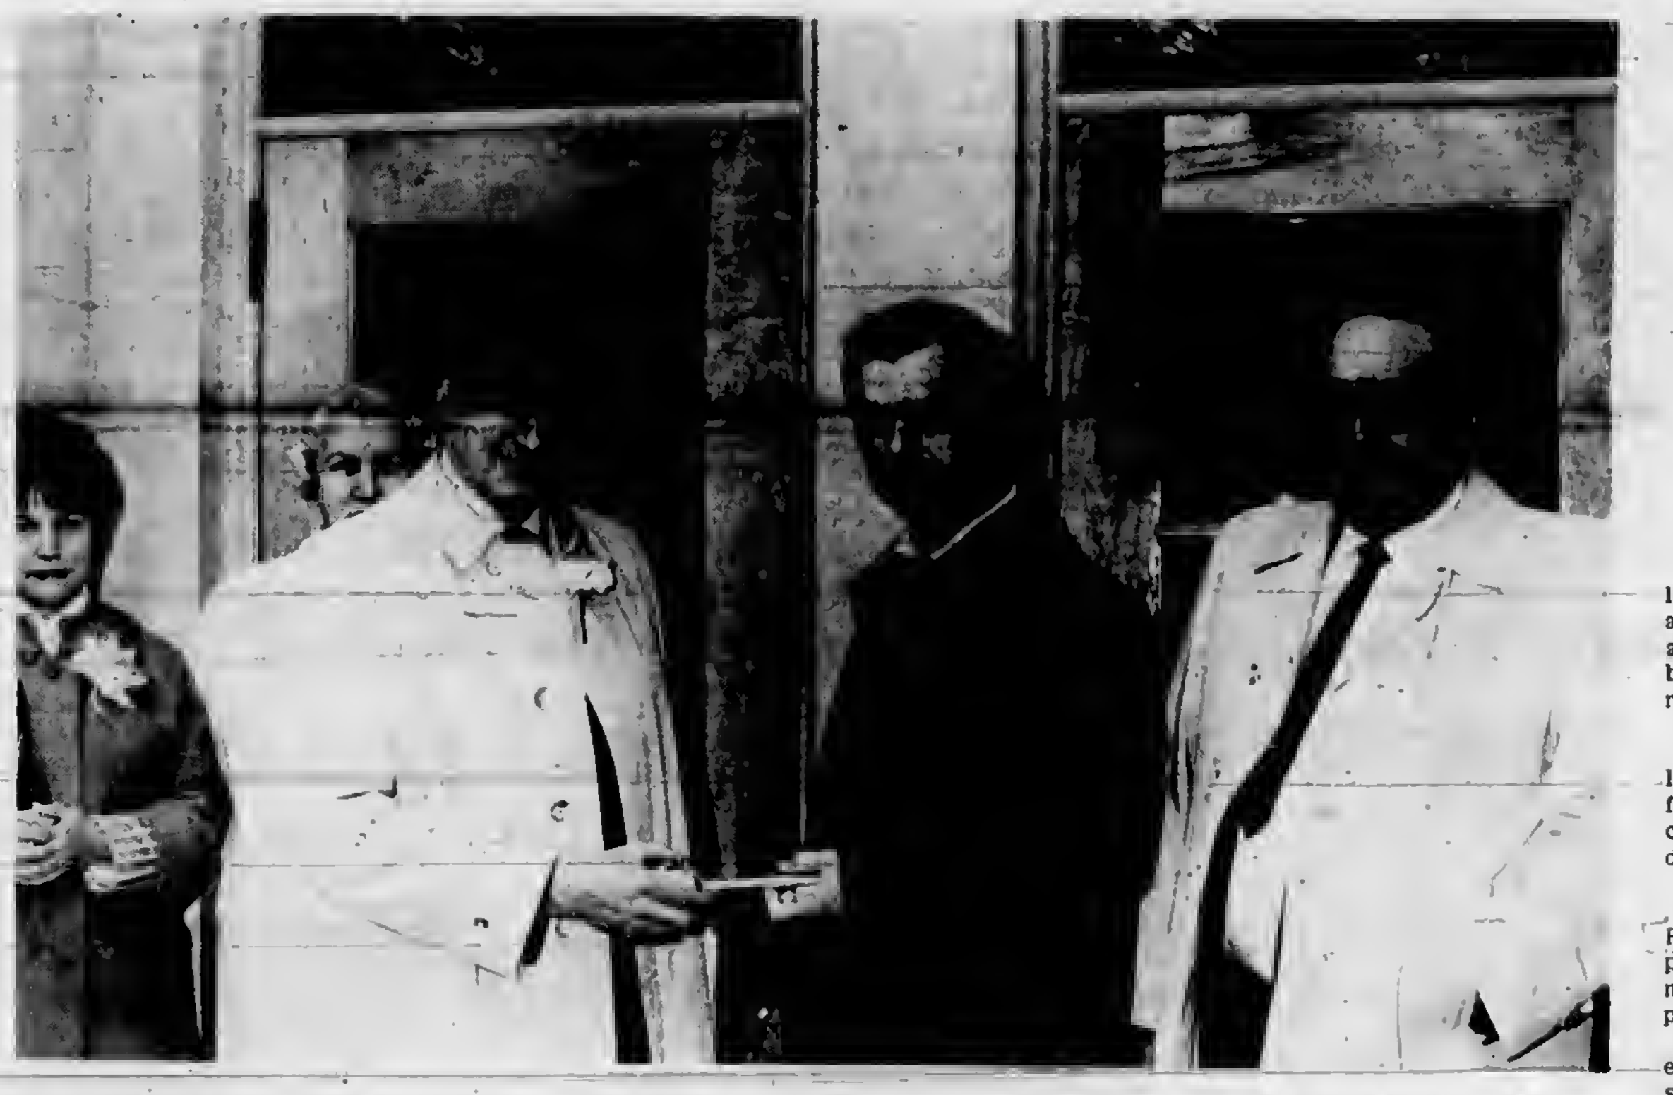
Should dismissing five teachers become mandatory, courses which would be dropped due to the personnel shortage would include study halls, bookkeeping, personal typing, shop math, second year speech, chorus, third and fourth year drafting, home and family living, drama, first and second year Spanish, office practices and senior math.

TOTAL SAVED

If all the possible cuts were made, a total budget savings of $90,853 would result. Salary reductions account for $69,203 and non-salary cuts, $21,650.



Alleged improper use--Old Casino on Meech Street, between Dixon Street and Petoskey Avenue, allegedly has been used for manufacturing purposes. Courier received several complaints. The city has reportedly told property owner Hal Forbrig to stop using building for manufacturing and warehousing.



Charlevoix Mayor Bill Fochtman presents keys to the city to Exchange Mayor Aidolph Presidio of Beaverton, while wives and city officials look on. Visiting Beaverton during Michigan Week's mayor exchange program was mayor protem Robert Gill and counciiman Jack Mol. Beaverton is community of approximately 1,000 residents, to southeast of Charlevoix, near Clare.

Casino houses shop; city issues order

City officials reportedly have ordered Hal Forbrig to "cease and desist" from any industrial or manufacturing functions at the old gambling casino on Meech Street, between Dixon Street and Petoskey Avenue.

The action came late last week, following a Courier investigation stemming from complaints concerning a pre-fabrication business operating in the partially-demolished building.

It was also determined that the city told Forbrig, owner of the property, to remove pre-fabricated walls and siding, and equipment used in their manufacture, from the premises.

As of Monday morning, two pieces of equipment, including a power saw, and stacks of apparently completed walls remained in the building.

The property is zoned residential, and the city zoning ordinance forbids industrial or manufacturing at such locations.

City officials told the Courier that repeated requests for demolition of the casino have been met with little action from Forbrig.

Officials further indicated that legal action may be forthcoming.

The situation at the property is not new to Charlevoix resident.

Once a gambling casino which attracted thousands over the years from Detroit and Chicago, the luxurious dwelling has fallen into disrepair.

Officials and members of City Council term it "an eyesore at best. . .a definite fire and safety hazard."

Bordering property owners speak with much harsher words when the subject is brought up.

A brief inspection of the property last week revealed:

•The rear yard area cluttered with debris.

•An open staircase rising some 30-feet to the third floor of the building. There is no enclosure at the top of this stairway, and a slip would mean a fall to cement 30 feet below.

•No attempt to block entry has been made. Youngsters are frequent visitors to the property. . .the dangers of easy access are obvious.

•Inside, debris is heavily scattered throughout, including stuffing from discarded feather pillows, old playing cards and sawdust. Should a fire start on the premises, it would be most difficult to get out of the building.

Forbrig told the Courier yesterday afternoon that "time and finances are the biggest stumbling block to demolition."

He stated that his work crews would be on the premises this week to remove the equipment and walls within 10 days.

Carr discusses school

With the start of the 1969-70 school year in September, Charlevoix's district will begin operation of a Middle School.

Raymond O. Carr, now principal of the high school, will become the head of the new school. Carr is looking forward to the assignment.

"This will be a very interesting assignment to me," Carr said. "I have worked with this grade level in the past. These youngsters appreciate education a lot. Their interests are varied and intense. At this age, they still become excited with learning."

"They're full of enthusiasm, and if you can direct this enthusiasm in the proper channel, you'll see results. Basically, that's the job...to direct that enthusiasm toward the proper goals," Carr stated.

Carr's experience has prepared him for the job. He has been the principal of the local high school for the past three years.

Prior to moving to the Charlevoix district, he was the superintendent of the Lake City school system.

Carr feels that the transition from the two-school system to the three, or Middle School, style will pose few problems.

"The only drawback, if you can label it that, is that we won't be able to develop a 'new building' program. We have to establish the program to fit the existing building," he said.

"Remodeling the present elementary school is primarily to meet fire and electrical standards. The physical changes will not be too extensive."

"Right now, we hope the labor strike is settled quickly, and no more construction time is lost," the principal added.

Raymond Carr

Just what is a Middle School?

Carr related that "the concept is relatively new, really. If you were to survey the state, you would find a variety of grade combinations that make up middle schools."

"We will use the fifth through eighth grade plan. We feel that these grades have more in common in many respects."

Loder: "C of C benefits entire community"

by Claudia Bost

The residents of Charlevoix are under the watchful eye of a well known organization. The members of this group are few in number, but are greatly responsible for rendering a wide variety of services to our community.

We are speaking about the Chamber of Commerce. A recent talk with Wally Loder, secretary - manager of the Chamber, about their activities, revealed that this organization not only provides help for our local residents, but also gives assistance to those outside our community.

When Loder was first appointed to his position in 1967, he personally felt there was a large gap between business organizations and the general public.

After spending a few years working with the Chamber, he now feels the gap is being narrowed, but still has a way to go. He thinks there should be more person - to - person contact between the Chamber and the public.

There seems to be a general misconception that the Chamber of Commerce is only interested in the business community. "This," Loder stated, "is not true. The Chamber is a benefit to the community as a whole, not being limited on a basis for industry only. We don't play favorites."

As he put it, the Chamber's primary purpose and function is to advance and exploit industry, community, education, recreation, civics, resort, and agriculture of the city of Charlevoix and her surrounding areas.

Adult health tests offered in May, June

An adult health screening test will be offered in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties May 19 through June 13. The screening tests are available at no charge to residents 21 years of age and over by appointment, according to Dr. Robert S. Libke, director of District Health Dept.

Dr. Libke urges all eligible residents to call the Health Dept. Offices (In Petoskey, 347-2421, and Charlevoix, 547-6523) for an appointment as soon as possible.

"The main purpose of the tests is to discover hidden chronic disease in its early, most treatable stage. However, the chances are that most people will have no abnormal findings and this can be reassuring," Dr. Libke said.

Usually included in the group of adult health screening tests are: electrocardiograms, a chest x-ray, blood tests for detection of possible diabetes, anemia, high cholesterol, and kidney diseases; and a urinalysis and blood pressure determination. A self-administered medical history is also taken, in addition to height and weight measurements.

"An appointment is necessary as the health test trailer has only a limited capacity. Because of this, we must plan ahead so there will be ample time to give each person the complete set of tests," Dr. Libke added.

The tests take approximately 30 minutes and serve as an indicator of the presence of possible chronic disease or other health problems.

"I'd like to make it clear that the tests are in no way a substitute for a complete doctor's examination. And an indication of a possible disease does not represent a diagnosis--only the possibility that an abnormality is present," Dr. Libke observed.

The health test trailer will be located at the Gray Memorial Building, Petoskey, May 19-29; and Christ Lutheran Church, Boyne City, June 2-13.

The adult health screening tests are sponsored by the District Health Dept., the Northern Michigan Medical Society, and the Michigan Dept. of Public Health.

Museum visit for Edwards

Louis Edwards, 400 Prospect Street, Charlevoix, recently visited the state-owned Ringling Museums while vacationing on Florida's lower west coast.

The Ringling Museums are the foremost cultural center in southeastern United States. Situated on 68 tropically landscaped acres in Sarasota, they were a gift of John Ringling to the state, and are operated in the cultural and education interests of Florida residents and visitors.

They consist of the Museum of Art, famed for its outstanding collection of Baroque art; the Asolo Theater, only original 18th century Italian theater in America; the Ringling Residence, "Ca'd'Zan," a $1,600,000 Venetian Gothic palazzo; and the Ringling Museum of the Circus, the first museum dedicated to the history of the circus.

In addition to exhibiting the permanent collection, the Museums' functions include a diversified program of temporary art exhibitions, art education services, lectures, films, concerts, chamber music, a winter opera season and a winter and summer festival of plays by the Asolo Theater Festival company, the official state theater of Florida.

420 certificates for water safety

The Charlevoix county chapter of the American Red Cross has announced that their water safety program for 1968 was very successful.

An indication of their success was evident after they issued 420 water safety certificates to the many children who participated in this program.

The chapter wants to thank the following instructors, for their fine work during last year's season. Connie VanHouten, Janet Krulik, Mark Bourgoin, Nancy Novak, Marilyn Novak, Michael Robinson, Richard Dietrick, Carol McWayn, Robert Washburn, Nancy Vail, Elizabeth Hec, Thomas Thurston, Kay Mehllseh, Allan Lusk and Patty LaLone.

Charles B. Lander, executive secretary of the chapter, of East Jordan, said he hopes this impressive water safety record is "only the beginning of many more to follow."

Girl Scouts of Troop 265 apply paint brushes to camp building.

Girl Scout Troop 265 bee mixes work, fun

Girl Scout Troop 265 had a work bee session mixed with a little fun last Tuesday evening, May 12.

The girls walked from the Congregational Church out to the camp site, armed with paint brushes. The Scouts had set out to paint the new lavatory, which Alex Moore put up for them last summer.

After their work detail, the girls enjoyed a chicken Bar-B-Que at the campground, next to the Belvedere Golf course.

Twenty girls participated in the outing. The Scouts decided that their leader, Dorothy Russell, and assistant leader, Gloria Webster, were a bit softer and had more tender feet than the Scouts themselves.

Hospital Guide

The monthly meeting of the Charlevoix Hospital Women's Guild was held a week early on May 5, at the meeting room of the hospital. It was under the direction of the newly elected officers, Mrs. Gordon Freedman, president; Mrs. Albert Segar, secretary; Miss Eleonore Schultz, treasurer; and Mrs. Milford Saunders, corresponding secretary.

The Guild hopes to purchase three new television sets, fully equipped with earphones and remote control, which will be available to patients for their use on a rental basis. These should be available in the next few weeks, and it is hoped they will be enjoyed by those confined for any length of time.

Three life memberships were received at the membership coffee held on April 29. This was termed a success by all concerned. Members were encouraged to contact all neighbors and friends to complete the membership list. Anyone interested in joining or needing a ride to the meetings should contact Mrs. Gordon Freedman.

The Kitchen Tour, to be held July 16, from 1 to 4 p.m. is progressing well. All members are urged to participate, as this is the one big community effort, and the Guild hopes to involve a large response, while enjoying the beautiful homes in the area.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER

At this writing, Saturday, May 17, I understand there will be another article in this paper having to do with the Chamber of Commerce, and accordingly, I feel I should lessen the space of this column usually allowed.

I have a communication from the chairman of the Jordan Valley Festival in cooperation with the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce indicating this festival to be held July 4, 5, and 6. As usual, it appears to be another success, as again, in addition to the Chamber of Commerce, the civic clubs are taking part, including the volunteer firemen, Lions Club, little league, Rotary Club, and the snowmobilers. Friday, July 4, the kids will have the day, games, prizes, contests, and parades.

In the afternoon, the little league will perform with a ball game, and in the evening they will have a boat parade in their harbor.

Saturday, July 5 stunt flying (not definite). At 12 noon sno-mobilers will have drag races. Also the East Jordan Rotary Club will have a barbecue. At 2:30 p.m. is the queen's luncheon: 4 p.m. is the Jordan Valley Festival parade, the biggest and best in northern Michigan; 10 p.m., fireworks in the harbor. Sunday, July 6, a.m. is church service, and p.m. is parachute jumpers (not definite). All three days there will be a carnival for all ages.

They extend an invitation to any club, group, or organization who wish to take part in the parade. Check further with this office or contact the chairman of the parade, Joseph Wilkins, 536-2326. They indicate cash prizes will be awarded to the best entries.

They expect us to have our city float in the parade bedecked with our queen and at least four or more of the court. Therefore, girls, do not go away.

Our monthly board meeting was attended by directors Lyle Mile, Tom Acton, Gordon Neff, Davo Juilleret, Ralph Hess, jr., John Schroeder, Larry LaGrow, and Tom Hanna. Absent was Bruce Bartlett, new appointee, who was out of the state. The meeting was quite tame, and was considerably pro and con of our annual events, needed money and new membership. There were no issues actually to be enacted upon. It was necessary to have representatives from both committees of the Waterfront Art Fair and the Lakeside Hobbycraft Show, in order to straighten out a couple of minor things.

I noticed an article in the current Marine News that a sizable number of interested citizens, possibly 700, with a fleet of cranes, trucks, bulldozers, boats of all descriptions, May 3 and 4 turned out to clean up about ten miles of Clinton River, a fantastic display of community effort. The headquarters for this civic minded group operation was at MacArthur Park at Mt. Clemens. All the operations on the river extend from Mt. Clemens to Lake St. Clair and this was controlled by radio through the efforts of Radio Emergency Association, Citizens Team. That is one way to get things done.

The Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the County Board of Supervisors Cooperative at Beulah, Michigan, is sponsoring the first membership meeting of the Michigan Sport-Fishing Charter Association, Inc. to be held Thursday, May 22, at 2 p.m. in the Board of Directors Room at Caberfae Lodge, Cadillac. This organization was formed for Charter boat operators who are interested in marketing safe, high quality recreation on the Great Lakes. I understand that persons interested are welcomed at this meeting.

Weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Allard of Charlevoix were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Polderdyk of Grand Rapids.

Library Notes

With attention still focused on Michigan history, the Library suggests a list of books for research projects about the state or as get-acquainted-with-Michigan material or simply as books to re-read or refresh memories.

CHILD OF THE SEA--by Elizabeth Whitney Williams--the quaint story of the lighthouse keeper's daughter who lived on Beaver Island among the Mormons.

THE SAGA OF BEAVER ISLAND by Margaret Cronyn and John Kenny, a modern interpretation of the history of the island.

THE LONG SHIPS PASSING by Walter Havighurst, an all-time favorite and one of the genuine classics on Michigan History.

THE IRON HUNTER, another Michigan classic, written by Chase Osborne, is not the kind of autobiography the conventional governor of a state would write. Osborne was primarily a newspaper man and he wrote like one.

BOOM COOPER by Angus Murdoch, deserves a place on the shelf of every private or public library containing books on Michigan history. The story of the first U.S. Mining Boom, it is one of the most readable, hard-to-put-down books ever written about our state.

HISTORIC MACKINAC is a two-volume set which is part of the Babst Memorial Library. This historical and legendary account of the Mackinac Country is well illustrated with sketches, drawings, maps and photographs.

ISLAND LIFE IN LAKE MICHIGAN, published by the Cranbrook Institute of Science, is a study in animal geography. It deals with the mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians of the Lake Michigan islands lying off the northwest shores of the Lower Peninsula.

LEGENDS OF MICHIGAN AND THE OLD NORTH WEST is a cluster of personal memoirs and stories and legends with particular emphasis on Indian customs and traditions. It is illustrated with particularly fine ink drawings, and it was originally published in 1875.

Recommended for children are the two delightful stories by Bernice Wexstaff, HAUNT OF HIGH ISLAND and BLACK PANTHER OF THE GREAT LAKES. YOUNG MISTER BIG, by William Ratigan is a juvenile account of the Soo Canal and its builder, Charles Harvey.

A special group of books on Michigan will be on display in the library. Some of these books cannot be circulated, but patrons are urged to come in and enjoy them in the reading room.

Saints be praised!

The powers that be in Vatican City baffle me. While millions of Catholics are concerned about married clergy, divorce laws and birth control, the V.C. Club is concerning itself with the saints.

Now I can take or leave St. Gervase or St. Frontese but when the Vatican black balled St. Christopher, it got my Irish up. As far as I know no one in the United States was gunning for him. I hadn't read any editorials or heard a single speech demanding his expulsion from the list of saints. Yet here he is without a word of warning--canned, and just at the time when the sale of St. Christopher medals was at an all time high.

I for one just got a brand new St. Christopher medal to put on our brand new fibreglass sail boat. What will I do with it now? Throw it in the channel? Without the medal will our boat end up there too?

And that's not the worst of it. Our number one son is named Christopher Doyle Begrow. I had hoped that St. Christopher would watch over him and protect him from spiritual harm. But now I find that St. Christopher is only a legend.

Action and Reaction

My only hope now is to have some Doyle made a saint, but since I was born a Doyle I realize their shortcomings, strong-willed, hot-tempered and sharp-tongued. The possibility of a Doyle becoming a saint is highly improbable. That would really make headlines.

And what about my own patron saint, St. Patrick? He was pretty courageous to live as a slave in Ireland all those years and then after escaping actually choose to return and teach the Irish. I really admire St. Patrick and take him seriously. On March 17, I usually go to mass and communion in his honor. Now are they going to wipe him out too? He's already been knocked off the universal calendar. He's now an optional saint for countries to honor or not as they wish.

I know that that snake bit is fallacy for there weren't any snakes in Ireland. Is there too little known about St. Patrick to keep him on the saints' roster at all? Should I be looking for another saint? Can I really change my name from Pat to Frances at this late date?

Maybe the Vatican just created a tempest in a teapot to get our minds off the really important decisions that need to be made in the church. This whole thing might just be a Vatican public relations gimmick to catch us off base.

Just to play safe I think that I'll go ahead and tack up my St. Christopher medal on the new boat. After all they were wrong about Galileo.

Recipe of the week

Celebrate Pickle Week

International Pickle Week is May 22-31, according to Pickle Packers International, Inc. Celebrate by going on a picnic and taking along some pickles. No picnic is complete without pickles! Here are two pickle-spiced recipes to try on your next outing.

Pic-L-Nic Bean Bake
(Makes 6 servings)

Combine in 1½-quart baking dish: 2 cans (1 pound each) pork and beans in tomato sauce, ½ cup drained sweet mixed pickles, 3 tablespoons bottled barbecue sauce, 1 tablespoon dark molasses, ½ teaspoon dry mustard and ¼ teaspoon onion powder. Bake uncovered in 350° (moderate) oven 30 minutes—or until bubbling. Garnish with strips of sweet gherkins.

Pickle Cole Slaw
(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

Mix together: 6 cups finely chopped cabbage, 1 cup shredded carrot, ½ cup chopped celery, 1/3 cup chopped sweet fresh cucumber pickles, 2 tablespoons sweet pickle liquid, 1 tablespoon grated onion, ¾ cup mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon oregano, 1/8 teaspoon pepper and 1/8 teaspoon dry mustard. Chill. Garnish with pickle fan.

When Dad Cooks

With longer days and warmer weather here, chances are Dad has resumed his rightful place at the barbecue grill. Naturally he wants to look like a professional. No burned steaks or underdone hamburgers for him. Everything has to be perfect.

When Dad's cooking for a crowd, there'll be no mixup on the degree of doneness of steaks or hamburgers when you provide him with a box of colored toothpicks. He can use blue toothpicks for rare, red for medium-rare, yellow for medium and green for well-done. That way, everyone will get exactly what he ordered.

Professionals put their specialties on Thomas' English muffins, so why shouldn't Dad? Chefs in the know have discovered that the most tender steak sandwich or juicy hamburger tastes run-of-the-mill on a characterless, humdrum hamburger bun, so serve the best with Thomas' English muffins and taste the difference.

Meggison, Bergmann Win at Cheboygan

Tom Bergmann and Bruce Meggison captured the only wins for Charlevoix's track team at the Cheboygan Invitational meet last Wednesday, as the Rayders finished in third place, behind strong Petoskey and Rogers City.

Bergmann took top honors in the two-mile run and Meggison won the high jump, going 5'8½".

The meet was a near repeat of the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference event recently at Petoskey.

Other Rayders scoring points were: Wayne Wilks, fourth in the pole vault; Gordon Soloman, fourth in the long jump, 18'8"; Jerry Parsel, fifth in the mile, 5:02; Bob DeYoung, fourth in the 120-yard high hurdles, :17; Terry Elzinga, second in the 880-yard dash, 2:08.5; Stewart Coleman, fifth in the 180-yard low hurdles, :23; Kraag Lieberman, second in the 220-yard dash, :23.75.

Charlevoix's runners also took second in the mile relay with a time of 3:45, and second in the 880-yard relay in 1:39.

The Rayders will close out the regular season with the State meet Saturday at Mt. Pleasant.

Meet scores: Petoskey, 73; Rogers City, 42; Charlevoix, 36; Boyne City, 19½; Cheboygan, 17½; Traverse City St. Francis, 17; Alpena Catholic, 13; Gaylord, 5.

Sports Shorts

Normally during the course of a long major league baseball season, every team hits its "low" spots. In fact, all professional teams whose schedules run over five or six months of the year will hit valleys. Usually, they are of short duration, and come near the middle and end of the season.

Such is not the case this year with the lowly Cleveland Indians. Starting their second season under the reign of Alvin Dark, the Indians looked pretty good on paper...not pennant-winners mind you, but respectable and above .500.

When opening day came, the roof fell in for the Injuns. They couldn't do anything right. When the hitters produced runs, the hurlers were tossing grapefruit.

When the mound corps held the opposition to two or three runs, their batters couldn't get a man past second.

Just when it seemed that tee-totaler Dark was driven to drink, the Indians finally won two games in a row last week.

At long last, the slump may be over. It's already too late to hope for salvation this season. At this early date, it is apparent the Indians have little chance to climb from the basement without a miracle.

The road to a .500 season is not out of reach, however. The Indians the past few seasons have been strong finishers, and Dark may be able to lead them back to respectability in the months ahead.

In the meantime, Detroit's claim to fame, the Tigers, have been stumbling along at a .500 pace. This is certainly not condusive to a repeat World Series performance, but the season is young, and with warmer weather in the offing, Detroit should pick up and defend its throne come October.

In the Open

IN THE OPEN
By Lee Smits

In high school we had what our science teacher called a "vivarium", a screened cage about 10 feet square with a metal tank containing water, sod, plants -- a miniature swamp.

We stocked our vivarium with snakes, turtles, frogs. We introduced two meadow mice which we never saw because they stayed underground.

Football practice at the fairgrounds was interrupted by the mysterious appearance, half a mile from any body of water, of an enormous bullfrog which became an inmate of our mini zoo. One by one the vivarium exhibits disappeared. Presently there was only the bullfrog and a garter snake two feet long. The frog was striving to swallow the snake. Whether the frog started from the head, tail or middle of the snake, it could not succeed. The snake refused to cooperate.

Our frog died within a few days for no visible reason. We performed an autopsy and discovered remains of small frogs and snakes, turtles and field mice within the frog. We also found, encysted, a number of hair-snakes. (Uninformed kids believed the hair-snakes were generated from horse hair, immersed in stagnant water.)

Our school library had no book about bullfrogs and all the bullfrog lore this old-timer has accumulated has been provided by bullfrogs themselves.

Like near Waterford, in Oakland County, many years ago an elderly farmer took me with him, garnering bullfrogs. We found them abundant. As we spread out our catch on the farmer's back porch I asked him what bullfrogs ate.

"Bugs", he said.

Informed by our high school research, I preceeded to open up the bullfrogs. They had dined well, on infant turtles, fledgling blackbirds, minnows, crayfish. An adult bullfrog's mouth is at least two inches in diameter and it will devour any living thing that fits its mouth.

Of course a bullfrog is a choice item of food for a host of meat-eaters; hawks, owls, snakes, mink, pike, and, I suspect, an occasional muskrat, seeking variety.

It was a sad day for frogs when man discovered their toothsomeness. In a far-off era when roadhouses served shore dinners, young marsh-dwellers would stand at a bar with pails of froglegs, paying for drinks with froglegs.

Nowadays froglegs are in mass production in Japan. There is a secret that the Japanese evidently have mastered; the feeding of captive bullfrogs. It seems that a frog won't eat anything that isn't alive and moving. Just how the Japanese persuade their frogs to eat hasn't been revealed. Froglegs from Japan reach our markets frozen, by air express. The Japanese froglegs are all standard size, about eight inches in length, apparently all of the same age category.

Froglegs are not served in all American cities, but only in localities where the French influence prevailed. Many Americans regard froglegs as unfit for human consumption. As bad as snails. As a youth in a lumber camp this writer collected a batch of froglegs on a Sunday afternoon and had difficulty in borrowing a skillet to cook them in over a fire on the riverbank. He was pointed out from then on as a person who actually ate froglegs.

It might seem that catching bullfrogs was not a high form of sport. The silly critters advertise their presence by sounding off at night. The hunter paddles a canoe to the spot where a frog is broadcasting, then, blinding the poor critter with a flashlight, shoots it in the head with a .22 shot shell, or snatches it in a landing net or merely makes a fast grab by hand. A fishing license is required for frog-snatching, a hunting license if a firearm is used.

Without a frog book at hand, the theory might be ventured that bullfrogs are subject to population cycles. There will be times when, in late fall, shallow water in marshes swarm with giant tadpoles. Five or six years is required for a bullfrog to reach full size, and then a marsh will be dotted with them, all clamoring to be killed. Or so it seems to an old-timer who, in his youth, pursued bullfrogs.

By the way, if you harvest the big ones, you should utilize the whole frog, fore and aft, instead of merely the hind legs.

3 Rayders qualify for state finals

Three Charlevoix track team members plus the mile relay team qualified for the state finals at Mt. Pleasant with good performances during the rain-soaked regionals at Traverse City last weekend.

As a team, the Rayders finished second, behind Scottville of Mason County. Scottville finished with 36 points, while CHS scored 29.

Capturing firsts for the local team were Bruce Meggison in the high jump, 5'8"; Duane Wilks, with a 10-foot height in the pole vault; and the mile relay team, covering the distance in 3:48.3.

Other point makers for Charlevoix were Don Ward who placed fourth in the shot put; Gordon Solomon, fifth in the long jump; Tom Bergmann, fifth in the two mile run; Terry Elzinga, second in the 880; Kraag Lieberman, fifth in the 100 yd. dash; Jerry Parsel, fourth in the mile.

Following the two leaders were: Alpena Catholic Central, 22 points; Grayling, 17, TC St. Francis, 17; Gaylord, 7; Onaway, 4, Kalkaska 2.

Pistol team beats Petoskey in match

Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club's pistol team won a match over Petoskey last Thursday by a score of 1095 to 1014, at their club house.

Shooting for the Charlevoix team was Dave Larson with a .285; Ed May scored 271; Herb Boss shot 273 and Frank Zednicek fired a 266.

Only four of Charlevoix's team was scored as the result of Petoskey only putting four shooters on the firing line for the match.

The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club Pistol team meets every Thursday evening at the Club House on US 31, North of Charlevoix. All persons who are interested in pistol shooting are welcome.

The third Thursday of each month is reserved for inter-club matches.

Kraag Lieberman sloshes through the mud at last Saturday's regionals at Traverse City. Lieberman won this heat of the 220-yard dash.

The men of our Church finished cleaning the church yard by burning the dry grass over the backyard Thursday evening and Friday evening. Don Bennett with his rototiller made a space and planted petunias on each side of the walk and all in time for the rain on Saturday. May is Cleanup Month, and we want Ironton to be shining by Decoration Day.

Once again we received the word that our local Post Office would be discontinued May 30, which we feel and know would be a severe loss to our community as we have about 50 families, and our village is growing steadily each year. We need our post office which pays for itself, including the salary of our Postmistress, Mrs Mary Bennett, who is most efficient. Perhaps this year it will make more through stamp and money order sales, and we also do not wish to lose our Ironton postmark after having it since about 1885 when Ironton was more than a village. After a weeks' anxiety, we received the word that the closing order was being canceled and we could still have the convenience of our own Post Office. We are extending our "Many Thanks" to Uncle Sam.

The Ladies Fellowship will meet tonight.

School edit response

To the Editor:

The voters rejected the millage requests presented by the Charlevoix School District. The response of the School District administration was that the budget is already so tight that beneficial programs will have to be cut.

The editorial response of the Courier was, "However, now let us benefit from the "No" voter's vast knowledge. Those who cast negative votes certainly must have better ideas which will afford equally good schools at less money, or they would have passed the requests."

"Come forward! The Board awaits your money - saving ideas. Tell the administrators and the Board members how to improve our schools and save money in the process."

Although I did not vote on this issue, the "No" voters do have a case.

On Feb. 19 the PTA sponsored a meeting, and exhibit, on materials centers at the High School. A chart of Audio-visual equipment Inventories and Recommended purchases, needs as recommended by the National Audio-Visual Ass'n, N.E.A., Charlevoix Teachers' Committee and others, was supplied to those who attended. They recommended an expenditure of $32,497.82 on Audio-Visual equipment for the three schools that will be in the Charlevoix system during the five year period of the millage proposal.

At this meeting was an administrator of the Instructional Media Department of the Grand Haven Public Schools to promote acceptance of these materials by showing what the progressive district of Grand Haven has done in this field. The information that she supplied revealed that the much larger district of Grand Haven provided only $24,841.22 worth of Audio - Visual equipment to ten schools over a five year period.

She also supplied, "Proposed Standards For Media Programs 1968," which compared the 1960 Standards for School Library Program with the proposed new ones.

Instead of $4-$6 per student per year for printed materials the new recommendations will be 3% of the average student cost be spent on printed materials and another 3% on audio-visual equipment.

For books, instead of the old 10 books per pupil it will be 25-50 volumes per pupil. Magazines: 50-75 titles for elementary schools, 125 - 175 for secondary schools. Also detailed standards for a professional collection.

Ready access to one 16 mm. film title per teaching station, with at least 1000 titles, supplemented by duplicates and rentals; and an average of 12 film "procurements" per teaching station per school year.

For 8mm films, introduced into the present version, one and a half 8mm films per student, a basic collection of at least 500 titles, supplemented by duplication. With similar requirements for filmstrips, tapes and discs, slides, transparencies and masters, study prints, art prints, plus maps, dioramas, videotapes, graphs, models, realia, dial access programs, pictures and charts.

Space accommodations have been jumped from 10% to 15% of the student enrollment, though the standards warn that some programs may need to seat anywhere from 1/3 to 3/4 of the students in the library at any one time. That warning looks like a sleeper for the future.

The emphasis of the Standards is on quantity rather than quality, which is one aspect of education that the Courier did criticize editorially.

Just as the educational-industrial complex escalate their requirements, most government agencies, from defense to dog catcher, do the same until, collectively, they could cheerfully absorb the entire gross national product.

Gentlemen:

I have been very disappointed (sic) in your editorials the last while.

I used to look at the editorials first to know what was going on in town, or the things that could or should be done but now I find that it is only the run of the mill news that you could find in any daily paper any day of the week.

Maybe other people enjoy it but I just had to give you my five cents worth.

Lousy litter

The Great Lakes Charter fishing boats seem to be a very good idea for recreational promotion of our beautiful lakes. However, it should be made known to them and those who use them, that we wish to keep our lakes beautiful. This we cannot do if they refuse to cooperate.

For quite some time now, there has been much emphasis on litter. It is shameful and disgusting to watch these people tossing such trash as beer cans into the water. The disposable cans and bottles, I'm sure, were not made to be thrown just anywhere they happen to be when they're empty. When disposable containers were thought of, it was for convenience, and ease of handling (mainly, no bottles to return to the store).

It seems to me that it would be just as easy to toss debris into a bag or carton and emptied on return of these boats to their docks. This surely isn't too much to ask? After all, as a guest in someone's home, you wouldn't dream of dropping things all over the floor, or grinding out a cigarette butt on their carpet? Then why throw it in the water?

If these adults (?) have to be reprimanded for littering what can be expected of the children? A child learns by watching, and imitating adults. Is this something you want to teach them? To litter?

It should be brought to the attention of Neff Brothers and Mr. Ison, that the citizens of Charlevoix will not tolerate such abuse of our waterways.

We cannot expect to have these beautiful lakes if they are treated in this manner.

Skippergosh in exercise

USS GUADALCANAL -- Seaman Apprentice Lawrence F. Skippergosh, USN, son of Mr. Lawrence J. Skippergosh of 104 Carpenter St., Charlevoix, is aboard the USS Guadalcanal in the Caribbean off Puerto Rico.

The ship is participating in a joint service, amphibious and airborne exercise, "Operation Exotic Dancer II." The exercise is designed to test and improve existing joint service procedures.

Elements of Army and Air Force units as well as Naval ships and aircraft and Marine Corps units are participating in the 14-day operation.

Amphibious forces are using both surface attacks on beaches and airborne assaults with helicopters from ships off shore.

During the exercise, Atlantic Fleet ships and aircraft are simulating shore bombardment and air strikes in support of the amphibious forces.

Ex-teacher on letter

Editor, Courier:

It was with some interest that I read the letter in the Courier of May 14 from Mr. Boss. It was just this sort of thinking which caused me to leave teaching.

In several places, Mr. Boss took pains to point out that the money for that "super bus" was spent for the kids-- not the teachers -- implying strongly that the teachers were for themselves only and not the kids.

This type of feeling robs teachers of faith in the community and respect for their profession.

You see, teachers are overwhelmingly interested in kids. If a guy wants to loaf, he can find countless better ways than in a room with 30 sets of eager eyes. These people spend hours every night preparing for the next day. They spend nights and summers taking extra college work to meet certification requirements, and then face criticism for wanting so much money for such a soft job.

I, for one, am glad to be shut of it. My present position may not yield the rich personal rewards of directly influencing young minds, but my efforts are truly appreciated. I'm better paid, and I've no work to take home at night. The overwhelming pressure of inquisitive minds, paper work and critical citizens are gone.

I have digressed. My disappointment in finding the "bitter-citizen-syndrome" in a board member set me off. That bus may indeed be the fine thing for Charlevoix which Mr. Boss contends, but his lack of esteem for the professionals who make the school go is appalling. Without good teachers at the school, why have a school bus at all?

Sincerely,

Mrs. Alessandra Spieles

As I see it

By Glenn L. Kenny, President, Charlevoix School Board

A funny thing happened to me on my way to Charlevoix 10 years ago. Somebody told me the school system in Charlevoix was terrific!

When you move to any new area, you are immediately concerned about the kind and quality of churches in the area, and the hospital and health facilities, and the school facilities. Ask anybody that has moved into this area in the past 10 years what answer they got when they inquired about our school system, and they will almost all tell you that they heard it was supposed to be "great." Well ya! wanna' know something - it "just ain't so"!

For years, Charlevoixans have been over-sold on their schools, equipment and staff. I don't doubt that two or more decades ago, Charlevoix was much more fortunate (because of our summer influx) than most of other northern communities. But for more than 10 years now, our system has been understaffed and underequipped.

I was in the Bellaire school a year or so ago, and they had an art department that made me green with envy. Ceramic and wood designs hanging from the ceiling, paintings and drawings on the walls, clay models on the benches, and even a dark room for photography. What does Charlevoix have? We have an art instructor as capable as any in the area...but she teaches a grade school class because there hasn't been one lousy room in the whole school system we could give her and say, "Here, this is your art department." Our kids need exposure to this kind of curriculum to try and determine where their interests and abilities fall.

A couple of years ago the school board made the mistake of reducing its request for operation millage by 2 mills for the second attempt at passage. At that time, I can remember hearing the statement that "they squeezed out a little of the water." Well, I think the reduction was a mistake, and as a businessman, I can say that was the most expensive water that you ever bought! It just costs that much more in finance charges for borrowed funds, and financing buses and "getting by one more year."

Who's to blame? Well, you elect the school board to direct your school system for you, and I think its up to the school board to keep you informed. So for the past four years its been my fault! But not any more! I am telling it like it is...as I see it. Now it's up to you to do something about it. Don't take my word for it...take a day off...go visit a couple other schools and compare (you owe it to your kids and yourself). Then come back and vote yes on both requests June 9.

Understaffed and underequipped...and time for you to do something about it!

Crusade tops goal

The 1969 Charlevoix County Cancer Crusade has proved to be most successful.

The local drive represented the eleventh unit to exceed the 1969 Crusade goal.

By Friday, May 16, $4,787 was collected. This amount represents 122 percent of the goal they were trying for in the county. Division Crusade chairman, William A. Hoffhinef, wired the Charlevoix unit, and expressed his appreciation for the impressive totals.

Speak up Monday

Monday evening the public will be heard concerning the 1969-70 Charlevoix public school budget.

Or will they?

When the school budget requests were turned down by district voters April 7, school officials and a quickly-formed citizens' sounding board went to work to determine why three out of five voters said "No".

Meetings were held, and the public was invited to offer their opinions and complaints.

Few district citizens felt it necessary to do so.

School directors, administrators and interested citizens, who had the answers to questions...and who could have considered complaints and suggestions, were left with one opinion from the voter: "No comment".

Reasons for the lack of public response are pure conjecture. Perhaps we just don't care.

However, as a final effort to explain the educational needs of the district, the Board has called an open meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the high school gymnasium.

The Board and administrators of the district will be present to discuss Charlevoix schools with all who attend.

They have said they will answer all questions...and try to satisfy all complaints.

In addition, the Board will answer questions presented from the Courier's questionnaire which appeared in the past two issues.

We question how many residents will seek answers and express opinions at this meeting.

Everyone agrees that our schools are vitally important. To allow the system to stagnate is unthinkable; to merely vote "no" is far worse.

Our schools are big business...the sums it takes to operate them are large.

We urge voters to attend the open meeting to become thoroughly informed before going to the polls June 9.

Poppy time

"In Flanders Fields the poppies blow"...so went the immortal words of Col. John McCrae's poem. Little did he realize when he penned those lines that someday the very poppies of which he wrote would be the true symbol of all those who gave their lives in our Nation's wars.

But that is the case today. Annually, the Veterans of Foreign Wars sponsors the Buddy Poppy Sale in the Charlevoix area to raise money for needy and disabled veterans.

This is one way of honoring the dead by helping the living.

You, too, can pay your respects May 22 through 24 when the Buddy Poppies will be on sale in the city. Buy a poppy and wear it proudly.

The other six

Now that DDT has been outlawed in Michigan, why can't we be taking steps to outlaw the other six hard pesticides?

Along with DDT we should place a ban on the use of Dieldrin, Aldrin, Chlordane, Lindane, Endrin and Heptachlor.

All of these pesticides are poisons that affect fatty portions of all creatures, including humans.

They can eventually build up to a point where they can become deadly.

Experts claim these pesticides retain their killing powers for 20 years.

DDT outlived its usefulness some 20 years ago and still Michigan is only the second state in the union to ban its use. The other state is Arizona which put a ban on the pesticide last year.

Michigan Out of Doors (MOOD), one of the Great Lakes' leading outdoor publications, points out that the present uproar over DDT started when fisherman became alarmed over a pesticide threat against fisheries of Michigan.

"Of much more concern though, is the threat posed by the possible pesticide contamination of canned foods the housewife may buy at her local grocery" says MOOD in an editorial. "Is this something to be shrugged off?"

Many readers may remember a book written by Rachel Carson, a biologist, a few years ago in which she condemned the use of hard pesticides. She labeled the book "Silent Spring" and pointed out that pesticide sprays were killing off the birds and insects.

"What more do we need?" asks MOOD to convince ourselves that we are slowly but surely poisoning ourselves off the face of the earth?"

We get letters

We naturally receive numerous Letters to the Editor. They cover a wide range of subject matter, from complaints about our actions to readers who ask for help.

In the past, many of these letters have been found on the Editorial Page of the Courier, as they express an opinion (or point of view), rather than report "news".

However, space limitations on the Editorial Page have forced us to move the Letters column to the facing page.

We encourage all our readers to express their views through this column. Letters receive our prompt attention, and all those in good taste are printed. We will withhold the writer's name upon request; but, we must insist that a writer sign his letter.

Dangers of ABM

One of the commonest questions I get about the proposed Anti-Ballistic Missile asks why in the world the Russians should get nervous about our deployment of a purely defensive system.

"If we are just defending ourselves," writes a Flint housewife, "why should anyone get upset? Offensive weapons might crank up a new arms race but I don't see how defensive weapons can."

The answer lies in the cold war's strange, looking-glass character.

The security of each side depends on mutual assurance that neither side could possibly start a nuclear war without getting mortally wounded itself.

So the Russians are bound to get nervous if they think we could wipe them out while warding off retaliatory damage to ourselves. They would then have to increase their striking force to match our defense.

It seems mildly insane to think of a new arms race when already the two major powers have a stockpile of explosives equal to 15 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on earth. But it could begin -- and soon.

Moreover, in any arms race, each nation always overreacts to a move by the opposition.

First, in the opinion of most scientists, any ABM system that we build will probably not work very well. The system is tremendously intricate and could never be adequately tested short of war.

But the Russians, in responding to our ABM, begin by assuming that it will work perfectly because military planners are trained to expect the worst.

And then we, in turn would overreact to the Russian counter-measures.

Another fascinating fact about the ABM is that it becomes, in large degree, its own reason for being.

Anti-ballistic missiles, whether protecting our offensive Minuteman missiles or our cities, depend entirely on radar to direct them to their targets. Without radar, the system is useless.

But radar stations must be aboveground to work, so they are vulnerable to nuclear attack. So, much of the ABM system must be directed toward protecting -- guess what? -- the ABM system.

In a sense, ABM deployment is like building a kennel to house a watchdog to guard the kennel. . .another example of how huge military ventures, once undertaken, can assume a momentum of their own.

Since the Russians have clearly signaled a willingness--even an eagerness--to talk about an agreement mutually banning ABM's, it seems to me that we ought to try to reach such an agreement before we begin spending a lot of money on a system that is of doubtful value anyway.

Senator Cooper (R-Ky) and I intend once again to try to put off any ABM expenditure. When military procurement bills come to the Senate, we will ask deletion or postponement of ABM authorizations.

We've lost on four previous tries but these votes came when the country was not nearly as well-informed on the issue as it is now.

Somewhere this arms escalation has to stop. The ABM is an attempt to minimize the consequences of war.

Maybe this is the time, instead, for a serious attempt to minimize the chances of war.

Mayor's Proclamation

WHEREAS: The annual sale of Buddy Poppies by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States has been officially recognized and endorsed by governmental leaders since 1922; and

WHEREAS: V.F.W. Buddy Poppies are assembled by disabled veterans, and the proceeds of this worthy fund-raising campaign are used exclusively for the benefit of disabled and needy veterans, and the widows and orphans of deceased veterans, and

I, William Fochtman, Mayor of the city of Charlevoix, do hereby urge the citizens of this community to recognize the merits of this cause by contributing generously to its support through the purchase of Buddy Poppies on the day set aside for the distribution of these symbols of appreciation for the sacrifices of our honored dead.

I urge all patriotic citizens to wear a Buddy Poppy as mute evidence of our gratitude to the men of this country who have risked their lives in defense of the freedoms which we continue to enjoy as American citizens.

If it Fitz

Two brands of justice

Picture this, all you law-and-order fans:

Willie Chambers is driving down the main street of one of our largest cities. He's in a "right turn only" lane but he doesn't want to turn. There's a traffic officer standing in front of Willie's car, telling him he'd darn well better turn.

"Nut's to you," mutters Willie as he guns his car straight ahead, nudging the cop with a fender and knocking him flat.

The officer quickly jumps into a passing car and takes out after Willie. He catches him within 4 blocks.

So what happens next? Willie is arrested, of course. He goes to jail until he makes bail. He must face a judge and defend himself against the serious charge of assaulting an officer. It could have been worse. The cop suffered only head and body bruises which were quickly treated at a hospital. He might have been killed and the charge would have been manslaughter.

There is one thing about this case: Willie is black and the cop is white. This makes no legal difference, of course, but everyone involved is very careful. A common charge made these days, usually by white conservatives, is that Negroes often get favored treatment from judges who lean backward trying to prove justice is blind. And another common charge, this one usually made by black militants, is that police are brutal bigots who often use Negroes for punching bags.

So the authorities play it cool, right down the middle. Willie gets treatment equal to what would be given an important white man in the same sort of trouble. If a congressman had run down that cop, he would have received the same fair shake given Willie.

Like hell.

I MADE UP Willie Chambers. He never existed. But Charles E. Chamberlain does exist. He is a Republican congressman from Michigan. And he DID deliberately disobey the law and run his car into a cop. In downtown Washington D.C., Chamberlain did exactly what fictional Willie did. Two witnesses and the bruised policeman said so, and their testimony is on record.

So, what happened to the congressman? Nothing. The minute it became known that Chamberlain was a bigshot, his case was shifted from the ordinary channels to something called the Corporation Counsel's Office. A closed hearing was held. Chamberlain was white-washed. Not one lousy charge was placed.

A Washington law official even said the cop was at fault for getting in the way of Chamberlain's car. Which is hogwash but, even if true, does it justify hitting and running?

The whole mess stinks, but it is a familiar smell. Nothing new at all. Justice is not blind in the United States. Anyone who claims every man is treated equally is full of beans. The rich bigshots get an entirely different deal than that given Joe Slob. Joe goes to jail. Bigshot goes home and dies of old age before the courts catch up with him.

The Chamberlain case is simply the latest example of a corrupt system. It is particularly nauseous because Chamberlain has always been hot for law - and - order - and - let's - make - the - streets - safe. Phooey. If he were any kind of a man, let alone a decent congressman, he would insist that he face charges. Instead, he sits in his fancy office, high above the peasants, and has "no comment" on his run-in with the law.

It is no wonder that so many people distrust the law. Why shouldn't they, when laws are made by such phonies as Chamberlain?

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

We took a recent free Saturday afternoon to visit the Municipal Airport and see what our area looks like from above.

It was the first time "up" for our five-year old and her friend, Sally Westenbroek.

Joe McPhillips was at the controls, and gave us a good ride on a perfect flying day.

The two young girls were a bit apprehensive at first, but once in the air were ready to stay up all afternoon.

John Reddy of the Birmingham Eccentric sent along the following about a man he used to know:

I once knew a guy named Judd Black. He always wore a big grin. And the corners of his mouth seemed to be anchored to large, protruding ears.

Judd was a likeable guy. Part of it was his personality, but most of his appeal lay in the fact that as battalion yeoman (secretary) he was alleged to have sufficient influence with the transfer procedure. If he wanted to, legend now has it, he could garble a mate's orders, misdirect pay records or just tell the "Ol Man" that nobody liked you and you should be sent where all guys who aren't liked go.

There were a number of other things that led to the development of a feeling that Judd was a pretty sharp guy. He was a shifty craps shooter.

He would practice for long minutes by his bunk, even when everybody was broke. He would cradle the dice carefully in the palm of his hand, make elaborate waving motions, and "click" the two cubes.

Of course, everybody said he wasn't really shaking the dice. And they would holler, "Come on Judd, shake 'em. Let's hear 'em rattle."

Now all this made most of us think Judd was pretty sharp. But we sometimes got suspicious when he'd crap out. A frown would drop his ears, and he seemed hurt, as if we found him out.

Judd also had two lockers, something of a status symbol itself in the barracks, marking him as "an operator." Nevertheless, there were a few guys in the barracks who always thought Judd was good entertainment, but otherwise a little flakey.

I kinda doubted it, even when he began emptying his two lockers to pack for transfer. He had slide rules, books on math, classical books, serious sounding publications and a bunch of gadgets I never understood.

When I told one of the barrack's doubters that Judd never ceased to impress me, this guy smiled and said:

"There are guys who are smart enough to know what they should do. They surround themselves with objects that would indicate they are doing it."

He nudged me, winked, and pointed to where Judd was giving out his collection of paraphernalia. The guy who bunked on top of Judd got the slide rule sans explanation book. The guys next to him had their pick of his unread books.

Since then, I've been afraid to buy a book for fear I'd never read it.

BUDGET HEARING

The City of Charlevoix will hold a public hearing previous to the adoption of their 60-70 Budget, on May 26, 1969 at 8:00 p.m., E.S.T., in the Council Chambers, in the City Hall, 210 State Street, Charlevoix, Michigan. Copies of same may be obtained at the City Superintendent's Office, City Hall.

- They are to encourage the advance and development in growth of our community. It is expected that the Chamber provide an information center for all interested persons, and to render any other services the city and public may deem necessary.

There are approximately 175 members in the Chamber of Commerce. The board of directors includes Lylo Miles (Erber Auto), president; Tom Acton (Lexalito), vice president; Gordon Neff (Neff Brothers), treasurer; Dave Juilleret (Juilleret Coffee Cup), Ralph Hess Jr. (Hess Furniture), Bruce Bartlett (Bartlett Floor Covering), John Schroeder (Schroeder Drugs), Larry LaGrow (County State Bank), Tom Hanna (Medusa), and Loder.

Most Chambers have fixed expenditures which are covered and paid for within their budget. Such items covered are: printing of brochures, telephone, rent, etc. Small contributions are made to the Chamber on a donation basis. There is also a $40 minimum voting right membership fee, which is on a graduated scale.

Loder was asked what the plans were for the near future. At present, they are entertaining ideas of housing. There is evidently a great need for more homes in the city.

Such ideas as mobile homes, mobile parks, and suburban housing have been discussed. The year round population of Charlevoix is estimated at approximately 3,300. With the summer fast approaching, we can expect to find between 8 and 10,000 people in Charlevoix during the months ahead.

Many of these tourists come back to Charlevoix to make this their home. Thier reasons vary from "trying to get away from the ratrace in the city", to "I want a better place to raise my children."

The population is definitely on an incline, according to Loder. More people settle here each year. At the moment, the Chamber does not feel that Charlevoix has anything to offer these people. Not only is there a very limited selection of living quarters, but job opportunities are few.

New industries have come to Charlevoix and the county. Together, with the Charlevoix Development Corp., the Chamber was responsible for re-locating Charlevoix Chemical Co. from Dayton, Ohio, and they also settled Lexalite in Charlevoix.

Many organizations have considered Charlevoix as a new site for their business, but due to the limited available labor force, housing facilities, and limited airport facilities, they are forced to give up the idea of moving to the area.

The Chamber is noted for its extensive information center for tourists. In the field of recreation, they have sponsored the Annual Michigan Golf Tournament, Annual Winter Festival, Water Front Art Fair, and the Lakeside Hobbycraft, which is to be held July 12 for the first time.

So, as you can see, Charlevoix, does have a protector. It is constantly watching out for our welfare, both for business purposes, and just for the general community. Chamber members are to be congratulated on their fine accomplishments, and encouraged for their future plans.

Kiwanis Club elects slate

New officers were recently elected by the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club.

Don Anders, local realtor, was elected president of the service club.

Other officers are: president - elect, Al Smith; vice president, Vane Smith; directors, Fred Willis, Ed Vogler, Fred Payne, Kit Carson, Chuck England, Gerald Staubin, and Russell Hamilton.

The administration will take office October 1.

Carr

"For example, that is the exploratory age. In the past, education has stifled exploration until the youngster reaches high school."

"We hope our Middle School program will encourage our students to investigate....... they are interested in anything and everything at that age," Carr continued.

Exploratory course offerings will be made in areas such as home economics. According to Carr, girls would take a full course, and boys would touch particular areas of the field. The process would be reversed for courses like shop or arts and crafts. Instrumental and vocal music would also be offered.

"Of course, academics are what the youngsters are in school for, and must be considered the most important function of the school," Carr said.

"But allied courses are important, too. I would like to see the program include a library science course, so when youngsters enter high school and college, they know how to use a library. So many students today are lost when they enter a library."

"I feel that many exploratory areas, such as those which we've talked about, are able to give youngsters the opportunity to learn what it is all about. We should encourage them to discover what route they want to take when they reach high school. Along the way, they'll learn skills."

"The Middle School is not a junior high school. In the past, these grades have just been 'feeder systems' for the high school."

"The trend in the Middle School concept is leaning away from this, and attempts to build a program for the ten to 14-year-old," Carr concluded.

Poppy days

"Operation Old Glory" was given a symbolic send - off when Governor William G. Milliken was presented with an American Flag decal at the State Capitol. An American Legion program, "Operation Old Glory" has the objective of encouraging the display of the American Flag decals on the windows of schoolrooms, business establishments and automobiles.

State Legion Commander Wayne Squire also reminds all citizens that May 22 through 24 are Poppy Days in Michigan. Council adopts budget; moves in Casino case

City Council adopted a 1969-70 budget of $353,000 Monday night.

Following the budget hearing, the city fathers established a tax rate of eight mills, the same base as last year. According to Council, the eight mill levy is approximately one-third the rate of surrounding communities.

The rate is based on $11,758,650 in assessed valuation in the city.

The budget shows estimated revenues of $353,245 in general fund; $488,656, electric fund; $74,450, water fund; and $22,500, sewage fund.

Mayor William Fochtman said Council was pleased with the budget, and the city's ability to "hold the line" on the millage base.

"Rising costs, particularly in salaries, have come to Charlevoix, too," Fochtman said, pointing out a 50 percent rise in some costs in the past five years.

In other business, Council moved to take legal action against Hal Forbrig, owner of the old casino property on Meech Street, between Dixon Sreet and Petoskey Avenue.

City Attorney John Michael was directed to begin action yesterday in District Court, pressing charges against Forbrig for violating the city zoning ordinance by using the residential property for industrial purposes.

Action was also directed to clean up the physical condition of the property. The city termed the property an "attractive nuisance" to youngsters.

According to Council, the property must be cleaned up, and the casino made inaccessable.

The action came following a Courier story concerning the property last week.

Council agreed that the present condition of the property cannot be tolerated.

Seniors Larry Straw, Jill Szudzik and Gordon Freedman discuss CHS and their future.

Seniors talk of CHS, graduation and future

by Claudia R. Bost

Excited students, congratulating teachers, tearful parents. This will be the scene at Charlevoix High School next Thursday evening. This annual event will take place in the school's gymnasium...will it be the end or just a beginning for our seniors?

Last Friday, we spoke with three of these students, Jill Squdzik, Larry Straw and Gordon Freedman. These young people were ready to answer that question.

As Larry put it, "Graduation is merely a stepping stone, it's just a beginning; from there we start a new way of life". In his words, he captured the general feeling among our graduates-to-be.

The ceremony, filled with hours of anticipation and years of hard work, does not hold a great deal for these youngsters. When we asked them about the students being involved with the ceremony, they replied, "everyone has a chance to be involved, but few do." They weren't referring to just marching up to receive their diplomas, but to the actual planning stages for this night of celebration.

The students said the program that is now used is a good one. They wouldn't want to change it. But there is one item that they would like to alter, and it is one that should be considered:

Each year there is a guest speaker who addresses the students. He congratulates them for a job well done and then proceeds to outline a very dim world to them. A world which says, "So now you've graduated - congratulations, but now beware of the hard, cruel world ahead."

No person likes to hear this, especially on a night that comes but once in a lifetime. Why can't he speak to the students about happy times ahead? Times when they will be out on their own to plan their goals and then set forth to reach them. These kids aren't naive to the surrounding problems of our world, so why must they constantly be reminded of these hardships?

Gordon put life itself on three stages. "The first stage belongs to childhood, when a person becomes acquainted with oneself and starts to formulate his habit patterns. The second state is to orientate yourself to your surrounding environment and to put your habits into practice. The third state is life as an adult."

But what does make a person an adult? Does the magic age of 21 constitute a person to be legally and professionally right? No, these graduates are just as much an adult as you are. They realize their years of being pampered are over. High school was fun, but the future years hold much more for them than just fun.

Many of these graduates will be going on to college. We're sure this brings joy and pride to many parents. Their sons and daughters have been taught to learn, and now they must be challenged. Jill commented that "It is up to you as an individual to make it at college". No one will be there to make excuses for them. Larry added, "It will be a turning point in our lives, a change in environment and making new contacts. It's up to us now."

We asked the three students what they thought Charlevoix High School held for future students. In their replies, they made it clear that they are very much aware of a grave situation. All three brought up the plans for dismissing certain teachers and staff members for next years term. The one person they felt to be the most helpful was Mrs. Joy Mudge, the school librarian. She has

Teen drinking investigation

Charlevoix City police continue to investigate an early Sunday breaking and entering at Edwards' IGA Store on Petoskey Avenue.

Police officer Glenn Pemberton told the Courier that five juveniles, all boys, were apprehended in the robbery.

According to police, the youths broke into the store through a rear window and stole quantity of liquor and beer.

Local police are also investigating a report of illegal possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages by junior high school pupils over the weekend.

Sources report that several youths allegedly entered the seventh-eighth grade dance after obtaining alcoholic beverages.

Police indicate that the two incidents are unrelated.

Bank hours for holiday

Both Charlevoix banks will observe their normal Friday hours tomorrow (Thursday), and remain closed Friday and Saturday in observance of Memorial Day.

Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank of Charlevoix will be open tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Both banks will re-open Monday at 10 a.m.

Jim Marshall of Citizens Sounding Board addresses the public at open meeting of Charlevoix School Board, Monday. Approximately 115 residents attended the meeting.

Board members quizzed on millage, school cuts

Sounding board states position

(Ed. Note: The following position statement was issued by the Citizens Sounding Board at the open meeting of the School Board, Monday evening. The Sounding Board was formed by a group of interested citizens following the defeat of the school budget April 7)

The people of Charlevoix share the same aspirations and desires for their children as others across this great land of ours. Whether or not we are willing to pay the price to produce successful young citizens is the question soon to be posed before us once again. It is not possible to put a price tag on the worth of our children and the quality of education we wish them to have. Tragically this appears to many people exactly what is happening in Charlevoix today. A millage election is close upon us and if it is defeated we are essentially downgrading the worth of the individuals who depend upon us for direction and guidance.

What is the 'price tag' we are asked to put upon keeping our education system at its present minimum standard? Surprisingly no one asks except "how many mills"? Few people know that their taxes would average between $30 and $35. We of the sounding board are besieged daily by groups and individuals who are determined to vote 'no' because of some real or imagined grievance toward the School Board, a certain teacher, the purchase of a bus and countless other reasons for vetoing millage. The very fact that the citizens voice these complaints is meaningful. They reflect dissatisfaction over the ways in which their school system is being run. They find it difficult to enumerate their complaints or categorize them in a meaningful manner. This is understandable. The average citizen is not supposed to be an expert on school finance or school administration. He relies on elected and appointed officials to conduct the business of the schools.

As evidenced by the last election, the resentments, hostilities and apathy took their toll in the voting booths and once more threatens to jeopardize the education of the children of the Charlevoix School District. Clearly a vote of no confidence in the School Board and the administration was made evident. The question of a raise in taxation was not the real issue at hand. The public was not presented with a well thought out plan for the future of the school system and the many great things it could accomplish. The public was presented, instead, with an ultimatum of 'vote the millage in or take the consequences.' This was a tactical error to say the least. As citizens we want to know what progressive and far reaching goals are in store for our children if we are to make the necessary sacrifices.

It is evident to any voter that unless the next millage passed certain vital aspects of the school system must be done away with. The question posed by the public at large is the precedence given to those cuts which have been proposed by the School Board. The reductions proposed thus far reflect across the board, arbitrarily selected items. In some cases they will deprive certain groups of students. Certainly, many of the proposed cuts will discriminate against non-college bound youngsters while other cuts effect children aspiring to higher education.

Charlevoix's School Board may have won some friends at its open meeting Monday night.

Questioning residents, parents and teachers pounded the Board and administration with queries about the budget and school program, and also expressed opinions to the directors.

All in all, it appeared that the Board was able to field most questions to the satisfaction of those in attendance.

The majority of questions concerned the absolute necessity of the increased millage, proposed program cutbacks, and teacher salaries.

Board President, Glenn Kenney opened the session by introducing Don Brown of the Citizens Sounding Board.

Brown called upon Jim Marshall, who presented the group's findings in a position statement (see allied article on this page).

Superintendent of Schools Rex Milligan showed the gathering costs of next year's optimum schedule, if the millage receives voters approval June 9.

He also discussed tenure, and, in answer to a questions, stated that Michigan tenure law does make provision for dismissing teachers on tenure if there is definite evidence that a teacher is not doing his job.

"But," said Milligan, "the teacher must be doing poorer-than-average work."

Questions from the floor included a request for an explanation of the duties of the administrative assistant, Del Terrill.

Terrill noted that his job covers the adult education program; running the Community School; overseeing transportation of school children; supervising attendance of all grades; administering the Federal Title I program locally, and assisting Milligan and high school principal Raymond Carr and assuming their duties in their absence.

When questioned, Board members admitted they were not satisfied with the evaluation of teachers under the present system.

"We are moving to correct this problem," Kenney stated, "We must learn of potential problems earlier in the school year to handle them correctly."

The possibility of dropping athletics and the instrumental music department was questioned.

Kenney told the gathering, "We cannot see any other way to operate, but we're open to suggestions."

The Board was asked if these activities were not self-supporting.

Clarence Odmark, band director, stated that the Band Boosters organization has provided uniforms and housing for band members on trips downstate, "but as far as salaries and capital outlay for instruments goes, the Board has always allocated all funds," Odmark said.

Gate receipts from football and basketball games cover the cost of athletic equipment, uniforms and cost of game officials, but over $7,000 is taken from the general fund to pay coaches' salaries, the Board stated.

When asked if the millage request had to be 3.75 for operational expenses, Kenney replied, "No, it can be whatever the voters want it to be. But, as a responsible School Board, we have to ask for the amount it takes to give the students a good, full education."

No settlement in sight to Consumers strike

by Pat Begrow

For fifty-one days the strike of the 22,000 members of the Utility Workers Council of America against the Michigan Consumers Power Company has dragged on throughout the State of Michigan and has drastically affected the lives of the 29 families of strikers and the lives of the 25 families of management who are employed here in Charlevoix at the Big Rock Plant.

Today, the presidents of the 22 locals of the Michigan Utility Workers will be meeting at the Hayes Hotel in Jackson to determine their course of action.

At the present time there are no negotiations going on between the union and the company and thinking people are bound to ask, "Is there any end in sight?"

Sadly enough there doesn't seem to be. Romney Wheeler, director of public relations for Consumers Power Company explained the position of the company in this strike.

"We are dismayed and distressed that the strike has lasted so long." He continued to explain that last fall the company attempted to negotiate with the union so that a contract agreement could be reached before the expiration date in April. Consumers Power Company offered the union members an 11 percent increase in wages for the 1969 year, and a six percent increase for the 1970 year.

This would have gone into effect last January. The company also offered each union member $150 as a cost of living bonus which would have been paid last December.

The company considers that the percent increase the first year and the 6 percent increase the second year is a wedge against inflation costs. The company is willing to talk about a cost of living agreement for the third year if the union will consider a three year contract.

At the moment, the Michigan State Utility Workers of America are not willing to consider a three-year contract. They feel that the progressive increases of 11 and 6 percent are acceptable only if an additional cost of living rider is attached to the two-year contract.

They feel that their wage increases in the previous 37-month contract was completely eaten up by inflation.

The conflict between union and management is not strictly economic either.

New clinker cooler working to correct dust problem

The winter months were busy for everyone at Medusa's South Point Plant. Work was completed on the new clinker cooler installation.

When the plant closed down in February, the men started dismantling the old cooler and making preparations for installing the new one. This job, plus other annual maintenance and housecleaning tasks, kept everyone busy during the downtime and the company was able to maintain full employment.

The new clinker cooler was ready when operations started again early in April. It has a rated capacity for cooling 13,000 barrels of clinker per day, or 12 percent more than the rated capacity of the cooler being replaced. Another of the many advantages of this new equipment is that clinker does not have to be handled twice to obtain sufficient cooling; so it is expected to reduce the on-site dust problem encountered with the old equipment.

With the installation of this new equipment and other improvements, Medusa expects to operate the plant successfully at its rated capacity and is looking forward hopefully to a long period of trouble-free operation.

Several landscaping projects were started last fall. These will be continued during the coming year, generally improving the appearance of the grounds and protecting the natural resources.

The company is in the midst of negotiations with the United Cement, Lime & Gypsum Workers Union on a new two-year contract, to become effective June 1. Medusa has always enjoyed good relations with the union and has every expectation of successfully reaching agreement on the new contract.

The SS. Medusa Challenger took on her first load of cement from the silos in late March and will make regular trips throughout the season.

Jinsky appointed to MIES position

Jinsky is presently serving on the Michigan Industrial Education Awards Committee, has been actively engaged in regional awards programs, and has held several offices in the Top O'Michigan Industrial Education Association.

3 countians win honors

A record number of students are included on the Dean's List at Western Michigan University for the Winter semester. To be named on the list, a WMU student must have recorded a grade average of 3.5 on a 4 point scale. A total of 1,617 students achieved this distinction.

Three students from Charlevoix County are included on this list. They are: Karen Marie Heeres, 303 Sheridan Street and Joy Ann Pierce, 502 Newman, both Charlevoix; and Jeanne Valerie Absher, 131 W. Lincoln, Boyne City.

Crooked Tree openings

Girl Scouts who are Juniors, Cadettes, or Seniors are urged to register for the remaining Camp Sakakawea openings now. There is still room for a few girls June 29 - July 12, and July 13-26.

Since many inquires and registrations are being made by out-of-council girls to attend the camp from Ohio, Detroit, Indiana and Southwest Michigan, members of the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council, including those in Charlevoix County, should register soon.

Nearly 400 girls are now registered to attend the Council's resident camp on 480-acres at Bass Lake in Grand Traverse County. They will come troop camping with their own leaders, and with a core staff of director and life guard; some through a special campership program, and with resident staff.

Camp Sakakawea is open to all girls 9 to 17, and is administered through support of ten United Community Chests in northwestern Michigan.

Inquiries for registration may be sent to the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council, 235 Grandview Parkway, Traverse City 49684, which is the central office for the 11-county council.

Dems meet

Charlevoix County Democrats will meet at the City Hall in Charlevoix at 8 p.m. tonight, Peter C. Johnson, County chairman, announced.

Purpose of the meeting is to finalize tentative plans for several events for the summer.

All members and friends of the party are urged to attend.

Ochs earns FSC award

More than 300 Ferris State College students were honored, by the college Wednesday, May 21, for academic excellence. Fifty of the group received special academic awards at the 11th annual Academic Honors Banquet.

The students were recognized for their academic achievement by Ferris President Victor F. Spathelf and vice president for instruction, Robert Huxol. The academic awards were presented to the students by the academic deans.

John F. Ochs, of Charlevoix, was presented the Bristol Award for pharmacy.

4th graders win ribbons

Mrs. Joyce Rypkema's 4th grade class took part in the 4-H Achievement Day at East Jordan.

Her class participated in a bicycle safety program in the 4-H Club, and called themselves "The Blow - Outs". They used a book furnished by 4-H as a guide to help them in their project.

The children made bicycle safety posters for the Achievement Day. Five members of her class were awarded blue ribbons for their posters.

There were 18 children in the club, with Mrs. Rypkema as their leader. Keith Lamkin visited the school to demonstrate bicycle repair to the children in the classroom.

A bicycle hike concluded the events for this project, but Mrs. Rypkema wants to inform the parents that 4-H is a co-operative extention club, open to all people.

This summer the children will be working on a garden project, with their parents as leaders and instructors. See picture, page 6.

Beaver Island has new convent

The local community of Beaver Island, headed by the leadership of a building committee, held a kick-off dinner May 30, 1966, for the purpose of raising funds to construct a new home for the Sisters.

The primary work of the Sisters is teaching in a state supported school and in the catechetical program of Holy Cross Parish.

Efforts during the two successive years produced sufficient funds for the project to become a reality, and on May 30, 1968, the ground breaking ceremony was held.

During the summer and fall months that followed, the Walter Wojan Construction Co. built the two-level home, designed by Richard Stromberg.

The upper level consists of private sleeping quarters to accommodate seven persons. The lower level has the chapel, living and dining rooms, kitchen and dining rooms, kitchen and laundry. The structure is located on a hillside overlooking the Island harbor.

Plans are in progress for a May 31, 3:30 p.m. dedication and Open House. An invitation to attend this event is extended to all who have contributed to this cause and also to anyone else who might be interested in seeing the outcome of the efforts.

The Sisters, occupying this dwelling, have asked the Courier to extend their gratitude to all who made this home a realization.

COMPETITION LTD.
Leonard Premium 500 is the official gasoline for the gruelling Press-On-Regardless Rallye; voted the best national rallye of the year by the Sports Car Club of America. Here's what Gene Henderson of Competition Ltd., one of the winning professionals, said after the rallye: "For this 24-hour, 800-mile test of men, machines and fuel, a gasoline has to perform great. Finely-tuned engines need top-quality, high performance fuel. And the drivers want the best possible mileage. It's a long way between fuel stops on the back roads course the rallye covers. Leonard Premium 500 powered my car without a miss, and mileage was better than I ever hoped for." To a man (and woman) the Press-On-Regardless competitors agreed that Premium 500 is a great gasoline. Why not try a tankful of the very same gasoline in your car? It could make a big difference in the performance you get.

Anonymous caller praises employee

By Claudia Bost

Have you ever stopped to count the number of times you, as an individual, have been praised for your work or efforts?

After you have counted, it's not very likely that the number will be a large one. It seems as though people are too tied up with their own affairs to take time out and show a little appreciation for their fellow-workers.

The Courier office had a telephone call a short while back. The person making this call did not leave her name. The reason for her calling was one we think everyone would find quite interesting. She phoned to inform the Courier that somewhere in Oleson's Variety Store, there was an employee who helped her children with their shopping for a Mother's Day gift.

She went on to say that the woman was most helpful and pleasant to her children on their shopping adventure.

We spoke to this mystery-woman at Oleson's, and also to the manager of the store, Mrs. Harold Sternaman. The general atmosphere of willingness-to-help cannot be limited to these two women. The Variety Store employees share a wonderful working relationship. They wnrk together, and the result provides a most pleasant environment for shopping.

The Variety Store has been in operation a little over three years. There are approximately eight employees, including Mrs. Sternaman. They try to treat each customer in a very natural and efficient manner, whether they be summer tourists or local residents.

Their goal is to please and help each customer who enters the store.

So, the next time you go shopping, whether it be at the Variety Store or somewhere else, take time out and view these people at work. They are there to help the public, and do so in a most impressive way. Show them a smile and let them know you appreciate their efforts, just as our unknown caller did.

You will feel better, and that makes for a happy atmosphere for shopping.

COURIER Feature Page

Sing out

by Pat Begrow

Let it not be said that we inhabitants of this northern Michigan outpost are so provincial that we are going to let the visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company to Detroit pass unnoticed.

Heaven forbid! I got excited about the coming of the opera way back in September when I read in the pages of the Detroit Free Press that the Opera Cummittee had even picked an Outstate Chairman for the event.

That must mean us, but I have to admit that I had a few misgivings when her address was given as Grand Rapids. If that's outstate what do they consider Charlevoix to be? Probably Indian territory.

Nevertheless I'm going to swallow my pride tonight and go to Detroit to see Leontyne Price in Der Rosenkavalier. My husband saw her play the lead in Madame Butterfly a few years ago, and he is wildly enthusiastic about her magnificent voice which he says penetrates the auditorium like a horn. To hear her tackle the difficult passages of this Strauss opera should be exciting.

But opera in the past eight years has become much more than a vehicle for beautiful voices. Through the kindness of such families as the Asters and the Rockefellers whole new stage sets and costumes have been given to the Metropolitan. Each separate opera set is as extravagant as a Broadway musical the quality of Oliver.

And the dancing is the best of modern ballet; in fact, when Salome did her dance of the seven veils in that opera it was so suggestive that I almost got up and left. It must have suggested something to Herod too, for in the next act Salome appeared on stage with the severed head of John the Baptist resting on a platter. The Met has had some trouble filling that role.

Action and Reaction

Actually every year the Metropolitan Opera becomes more and more like a Broadway musical. It used to be that opera singers were fat and that's the way that everyone expected them to be, but no more. Now they're all drinking diet pop and exercising to be trim. Still, there's a tear in my eye when I remember tubby Richard Tucker who played the young hero in Tosca. When he was shot I cried so hard that the mascara ran down my nose.

All that is a thing of the past. Contemporary singers like Franco Corelli are so manly and muscular that they could play the guy with the white hat in a western and be convincing.

Well, I'm looking forward to my evening with Der Rosenkavalier. I've never seen it but Mrs. Ethel Wiesinger tells me that it's the same old plot as in the movie The Graduate.

Come to think of it, that was a pretty good plot.

LOCAL

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Hoff, of 204 Clinton in Charlevoix, have returned home from Lakeland, Florida.

Recipe of the week

For a glamorous meal for 4; try tuna souffle flavored with pretzel crumbs. It's piquant taste is a gourmet's delight – and flecked with bits of green chive, it adds "eye appeal" to any table.

"TUNA PRETZEL SOUFFLE"

- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup very fine pretzel crumbs (Use a rolling pin or crush pretzels at the highest speed in your blender.)
- 1 cup milk
- 4 egg yolks
- 2 tablespoons frozen chopped chives
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 can (7 ounces) water-packed tuna, drained and flaked
- 4 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Melt butter and stir in crumbs. Gradually stir in milk. Cook mixture while stirring until it thickens into a paste. Beat in egg yolks, one at a time. Stir in chives, salt, pepper and flaked tuna. Fold egg whites into tuna mixture, pour mixture into a buttered 1–1/2 quart casserole or souffle dish. Bake in a preheated slow oven (325°F.) for 50 to 60 minutes or until souffle is brown and puffed. Serve at once and wait for the compliments.

Memorial Day

A Time to Pause...

A Time to Remember

Once again, on Memorial Day, we pause to recall, with respect and much pride, the selfless sacrifices of our brave and valiant departed heroes. Gallantly, they marched forth, united as one in defense of freedom. And with unflinching courage and unyielding devotion to cause, they gave their lives so that our precious heritage of liberty might endure. Lest their deeds be forgotten or ignobled, and their sacrifices be in vain, let us all now resolve to be equally steadfast and courageous in preserving that which has been so heroically achieved. Let us dedicate ourselves to ever cherish and uphold that priceless freedom, which is the legacy of those whose memory we honor today.

Mott grant includes Charlevoix district

The partnership between Alma College and the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation of Flint that has helped to establish community education programs in 26 Michigan school districts including Charlevoix, will enter its fourth year this summer.

A $100,000 grant from the Mott Foundation will fund the college's community education development program for the 12-month period beginning July 1, according to Hugh Rohrer, director of Alma College's Mott Program of Community Education. The grant is the fourth that the college has received from the Mott Foundation.

With the Mott Foundation funds the college awards grants to school districts encouraging them to establish community education programs for the benefit of their residents.

During the past three years 22 schools have established such programs, funded in part by the Alma College-Mott grants. Four more districts have been approved to receive grants by the start of the 1969-70 school year.

The $100,000 grant awarded to Alma College by the Mott Foundation a year ago generated an additional $571,000 in support of community education programs by the school districts affiliated with the college's community education department.

Rohrer estimates that the doors of each of the 22 schools that are partners with the college in community education have remained open 780 additional hours per year for educational programs benefiting district residents.

Approximately 25,000 individuals have participated in community education programs at the 22 schools during the 1968-69 academic year, according to Rohrer.

Programs of both an educational and recreational nature are offered by each of the districts, according to Rohrer, and the offerings appeal to an age range from preschool children to retired citizens.

Some of the educational programs, according to the Alma College community education director, are offered to enable individuals to complete requirements for high school graduation. Others are enrichment courses.

Recreational programs offered by the community schools include activities such as swimming, bowling, gymnastics, volleyball and square dancing.

Typical high school completion courses offered through the school's community education plans are Spanish, typing, American government, English, history, and industrial arts.

Enrichment courses cover a wide range of programs. Some offered by districts affiliated with Alma College during the past year include landscaping, upholstering, dog obedience training, bridge, airplane pilot training, teen clubs for high school youth, preschool children's story hours, courses on great books and great motion pictures, cake decorating, law for the layman, first aid, ballet, rock clubs, interior decorating, and weight reduction programs.

The community education programs also generate civic cooperation through programs involving community councils, governmental agencies and service clubs.

Tiger Tales

For the past several weeks, we have looked at the history of the Tigers. One player to play a big part in that history is Albert William Kaline.

For Al Kaline, the superstar of the Tigers, 1968 was a year of fulfillment.

He had never played in the minors, but after 16 seasons with the Tigers, he had never been able to display his all-around skills in a World Series either. In 1968 he received his chance and made the most of it.

After missing more than five weeks of the season with a broken forearm, Kaline returned to find himself platooned at first base or on the bench, unable to crack an outfield where he had been a mainstay for 15 seasons. But he waited for his opportunity in the World Series and hit .379 in the seven-game classic, going 11-for-29 with the two home runs and eight RBI. It was his finest hour.

During the reguler season, Kaline reached several personal milestones. On April 18, he played in his 2,000th game as a Tiger and a month later, on May 19, he clouted his 307th home run to pass Hank Greenberg as the Tiger career leader.

The 1967 season was also replete with personal achievements for Kaline. Though he missed a month of the season with a broken hand, the classy outfielder topped .300 for the first time since 1963.

In 1966 he got his 2,000th hit off Jim Lonborg (June 15 at Boston); poled 29 home runs, matching his career high; won his ninth Gold Glove out of a possible 10 and was voted to the American League All-Star team.

In 1967 Kline was voted still another Gold Glove and was again selected for the All-Star squad, though his injury kept him from participating in the contest.

Few players have achieved greatness as quickly as Kaline. Signed to a bonus contract at 18 in 1953, he became a Tiger regular the following season and the American League batting champion - youngest in history at age 20 - the next year (1955).

Virtually everything Kaline has done since then has added to his reputation as the league's best all-around rightfielder. With his lifetime batting average over the .300 mark, he likewise is recognized as one of the finest when it comes to covering outfield territory and throwing with strength and accuracy.

A prep and sandlot star in his native Baltimore, Al was sought by all major league clubs in 1953, although a few of them backed off at the prospect of offering a big bonus to a slender 155-pounder. The Tigers, however, were sure of their man and persuaded Kaline to accept a contract for a reported $30,000.

Pressed into the Tiger outfield at the start of the 1954 season because of an injury to veteran Steve Souchock, Kaline hit a promising .276, then came on with a rush in 1955 to nail down the big league swat crown with a .340 average.

Kalina went into the 1969 season with a .304 average for his career, 2,222 hits, 314 home runs and 1,247 runs batted in. He has been selected for the All-star game 13 consecutive years, 1955-67, more than any other Tiger.

He has won ten of a possible 12 Gold Glove fielding trophies, missing only in 1960 and 1968.

His 22-game hitting streak in 1961 equalled the Tigers' longest since 1935. In 1959 he led the American League in slugging with a .530 percentage.

Married to his high school sweetheart, the former Louise Hamilton, Kaline is the father of two young sons, Mark Albert, born in 1957, and Michael Keith, born in 1962. Tha Kalines make their home in Franklin, Mich., a suburb of Detroit.

In the Open

To say that the northern pike is Michigan's number 1 game fish would stir up a hot argument. There would be rival claims on behalf of bass, trout, walleye and maybe even carp. Yet, rated in terms of recreation hours, the pike is one of the most important fish in the Great Lakes region.

It was because pike were so abundant that the species had a low rating years ago. A snobbish angler called pike "snakes". However, the most experienced fishermen, including professional guides, say that a pike is on par with muskellunge as a fighter, and for eating purposes is just as good.

Now that the pike season is open, we turn to a pike expert for up-to-date information on the sporting qualities of the species. Adam De Martino, Jr., of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company's sale department, is a pike specialist. The De Martino family is pike-minded. A daughter, Denise, went pike fishing, in her baby buggy, with her parents. At age three, no longer confined in the baby buggy, Denise had learned to lie flat on the bottom of the boat while a pike was played and landed.

My friend Adam has discovered that the most effective method of taking sizeable pike is still-fishing. He carries a casting outfit and when there is a lull in action, he will cast to kill time.

For big pike, Adam says, use big bait minnows. He shops for the largest minnows obtainable, or he catches them on hook and line. A small pike would be perfect bait, according to Adam. It will happen that a pike weighing a pound will be gobbled by a relative as it is being reeled in.

Adam's tips for catching pike include:

Fishing deep. Find a hole at a curve in a river or some place in a shallow lake and there mature pike will congregate, especially in hot weather. Like most game fish, pike like to feed after dark, although the De Martino family prefers to pursue pike before sunrise, using a bobber to keep the bait about a foot from the bottom.

He has discovered that the most convenient method of keeping minnows alive and active is to carry them in a plastic picnic cooler.

Adam shares the belief of many fishermen that where one big fish is taken another is waiting. The possible reason for this phenomenon is that small pike steer clear of the big ones and a patch of water that is the feeding ground of a pike weighing 10 pounds or more will be shared only with a pike of similar size, able to defend itself.

Pike should be skinned. If there is any muddy taste it will be removed with the skin. Thera are patent skinning neatly peel the hide off pike.

The pike plays an important role in fish management by reducing the population of infant fish in a lake which would otherwise be crowded with nonkeepers. In northern Canada, where the pike is called jackfish, wild ducklings are gobbled in large numbers on prairie breeding ponds. A muskrat is a suitable lunch for a big pike. In fact there are records of pike attacking human beings. It has happened that a child, dabbling chubby fingers from a dock, has been bitten and badly hurt by a pike.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER
CHAMBER MANAGER

The Michigan Association of Railroads publish monthly "Tracking the Facts", an interesting publication and among the bits in the May issue were "2 Billion $ difference." A dramatic example of the difference between private operated railroads and those run by the government is shown in the United States' experience in World Wars I and II.

The railroads were taken over by the government in World War I. Their losses totaled two million a day and no taxes were paid. In the second big conflict the railroads paid $4 million a day in taxes. That is a difference of "4,190,000,000 a year without even considering the amount of taxes lost in World War I."

Likely some of you friends read an article in the Courier of May 21 having to do with a little conversation here one day recently with one of the new writers for the paper. I thought this was a very fine gesture, however, as newspaper articles go, they either deviate a bit or are not as accurate as you hope they would be. However, in this instance, I feel satisfied they got over a point at any rate.

The first annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Show, scheduled here for July 12, is really getting underway by a new group and committee. It will take a lot of hard work, such as it did especially at the beginning of the annual Waterfront Art Fair. This new event from any angle appears to have quite a potential and we appeal for support in your individual ways of making it known, similar to how it happened with the art show.

The Waterfront Art Fair committee is hard at it at this time also and it appears again this year they will bring about another ringer.

These two events can not help but bring out conduct and character, etc., of this fine community. You knew, we have inquiries from a wide variety of sources whether they be in state or out of state, in addition to the ones that are interested in exhibiting, to inquire about these events, when they take place etc., and they generally add that they want to try to arrange their trip or vacation to take them in and it also applies to our Venetian Festival. I hope the Chamber of Commerce Color Cruise will begin to take this sort of shape this coming October 12.

Occasionally, I read not only in the local paper, but in two or three surrounding community papers, letters to the editor, etc., where usually there is a complaint or criticism and often mentions names and at the end is indicated in so many words the sender's name is "withheld by request." Maybe I am alone with this attitude, but it always appears to me like a sucker punch or a shot in the dark, and reminds me one time many years ago when I was told "Remember, when you point a finger at someone else, you are usually pointing three at yourself."

Would you believe? "Union Members vote for a pay cut? Members of an independent union in a Texas meat packing plant voted two to one to take a cut in pay to keep the plant in operation. After remarks, 'I recognized this was different from how unions are supposed to react,' the union president expressed, and he hopes the action will encourage the company to build a new automation building." This was taken from the Washington Report of May 19.

Taken from a recent release from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, "You have got to have a heart." Heart Power is the strength of America. Hate Power is the weakness of the World" -- Vince Lombardi, head coach for the Washington Redskins.

In addition to other phases of this Chamber operation, As I have indicated before, we have upwards of eight to ten thousand contacts a year of a wide variety, which per my policy, are handled as individuals. Now what I am about to say is in no way to flatter any ego, of which we all have some, there is no doubt, but it is a fact occasionally we have further contact from some of these people and several came into this office last week, one of which I quote 'Dear Sir: I would like to thank you very much for the pamphlets and most sincere interest you took in my recent letter to you. If the other people in your area are as thoughtful as you are, our trip and vacation will be very enjoyable. Thanks again so much."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Shearer, 212 E. Hurlbut Street, admire their spring garden. The Shearers' garden was named "garden of week" by Charlevoix Garden Club. Honorable mention awards went to Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wallace, Grant and Clinton Streets, and Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Burlin, 203 Cherry Street.

Coronary course offered in June

The Michigan Heart Association announces a two week course to train area nurses in the specialty of Coronary Care Unit Nursing, to be held in Traverse City in June. This course will be co-sponsored by the Grand Traverse Area Heart Unit and Munson Medical Center, with the Traverse City Osteopathic Hospital and Northwestern Michigan College also participating in the instruction.

The classes will be held between June 2 and 13. The course is planned to train qualified nurses for service in a coronary care unit. Course enrollment has been completely filled, representing hospitals in many Northern cities.

This will be the first such course offered by the Michigan Heart Association in the Northern area. It is part of a Coronary Care Education Project, supported by an operational grant to the Michigan Heart Association by Regional Medical Programs.

The key factor in the operation of a coronary care unit is a trained team of nurse specialists. It is anticipated that this course will be instrumental in furthering the establishment and efficiency of Coronary Care Units in other areas of Northern Michigan. The facilities and staff of the Munson Coronary Care Unit will be used extensively in the course, as well as those of the Osteopathic Hospital and Northwestern Michigan College.

The Grand Traverse Area Planning Committee includes Warren Cline, M.D., chairman, also chairman, Munson Medical Center Coronary Care Unit; Mrs. Nathalene Fellows, R.N., CCU course coordinator and Munson CCU supervisor; Jack McChrystal, dean of instructional affairs, Northwestern Michigan College; Earl E. Congdon, D.O., liaison, Traverse City Osteopathic Hospital, internist; Jerold R. Harwood, M.D., liaison, Grand Traverse Area Heart Unit, internist; Mrs. Virginia Thompson, R.N., supervisor, CCU Nursing Education, Osteopathic Hospital; Thomas E. White, ex officio, president, Grand Traverse Area Heart Unit; H. Vincent Yinger, jr., director, Northern Region, Michigan Heart Association.

MHA staff of the Coronary Care Education Project are Oliver Wendt, Detroit, former Northern Regional Director in Traverse City, and Mrs. Eleanor Peterson, R.N., also of Detroit.

Early opinion asked by Davis

State Representatives James F. Smith (R-Davison) and Robert W. Davis (R-St. Ignaca) last week introduced a resolution asking that the Attorney General issue opinions on bills and resolutions within 30 days after the request is made.

"These opinions are important to the legislator who makes them, even if they may not seem important to the Attorney General or his staff," Representative Smith said. "In the past too many requests for opinions have been delayed for months. I am convinced that we must insist that proper consideration be given these request within a reasonable length of time. I think that 30 days is reasonable."

Representative Davis said that it is imperative that answers be furnished before decisive legislative action is taken. "Many decisions on the Legislature are based on the legality of the question," Davis said. "Since the Attorney General is the chief legal officer of the state we must rely on him for guidance. But we must have that guidance before the issue is voted on."

Both Smith and Davis are hoping for swift approval of the resolution "in the interests of better decision-making which will in turn benefit all of the citizens of the state."

Ruppe Reports

Railway service decline

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- The rapidly deteriorating railroad service in the United States has been a matter of great concern to me. In Northern Michigan and in less populated areas throughout the country, the impact of the decline of railway service has been very real. Most recently the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to abandon about 36 miles of track between Narenta and Felch in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. I have strongly urged disapproval of this application. I believe that governmental organizations and the private sector of the economy should cooperate together to stimulate the economic development in Northern Michigan which, in some instances, has been lagging behind other more highly developed areas of the country.

I am aware of the economic loss sustained by the railroad in the maintenance of this branch. While it is true that the track handles only about 700 cars per year, it is also true that little has been done to maintain the track and keep the branch in first-class running order. I feel that both of these factors have contributed to the failure to yield a profit. I also believe that there is great growth potential in this area which may never be realized should this service be abandoned. Furthermore, I have seen no concrete proposals for effective alternate service to the industries now utilizing this line. Its discontinuation could be a serious blow to the community.

With the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission, the Economic Development Administration, and a multitude of other government organizations doing their best to encourage economic expansion in the Upper Peninsula, it would seem inconsistent for the ICC to allow abandonment of a service which is vital not only to existing companies but to future development of the total economy.

I am hopeful that the Interstate Commerce Commission will deny the Chicago and Northwestern application to reduce railroad service in the Upper Peninsula.

The Labor Department utilizes experimental and developmental programs to test new procedures and techniques in the manpower field. Successful methods are then passed along for use by the Federal and State manpower agencies.

Taxpayer revolt growing in state

A major taxpayer revolt appears to be shaping in both Michigan and across the country. Millage and bonding issues more often than not fail to meet voter approval. Thousands of citizens are showering their legislators with symbolic tea-bags as a reminder of this country's first tax "revolt" -- The Boston Tea Party, and the possibility of a modern counterpart.

In Lansing, a group calling itself "Citizens for Fair Taxation" has marched on the state capitol to emphasize that until mid-May of each year, all worker-earnings must go to pay local, state and federal government tax costs.

Ready ears are found for reports showing how in 1969, Charlevoix Countians must work eight more minutes each day to pay their taxes -- than they did last year. Earnings from the first two hours and 34 minutes (two hours and 26 minutes last year) out of each 8-hour day, are now required to pay taxes. People are beginning to realize that taxes take the largest single bite out of personal earnings. Taxes top such necessities as housing (1 hour), food (56 minutes), transportation (40 minutes), clothing (25 minutes), medical care (21 minutes), recreation, (18 minutes) and "all other" which you pay (1 hour, 46 minutes).

More and more citizens in Charlevoix are becoming active in their resentment of this power-to-tax and the increasingly obvious fact that it can be the power-to-destroy.

Foods may be substituted and diets cheapened, housing may be downgraded, and medical needs may be largely ignored -- but if taxes are not paid, property and earnings are confiscated. Non-payment of certain taxes becomes a federal offense with prison the end result.

Not many people go to prisons for non-payment of taxes these days, but farm or city, the revolt is on. Farm people are especially critical of attempts to meet fast-rising school costs by still further taxes on property -- and of unfair assessment of farmlands based on potential use rather than actual value for farming purposes.

But as one local farmer put it..."tax reduction is a simple matter. It involves nothing more than deciding which government 'service' or 'benefits' are to be cut out, and then all sticking together to get that job done..."

Library Notes

With schools closing in a few days, everyone is beginning to think of vacations. It's time to air out the tent, get out the boat varnish, hitch up the trailer and clean up the fishing poles.

To inspire patrons and help with summer plans, the Library will feature a bulletin-board of travel ideas and helpful hints on what to pack, how to pack and where to go. The special book display shelves will exhibit books on travel with a special rack of U.S. road maps.

Some of the books on display for vacation will include:

BETTER VACATIONS FOR YOUR MONEY, by Michael Frome. The first section of the book discusses various kinds of vacations and includes everything from camping trips to big city tours. The second section deals with vacations and tours to specific areas of country with information on their attractions and advantages, with a current list of places to stay. It is an excellent family travel guide.

ALASKA, THE BIG LAND, by Ben Adams is a readable, comprehensive and well-illustrated book about the state. There are pictures of beautiful bathing beaches, catches of big fish and a special section with hints for travelers.

THE LONELY LAND, by Sigurd F. Olson is a true story of a five-hundred mile canoe ride on Canada's wild Churchill River. The author re-explores the same rapids, lakes, portages, ancient campfires and primitive wilderness that were first discovered by the voyagers of an earlier time. There are a few places left on the North American continent where men can still see the country as it was before the Europeans came, but in the Canadian Northwest, it can still be done. A thousand miles northwest of Lake Superior are great free rivers, lakes, countless unnamed waterways and forested valleys still virtually unknown.

JOGGING AROUND NEW ENGLAND by Charles Hanson Towne is not a new book. It was written in 1939, but it's account of quaint New Bedford, Narragansett, Jamestown and Newport and Plymouth Rock is entertaining and informative. The author invites the reader to visit Coolidge's old home, Amherst, Smith College, the Mohawk Trail, old Bennington and Vermont. It is a charming book with delightful ink drawings.

TERRY'S GUIDE TO MEXICO is a completely revised edition of the author's standard guidebook, which, for over 50 years, has stood as a major institution in Mexican tourism. The new guidebook is designed for the modern traveler, providing the most thorough and up-to-date information about everything that might interest the casual vacationist, sportsman, student or amateur explorer.

THE U.S.A. IN COLOR was presented to the Library by the Garden Club. Published by the Curtis Publishing Company, the book contains some of the most beautiful color photographs which originally appeared in Holiday magazine. Divided into sections, there are magnificent pictures of California and Hawaii, the Northwest and Alaska, the Rockies and Plains, the Southwest, the Midwest, New England, the Central Northwest, the South, and Florida. There is something for everyone in this colorbook tour.

Viewpoint!

As I see it

by Glenn Kenney, President
Charlevoix School Board

I heard the statement made recently, in jest but with serious connotations, "For goodness sakes, next time let us put voting booths on the fourth floor. Older people come in wheel chairs to vote against millage."

I don't believe that that generation is the one that's failing to meet their responsibilities to our youth! Oh, sure, I know that most of them watch inflation gobble their meager incomes and feel pretty helpless. But, they are the generation that voted and paid the taxes and provided the facilities for your education.

They made sure we got through high school even though they were lucky to finish eighth grade in a one room schoolhouse. They didn't shirk their responsibilities then, and I don't think they are about to now. That generation was raised in an era when there was a feeling of pride in doing what had to be done--in fulfilling their responsibilities to their elders, to ther ties to their elders, to their young, and to their church. I think they realize that while many of them paid no social security taxes at all, and the rest of them only a minor percentage of what is being returned, it's the generation in high school today that will be footing the bill for what social security and medicare they are receiving!

No, that's not the generation that I'm concerned about. I'm concerned about a younger generation. The generation that feels the world owes them a living! I'm concerned with the generation that lives in a pretty decent house, (even though mortgaged), and drives a pretty hot car (even though still making payments), and has a boat or snowmobile or maybe both.

This is where I hear the flippant reply, "I'm not voting to increase any taxes (maybe $25 or $30)! I don't like the way they're running things over there anyway! They're just wasting money!"

If you fit into the picture, ask yourself if you REALLY have a reason for voting no... or if you're buying an excuse! Excuses come easy, but logical reasons are harder to come by.

Whatever you do, don't blame a millage defeat on the older generation. They're already proved their worth... the question is: "Have you?".

Letters to the editor

Student view of millage

Dear Sir:

So much emphasis has been put on the situation concerning the millage. Although the citizens of Charlevoix are the ones to determine the final verdict, they won't be the ones who will suffer if the millage doesn't pass...WE WILL!!!

The students of Charlevoix High School will be deprived of having a complete and fair education. What is going to become of the graduating class of 1970? Or 1971? Will colleges begin turning away these students because of non-accreditation?

It only seems natural that a college would accept a high school graduate from an accredited high school, before it would accept a graduate from a non-accredited high school even if they were equal in scholastic grades and ability.

Losing accreditation is only one of the major worries if the millage doesn't pass, for there are other misfortunes which lack of funds will produce. All extra-curricular activities would be cut off. Sports, band, the forensics and debate programs, the school newspaper and yearbook, plus the full academic schedule, (this meaning C.H.S. students wouldn't be able to carry five subjects because there wouldn't be enough time in the one-half day, to attend five classes.) Is this fair?

Of course, this surely wouldn't be hurting the voters any that turned down the increase in the millage but...it could hurt their children sometime in the future. That's why as a student of Charlevoix High School, I'm urging you to vote "Yes." Please don't let us down. We need your help.

Respectfully yours,

Jeanne Smith

Labor force

To the Editor:

According to the Chamber of Commerce article in the Courier, limited housing is a limiting factor to the economy of the area in general, while the labor force is limited for new business, and job opportunities are few for new residents.

That latter situation is apparently either a contradiction, or a vicious circle. When a toy factory, with a sizeable payroll, recently inquired about locating here it was reported that local businessmen were alarmed on the grounds that there is already a labor shortage here.

The regional planning commission claims there is 7 percent summer and 11 percent winter unemployment here, more than double the national average.

Some businessmen may prefer to have a labor surplus, but if the economy of the area is to improve new businesses must be encouraged and temporary labor shortages accepted. Labor is mobile and will flow into areas where there is a demand.

Education cutback is unthinkable

We have written many times before about the Charlevoix school system. As all human-managed groups, it has, among its obvious good qualities, a number of problems.

It appears to us that the main problem...the one that is causing negative reaction among the citizenry...is that of a "black image". Not one member of the administration or Board is an expert in public relations. They should not be. They are educators and businessmen.

Added to this are other facets of education which do not make voters happy, including general rising costs (not just in education...look at your own basket of diminishing returns), teacher contract negotiations which backed the district to the wall financially, and an above-average number of residents who love to spread false rumors.

We attended a number of public schools, in districts from Palo Alto, California, to Cranford, New Jersey. Today, they are all facing a financial crisis.

When a school district is faced with the necessity of finding over $100,000 to maintain its adequate (but not OUTSTANDING, mind you) program, where must it turn?

First, it might withhold raises from teachers. This could amount to a substantial savings.

Charlevoix, of course, does not have that option.

A teachers' contract precludes such a move. In fact, the Board must cough up $62,000 for the teachers.

As an alternative, the Board must begin to seek avenues to cut the budget, and at the same time try to offer our children a full educational program.

As salaries take 81 percent of the $1 - million budget, it leaves little room to slice "frills" without removing important classes and activities in the process.

If the increased budget is not passed by the voters of the school district June 9, a number of teachers will not be rehired, and athletics and extra curricular activities will be almost non-existent.

This is not a "threat" from the School Board in any sense. These are the cold, hard facts that must be faced June 9.

To get to the crux of the matter, we feel the program cuts which will be necessary if the 3.75-mill request for operational expenses is again turned down are UNTHINKABLE.

To jam the classroom with 35 or so students is ridiculous, unless we want an educational factory which mass produces mediocrity.

If the athletic program is dropped, the community as well as the students will feel a definite loss.

The Community School could be lost...and few THINKING persons could justify this move.

Finding it necessary to curtail virtually all activities such as the high school newspaper, clubs and class functions would not increase the chances for a well-rounded program, either.

And, how many times have we all felt a sense of pride when our bands reaped the ribbons in competition?

We must watch the purse strings of our schools. But, sentry-duty should not begin when a budget is presented for approval. Action should be taken at the polls when school board elections are held.

Vote "yes" June 9. Then work for needed improvements. But let's not destroy education in Charlevoix in the process.

The Casino

Last week our front page carried a story about the old gambling casino, and we feel a few editorial comments are in order.

The casino has been a thorn in the side of everyone concerned for some years, and that includes owner Hal Forbrig.

Forbrig told us that finances are a big stumbling block to partial demolition and renovation, and we have no reason to doubt him.

Probably the biggest hazzard the building presents is that of an "attractive nuisance" to youngsters. Its very existence draws the younger set bent on exploration and mystery which surrounds old, abandoned houses.

Forbrig has long been a benefactor of area youngsters, opening a private pond for their use as a fishing hole. This leads us to believe that he would not intentionally create a danger spot for the young.

The city, we are told, made the mistake of not obtaining any written agreement that the casino would be torn down when it was sold. We are also told that there was a verbal commitment to demolish any portion of the building which was not going to be repaired.

Obviously, the city was happy to sell the property to place it on the tax roles.

We commend the city for taking action in the matter, even at this late date.

Forbrig also told the Courier that he will now remove the existing dangers. Inaccessiability is a must. The open building should be secured.

Summer and safety

The season of warm weather is upon us when lakes and other bodies of water beckon to young and old alike and swimming becomes the rage.

Swimming is a fine sport but it can become a dangerous one especially where young children are concerned.

Parents would do well also to heed the advice of the Safety Council. This advice can help to make their summer and that of their children a happier one if accidents are avoided.

Spring is a funny time of the year. There are kids who wait for the warm weather so they can get out on the ball field, shed their socks or just loll around.

It also is the time of year, though, when earnest young people start hunting for jobs that will give them experience and spending during the summer.

Some kids could care less. And for them, I care even less.

BUT I REALLY am moved as June draws closer each year. The applications begin filtering in along about February and March. They are from high school juniors and seniors, boys and girls, college students of all ages and both sexes.

Some call, following up on their written application. Others call without notice and without any real trace of hope in their voice. It's a tone of "Well, I really didn't think a kid had a chance."

WELL, THE plain fact is that kids today don't have the chance to gain work experience and a little cash as they once did. All too often nobody wants them because, while they may be great for the summer, they leave a void in the fall when they return to school.

An ironic aggravation for job-hunting students is that the child labor laws once designed to protect them from unscrupulous employers now are restricted by those very protections.

The procedure that an employer must follow before legally hiring youths through the age of 17 is cumbersome, indeed. They must apply to the department of labor in Lansing for a permit, listing the condition of the job and other pertinent data that would reveal that the job is unfit for anyone let alone a minor.

THEN, of course, a minor has to get working papers.

But that's not really all of it anymore. Kids have developed a reputation as a group as being generally allergic to work. That isn't true, of course, but many an employer has hired an eager sounding youngster only to find that once on the job the expected enthusiasm for responsibility just wasn't there.

Unfortunately, the reputation is created by a relatively few.

Bigots aren't lazy

One thing I'll admit about my bigoted readers, they aren't lazy. They always have the energy and dedication to write long letters explaining that Martin Luther King was a Communist.

As a guy who still owes Aunt Clara a thank-you note for Christmas 1956, I have an instinctive admiration for all letter-writers. The man who really cares wouldn't send canned greeting cards to Mr. Hallmark himself. The classy thing is to send a personal letter, handwritten or poorly typed to prove it wasn't really your secretary's idea.

This kind of class I ain't got. I haven't written my mother in 18 years. Instead, I sneak personal messages into this column and sell her a subscription (happy Mother's Day, Gertrude). Come to think, the only letter I can remember writing was to General Hershey, the one with almonds who runs the draft. I told him I was simply returning his greetings, but I spelled every word with a lisp and a limp, hoping he'd re-evaluate the seriousness of the national emergency. It didn't work, and I never again called a general darling.

Anyway, A Jerk who won't write to his mother certainly hasn't got the ambition to write letters to the editor. But I stoop in awe of people who do, which is what I started to say in the first place. And I am positively enthralled with people who not only send me messages, but do it in a unique manner. Once I got a month-old cupcake with "This is chocolate, just your style" pricked out in the frosting.

And there was that Goldwater fan who threatened to throttle my wife. His letter was fashioned from bits of headlines clipped from newspapers and pasted on a brown paper bag, just like in a kidnapping movie. This really made me feel like a bigshot. I relayed this letter to Efrem Zimbalist, Jr. who drives Fords for the FBI. So far no arrests have been made. I think J. Edgar Hoover watches Ed Sullivan.

The messiest letter came in response to my column on draftcard burning. A reader burned my words and mailed me the ashes. Nobody likes a smart ash on his trousers.

Just now I received an envelope bulging with newspaper clippings. Some energetic soul collected dozens of crime articles. And he circled the words "Negro" and "black" each time they were used. I got his message: If we'd murder all the Negroes, there wouldn't be any more crime. And the Mafia could handle the killing at a cheaper rate per person than slaughter costs us in Vietnam. Beautiful.

You ordinary newspaper readers are in tough luck. You don't get to read these incredible letters because they are never signed and no editor publishes a letter if he doesn't know who wrote it. Which is the one thing that puzzles me most about the haters:

If they have sense enough to be ashamed, how come they don't have sense enough to think the cricks out of their twisted minds?

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

G. R. Bradbury of St. Louis, Mo., is a man we admire.

A couple of weeks ago, we inserted a classified ad in the Courier which read: "For Sale: Model No. 99 Phlugerhaggen with removable flam," etc. etc., and, lo and behold, Bradbury submitted a bid for the "thing" of $6.02, with the stipulation that it be delivered to 401 Mercer on May 31 during daylight hours, or his bid was void.

Unfortunately, we will be in Hell, Michigan, that day for their big fireworks display and won't be able to fulfill our part of the bargain. Thanks anyway, G. R. Bradbury...your check is in the mail.

At any rate, it proves again that you can sell anything through the Courier classified.

Speaking of "things", from our pet peeve department comes this:

Dogs running loose on our streets are becoming quite annoying...particularly when a pooch decides to sit under a street light and howl at 2 a.m.

Apparently the city is indeed trying to muzzle these free-running muts, but the truth of the matter is the dog-catcher can't run fast enough. You'd have joined us in chuckling if you'd seen two pups give him the run around the other day on the North side of town. Huffing and puffing, he left empty-handed.

Super-Mushroomer Larry Edwards of our staff found two large, ready-to-pick fungi in back of the Courier office last week.

When he returned to pick them a few hours later, one was gone. But the other was saved for posterity, encased in plastic by Dean Davenport.

"With the aid of cannon balls consisting of hard Dutch cheese reinforced with flour dough, the Uruguayan flagship Santa Maria put to rout the Argentinian Navy in 1841."

The should bolster the ego of the young bride who is just learning to bake, particularly if she is ever attacked by the Argentinian Navy.

The union is urging that there be a change in job evaluation and a change in the format of grievance procedures.

Russell Bjorkman, secretary-treasurer of the Council, says that they are searching every possible way to mediate differences.

Both management and labor deplore the hardship that the strike has caused to the people of the area, yet it goes on. Most of the strikers have found other jobs although not at the same pay level.

Some of them look upon the strike as a nice temporary change in jobs for they have actually found paying jobs at their avocations. For instance, men who love boats have gone to work at marinas. Men who like outside work have joined construction crews and those who enjoy electrical work have picked up jobs in their field. Many men are fixing up their houses in their spare time.

But this strike has meant hardship, too, for many wives of strikers have gone to work at least part-time to augment the loss of income. Striking families are eating, but they don't have the money that they planned to have for that new car or boat.

This is not a time for even economical vacations either, for each striker must pull picket duty regularly.

For the men who are in management the strike has meant long grueling hours of work and irregular limited hours of leisure. The men are at the plant from four to six days at a stretch and work either eight hour shifts or 12-hour shifts so the plant is completely operative at all hours. They sleep on cots in temporary quarters at the back of the building. One man even sleeps in the women's washroom.

A downstate man from Consumers volunteered to come up and cook for the plant, and the men testify that he is doing a good job, but he doesn't cater to particular appetites like the cook at home may do.

When the men get home for 24 hours they are tired from working long shifts yet they try to cram yardwork, household jobs and some recreation into the short period.

Often a wife and children have entirely different plans from the man of the family as to how he will ration his time at home. Women with preschool children find it especially hard to have a husband gone, for they are confined to home and depend on their husbands for adult companionship and some help with the children.

Some men claim that their wives are spending every penny of the extra overtime income they make because even working wives have more time to shop when the man of the family isn't around.

For all families, those of management and labor alike the strike situation is not good for it is tense, temporary and unnatural. As it drags on into its eighth week both sides are hoping for a swift end to the strike.

helped stock the shelves with her own books, due to a lack of funds. She has been a great help to all students and has gained their respect and deep appreciation for her efforts. Students are aware of their education and they know when something is good. Larry said "the library, due to Mrs. Mudge, is finally at a stage where it should be. She has done wonders for all of us." It's a shame the students will be deprived of her excellent help in the future years.

Another issue brought up pertained to the student council. It looks like the council is just a front, with no real power or significance. Jill stated, "The council can't do anything but vote on bake sales and dances. No one ever knows what goes on at their meetings."

Even Larry as vice president of his class is excluded from these meetings. Revisions and alterations are never made too late.

So ends another year for seniors. There will be parties and lots of celebration for these kids, but the job is not yet completed. High school has given them their basic preparations for college and outside environment. Let's hope they did a good job - for what they have learned in high school is only a loose form of education. They are now on their own to try to cement all their basics into a firm way of life!

D-day approaches on school budget

Voters return to the polls Monday to again decide the fate of Charlevoix Public schools.

On the ballot are two separate millage requests. One calls for a 3.75 mill raise for operational expenses; the other for one mill for materials centers.

Both requests were placed before the electorate April 9 and were turned down. The 3.75 mill measure was downed by a vote of 587-401. The materials center was denied by a 553-435 vote.

Following numerous Board meetings, the district is coming back to the voter with the same two proposals.

Should the millage fail to pass on Monday, the Board will be forced to cut district programs to the tune of over $100,000.

Included in the possible cuts are all sports, music and extra curricular activities.

Salary cuts would pare some $69,203 from the proposed budget. Other possible cutbacks are eliminating five more teachers.

If all the possible cuts were made, a total budget savings of $90,853 would results.

Administrators and School Board members of the Charlevoix Public School District will answer questions about the school budget request, tonight (Wednesday) beginning at 7:05 p.m. on WJML radio.

The program will originate from the lobby of Charlevoix County State Bank. Anyone with questions may phone 547-6506 during the hour-long broadcast.

Edwards named member of AAMA

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS -- The American Academy of Medical Administrators announced today that Lawrence H. Edwards of Charlevoix has been elected as a member.

This honor is conferred upon those whose special qualifications in medical administration merit such recognition.

The Academy is an international professional society, some of the aims of which are to encourage and foster a scientific approach to the practice of medical administration; provide a means of intercommunication; promote, conduct, and foster educational courses in this specialty; establish and maintain a criterion of competency of those engaged in this profession; and to provide for recognition by means of fellowships, scholarships, and grants to those who are doing noteworthy service in this endeavor.

Edwards is the anesthetist at Charlevoix Hospital and has been acting administrator for the past several months.

He and his wife Rosalie have seven children and reside at 219 Park Street.

Intermediate District asks half-mill more

While school district voters are casting ballots for a total of 4.75 mills for the public school budget, they will also be asked to vote on the one-half mill increase sought by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

According to R. Dale Fassett, director of special education for the district, the request is in addition to the one-half "chartered" millage already in effect.

If the millage increase passes, the district anticipates a revenue yield of $180,000 from the one mill total.

Fassett stated that Monday's election is, at present, the only chance the district has to appeal to the voters for funds.

Phlugerhaggen

Sell a "Phlu"?- Courier will help

Charlevoix Courier classifieds have done it again. This time around, a $1 classified ad has been responsible for innumerable laughs....and response from as far away as Oakland, California.

Several weeks ago, partly as a joke and also to see what might result, the following advertisement was inserted in the classified section:

FOR SALE: Model No. 99 Phlugerhaggen -- with removable flam. Has four uploos that reverse to make contact with the ierk. Standard zitzen and cloggen that revolve counter-clockwise. Riggeltoggle and clutchritter included if desired. Battery operated piddlebottom is a bit worn and gets wet, but powder will correct. Krantzer and flipingert just overhauled. Low on cash after paying taxes and must part with this wonderful thing. Make offer, write Box P, care of Courier.

First to respond was G.R. Bradbury of St. Louis, Mo., who offered $6.02 for the "thing", if we delivered it during daylight hours on May 31.

If we failed to fulfill the contract, Bradbury wrote, his bid was void.

We chuckled at the note, and didn't give the Phlugerhaggen much more thought. . .that is until last Wednesday afternoon.

Inside

The survey of the CHS class of 1965 has been completed...for a look at the results, see Page 4.

Dr. L. Dale Fauntz is the Ellsworth commencement speaker. Details will be found on Page 3.

And...don't forget to VOTE, Monday, in the school elections at the high school.

CHS to graduate 102 tomorrow

T-minus one day and counting! All the seniors of Charlevoix High School are in the count-down for graduation tomorrow evening. Just as our Apollo astronauts, these youngsters will also be taking off for a new adventure.

Baccalaureate services were held Sunday, at 8 p.m. Rev. William H. Harmon of the Ironton Congregational church delivered his address to the students, entitled: "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom".

The peak of all this excitement will reach a climax tomorrow night when 102 seniors receive their diplomas. It will surely give them a boost in pride for their whole graduating class.

The commencement exercises will begin with the salutatory address by Kenneth J. Heeres, followed by the Valedictory address by Deborah J. Potter. The commencement address, "Accent on the Future", will be given by Earl J. Hill, administrative assistant in public relations, Consumers Power Company.

The actual presentation of the diplomas will be done by Glenn Kenney, president of the Board of Education. Rex E. Milligan, superintendent of schools, will present the students for diplomas to Kenney. Raymond O. Carr, high school principal, will be presenting awards to the graduates and introducing the guest speaker.

C. A. Odmark, head of the music department, will direct the music portion of the program. The band will play the following songs: "Pomp and Circumstances", "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna", Alma Mater and the National Anthem.

The Glee Club will sing "I Believe", "Graduation Day", and "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You".

The invocation will be given by the Rev. Albert F. Mansen, and the benediction by Rev. Duane Imig.

This will truely be a night to remember for the Seniors of our community. It may be the end of their high school days, but it's only the opening for new paths to follow. Friendships may be lost, and maybe forgotten, but the years they leave behind them can never be replaced.

Members of the 1969 graduating class are: Laurence L. Anders, Thomas W. Anderson, Beth M. Baldwin, J. Sue Bascom, Gary D. Beitel, Billie L. Bergmann, Daniel L. Bergmann, Scott W. Blanchard, Robert E. Borths, Janice M. Bruce, Thomas M. Burns, Ellen M. Buzzard, Nancy Carr, Hendrik G. Christiansen*, Frank M. Cook, Marcia Corradi, Patricia M. Cross, Terry L. Cummings, William J. Curtis, Elizabeth A. FOL sponsors art classes

Fine art classes will be available to the public, during the months of June, July and August sponsored by Charlevoix's Friends of the Library.

Two competent artists, one local and the other from Scottsdale, Arizona, will be teaching watercolor and pen and ink sketching to both adults and children.

Douglas Greenbowe's watercolor classes will be held the last two weeks in July. Greenbowe owns and operates an art school and gallery in Scottsdale where some of Charlevoix's summer visitors have been attending his classes for several years. Mrs. W.S. Retherford persuaded Greenbowe to follow several of his pupils here where classes will switch from sketching desert scenes to painting the more lush Charlevoix landscapes.

Greenbowe is well qualified as a teacher. He studied at the Art Student's League in New York and exhibited at the Milch Galleries there for ten years. During a two year period he was honored with seven museum shows and in 1958 was awarded the Bronze Medal by the National Art Club in New York.

He is listed in Who's Who in the East, Who's Who in American Art and is also a member of American Watercolor Society. His work hangs in the Butler Art Institute, Youngstown, Ohio; Dayton Art Museum, Dayton, Ohio; the American Academy of Arts and Letters, New York; Fry Public Museum, Seattle, Wash., and the Norfolk Museum of Art.

During World War II his sketches of marines in action were placed on tour by the American Red Cross. Several of his paintings are in the Eleanor Roosevelt Collection as well as many other important private collections.

Popular local artist, Hugh D. Riker, will continue with his watercolor classes this summer, beginning on June 18, every Wednesday for five weeks from 9:30 a.m. to noon. In August he will have an afternoon class for five consecutive days, August 4 through August 8, from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Bank notes longer hours

Charlevoix County State Bank executive vice president Fred Payne announced today that the bank will be open longer hours to serve its customers.

The bank will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., daily.

In addition, the drive-in window will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Fridays.

The main offices of the institution will remain open from 9:30 a.m. until 8 p.m. each Friday.

Memorial Day parade boasts flags, marchers

by Claudia R. Bost

Memorial Day 1969 was greeted with flag-waving, marching, riding and lots of sunshine. With each holiday there is lots of excitement, and this year's Memorial Day in Charlevoix was equal to any.

When the band members started marching last Friday, each foot perfectly in step, they set the pace for those to follow. C. A. Odmark, band director, kept the music flowing, and with it, the parade. In front, leading everyone was Parade Marshall Ben Gill. The bands, with a quick tempo, kept everyone moving through downtown Charlevoix.

The youngsters of the community entered into the fun by riding their decorated bicycles in the parade. Flags waving and ornaments flying described the scene of the morning. Bringing up the rear of the parade were the riders on horses. At least 20 horses and riders participated in the event.

Floral tributes were made by the women of the VFW and American Legion. The Master of Ceremonies this year was the Rev. G. Majors.

The parade moved up Bridge street and on to the cemetery. As it came to a halt and silence was observed, the Rev. Jack Harris delivered the invocation.

Larry Anders, a student from Charlevoix High School, recited the Gettysburg Address, in remembrance of our deceased and for what they fought.

The guest speaker of the day was Lt. Donald Luedke, Commander of the U.S. Coast Guard Station in Charlevoix. The men in the Coast Guard unit gave a salute with pride at the cemetery. It's hard not to feel very proud of our country, when you see those serving in the Armed Forces so encouragingly sincere.

The band played the National Anthem and Rev. Harris offered the benediction.

The parade did not last very long, but was a very joyous occasion for everyone. It was mixed with a feeling of sadness as they marched along. As they honored the dead, more were dying. Our country has fought to get where it is now, and we will continue to help our country and surrounding neighbors.

She and all her people are filled with a pride that was so impressively exhibited this Memorial Day. A pride which shows we are truely American, and proud of it.

Dockside Press to open after 5-year shutdown

By Bernice W[illegible]

Those rare souls who pleasure themselves and benefit posterity by ferreting out left-over treasures from distant days, as well as memorabilia of the present will be delighted that following a five-year hiatus, the world famous Dockside Press will be open for summer trade by its owner, the well known writer of Great Lakes lore, university instructor and high school student guidance counselor, William Ratigan, PhD of Charlevoix.

The Dockside Press was a sensation when first opened for business some 15 years ago. Just the kind of place to appeal to the individualist customer, it was first conceived by a genuinely individualistic family; wife, Eleanor (a professional writer in her own right), teen daughters, Patsy and Anne, who at that time were gleaning Valedictorian marks in the Charlevoix schools.

After stumbling over Papa Ratigan's collections of historic ships' gear plus a confusion of sundry manuscripts and historic Great Lakes' research bibliography, the feminine contingent uttered an ultimatum: Find a place for your junk so we can keep house!

Thus the Dockside Press was born in an abandoned fish market shanty, overlooking the old fishing wharf and the new docking slips for luxury cruisers in Charlevoix's land-locked harbor. Overnight the Dockside Press became a mecca for literary luminaries and serious scholars.

Written up by the editors of the lordly Ford Times, this August publication commissioned an artist of note to sketch the Dockside Press in color to illustrate the high-and-mighty editor's pot-hooks and hangers.

Dockside Press is the antithesis of the customary image of a modern bookshop: No shining chrome and plate glass -- no polished walnut here. The book shelves are weathered ships' planks held up by field rocks -- the books are old, worn, obviously often read and so prized by the shop's owner that he couldn't care less if none are ever sold.

Dr. Ratigan haunts local household auction sales events always on the lookout for old, rare books. Occasionally he will purchase an entire library in order to obtain one book for which he has long searched.

The rare books are placed with loving care on his booty shelf, the others go into a barrel outdoors for sale on the ten-cent market to all and sundry, although patronized principally by summer vacationers looking for an interesting volume to while away the tedium of a rainy day.

Informal fashion show set for Thursdays

by Claudia Bost

On the bright, sunny afternoon of May 29, Charlevoix introduced a new approach to "lunching." A faint hint of music in the background, carefree dinner table-talk, and a beautiful view of Charlevoix's Pine River Canal set the pace for the "Happening" at the Weathervane Inn.

An informal fashion show was presented to the people dining at the Weathervane. Although it was the first showing, there were a number of people present to observe. Shops participating included Boyne Sportswear of Boyne City and Petoskey; The Carriage Wheel, Polly Kay Shop and Bill Ploch's Gentlemen's Apparel, all of Charlevoix.

The smiling faces of the models created a pleasant atmosphere for the diners. Those modeling were Gail Meyers, former Miss Boyne City; Sharon McCary, also of Boyne City; Bette Bettel, Mrs. William Paddock, Debbie Stonman and Mrs. Thomas McDaniels, all of Charlevoix. Bill Ploch introduced the men's apparel from his clothing store.

The new idea of fashions mixed with lunch made a delightful afternoon for everyone involved. The invitation is extended, and we hope to see more people at the next show. They will be presented each Thursday from noon until 2 p.m.

Crime courses offered at EMU

YPSILANTI -- Graduate studies in the area of crime, delinquency and correction will be offered at Eastern Michigan University in the fall. The program will lead to a Master of Arts degree offered by the Department of Sociology.

Authorities have realized for some time the "need for an entirely new stance" in the field of criminology. An increasing demand has been noted for workers with advanced graduate training. Teaching students to prepare themselves for change is the purpose of this new area specialization at Eastern.

Among those expected to be attracted in this program are probation and parole workers and those who work with juveniles. Interest has already been displayed by police, teachers and even one newspaper reporter, according to Edward Green, head of the department.

Required courses will include Criminology, Causes of Crime, Treatment of Crime and Social Deviance.

Associated with Green in the new offering is Werner Einstadter, associate professor of sociology.

Further information may be obtained from Department of Sociology, Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, MI. 48197.

4-H awards offered for performance

Again this year, outstanding 4-H members will concentrate on summarizing their achievements and updating their project records with the hope of competing for a 1969 4-H Achievement award.

For the 18th straight year the Ford Motor Company Fund is sponsoring the national 4-H Achievement program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service. Awards consist of 12 national scholarships of $600 each; one all-expense trip per state for a delegate to the National 4-H Congress held in Chicago; gold-plated medals for four county winners.

As the name suggests, this program is a wrap up of all phases of 4-H work ranging from animal science to home economics. In judging winners, particular attention is given to community and school activities, junior leadership, and civic awareness.

Excellence in individual projects where initiative and steady progress are apparent puts the boy or girl in the lead, as does personal development, according to a 4-H spokesman. Last year nearly 8,800 young people across the country received an achievement honor medal.

To be eligible for a state or national award, the youths must be over 14 years of age, have completed at least three years of 4-H work, and write a 2,000 word essay on 4-H experiences.

The 12 scholarships are awarded to six boys and six girls. A survey of the 1968 recipients revealed that they ranged in age from 17 to 19 years, and were 4-H members from 7 to 10 years. Eight already were in college and the other four planned to attend. All the boys lived on farms and carried livestock and crops projects. Of the girls, three lived on farms and three in small towns. All excelled in home economics projects.

Locals

CHS class of '65 survey completed

The future of every community lies in the worth of the young people it sends forth into the world. What have they accomplished? How satisfied are they with their efforts? What do their futures hold? These are fundamental questions that must be answered in evaluating the human product that is the result of any community's combined resources: (church, school, social agencies, industrialists, news media, citizens in general, parents in particular.)

Following is a study in depth of the Charlevoix High School Class of 1965, that graduated four years ago this week. The reader is invited to judge for himself how proud this community may be of the young people of CHS '65 who entered the world of work, campus, homemaking, or military service.

The data provided by the accomplishments of the Class of '65 reflects the efforts of the total community in a cooperative enterprise. The short reports about each class member bring the graduates home again to the community and are heartwarming in their brief sketches of Charlevoix points with pride.

This survey is based on a four year program. It is the first of its kind. The school has run a brief survey on each graduation class since '62, but there were only on a one year term.

Many of the graduates decide to continue their studies and go on to college. Dr. William Ratigan, counselor at the high school, said that a strict four year program of education is not being used extensively as it has in the past. Instead, students may begin school, then withdraw to work for awhile, then decide to go back to school to finish up. He calls this program, "Attend, Withdraw, Return".

Dr. Ratigan is confident this survey shows our community the progress that has been accomplished by this graduation Class of '65.

Dr. Ratigan issued the following statement on his research:

~~Beginning with the CHS~~ Class of 1962, our graduates have been followed up each year the Christmas or Easter holiday after leaving school. This is the first survey of any Charlevoix class made four years after graduation. One result of the study indicates that, generally speaking, our graduates -- whether in the world of work or the world on campus--usually get around to doing what they said they were going to do, perhaps in a related field, perhaps at a different level, but they make their way.

This may account for the fact that they give the impression of being pleased with their choices and well satisfied with their lots in life. They also, as a class, reflect the mobility of the young people of today, the transition from school to work to school again, the phenomenon of withdraw and return, the urge to travel, to risk new experiences.

To get down to cases, 55 of the 88 members of the class of '65 chose to enter college for various reasons: to explore careers, to be with friends, to acquire the poise and maturity for certain occupations, etc. This represents a whopping 63 percent of the class but it should be clear that many colleges today are, as part of their services, performing the functions that so-called trade and technical schools are familiarly associated with in the public mind.

Among the 55 who entered college, 40 members of the class have completed definite programs or are in the process of doing so. This statistic of 80% does not take into account the women who married and the men who went into service, thereby interrupting college programs. It seems likely that a number of these would return and complete their programs, thus raising the percentage still higher. In addition to those who used college as the spring-board to careers, four women completed programs at academies (technical schools) a number of boys entered special schools of Mechanics, electronics, or communications in the Services, while others in the class served as apprentices, took training on the job, etc.

At least 16 members of the class have seen Service, six of them in Vietnam or its waters. Thirty-nine members are married, with wedding bells to sound for three more on June 14, and another in September. The class has 27 children, to date.

CHS '65 has produced or is in the immediate process of producing the following occupational people: 20 teachers (not including two whose programs are part - time and another who is an instructor in the Service); several secretaries; two engineers; three business administrators; two mix chemists; one horse trainer; a veteranarian; an R.-N.; a practical nurse; a radiologic (X-Ray) technologist; an attorney & CPA; an airline stewardess; three cosmetologists; two medical assistants; a golf course greens keeper; a plumber; two computer programmers; a state trooper; two electronic technicians; and among many other occupations, a number of happy housewives.

What beautiful and unusual weather we had for Memorial Day, and the Brookside Cemetery looks so fresh and beautiful with all fresh flowers and plants and not an artificial flower anywhere.

After several weeks in the hot sun they look like the last rose of summer all faded and disarranged. I visited a beautiful well kept cemetery where they were discarded with the fresh flowers after the third day. I commend the working committee for making this new rule. Brookside is really a beautiful spot by the side of the road, and we like to keep it that way until snow flies.

Carolyn and James Vanderwall spent the past weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Vanderwall returning to their work in Ann Arbor on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Le Bourdais and two children of Detroit are guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gilbert. Le Bourdais has returned home, but Mrs. Rose Le Bourdais and children will be here for two weeks with her family.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Krohn have returned home after spending the winter in California and have their Charlevoix Style Beauty Shoppe open for the summer season.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Alexander attended the Central Lake High School Reunion and Banquet from where the ladies were graduated on Friday afternoon and evening. And what a joy to see and visit with old friends and school mates. The Memory Room displaying old pictures brought back many happy memories for everyone and also many chuckles over the tales told during our school days. There were more older graduates than recent ones. The class of 1902 was represented. Mr. and Mrs. Max Smith of Petoskey also attended. We all hope to meet and be together again in three years for the next reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Perry of Lansing are spending several weeks in their cottage on Sweetbrier Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashford Orvis and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Orvis have returned to their homes in Flint after spending several days with Mrs. Lydia Orvis.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brennwin of Muskegon were callers this saturday afternoon at the home of their niece, Evelyn Vanderwall.

Mary Hawkins of Flint is a guest of Mable and Elliot Bird this weekend.

Mrs. Pauline Cahnfield had old friends as guests this weekend, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Tomson and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. Willet of Benton Harbor.

Our usual Memorial Day rain came Saturday, and it was all badly needed. We had a beautiful Rainbow across the western sky Sunday evening.

Poe Lock dedication

In the past 171 years, attempts to surmount the 21-foot fall of the Sault Rapids with a shipping lock into Lake Superior have advanced from birch bark canoes carrying around two tons to a projected Great Lakes freighter carrying 55,000 tons.

Fur traders of the powerful Northwest Company out of Montreal built the first lock at the Sault in 1797-1798, on what is now the Canadian side of the St. Marys River.

According to a contemporary report by a Captain Bruyeres of the English Army, this lock was 30 feet long and eight feet, nine inches wide, with a lift of nine feet. With this start, oxen walking a towpath pulled the canoes on through the rapids to the level of Lake Superior.

An historical comparison between the first and latest lock will be highlighted June 26 when the new $40,000,000 Poe Lock, largest of four locks operated by the U. S. Corps of Engineers at the Sault, is dedicated and opened to shipping traffic. Simultaneous joint ceremonies will also observe the tenth anniversary of the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The Poe Lock is 1,200 feet long and 110 feet wide, with a depth of 32 feet. It will accommodate ships 1,000 feet long and 105 feet wide, which will carry 55,000 tons, twice the cargo-carrying capacity of any ship now sailing the lakes. The first ship of this size has been ordered by Bethlehem Steel Co. for delivery during the 1970 navigation season. Several other ships 859 feet long and 105 feet wide are also under construction.

By comparison the freight canoes of the fur traders, adapted from the Chippewa war canoe, were from 25 to 35 feet long, carried from 1-½ to 2-½ tons of cargo, and were paddled by a crew of eight to fourteen men.

The 1798 canoe lock, built with timbered sides, floors and gates, gave loaded canoes only a partial lift over the rapids. The Northwest Company overcame the difference by constructing a sluiceway and canal which was 2,880 feet in length.

The current was swift in the sluiceway, so the traders built a road of logs laid side by side, 12 feet in width, throughout the full length. Loaded canoes, boats and barges were hauled through the sluiceway and canal by teams of oxen walking the log road.

Captain Bruyeres' report, dated September 10, 1802, and published in the Canadian Archives of 1886, indicates the sluiceway in itself was a major construction, made necessary to convey water across a swamp which lay between the canal in the upper river and the lock in the lower river.

He described the sluiceway as "a wooden trough" . . . of timber, framed and planked, 300 feet in length, eight feet, nine inches wide, six feet high, supported and leveled on beams of cedar through the swamp . . . to conduct water from the canal to the lock."

The canal itself he estimated at 2,580 feet. At the head of the canal, on the Lake Superior level, was a warehouse 36 by 23 feet in which trade goods and furs were stored while waiting transport.

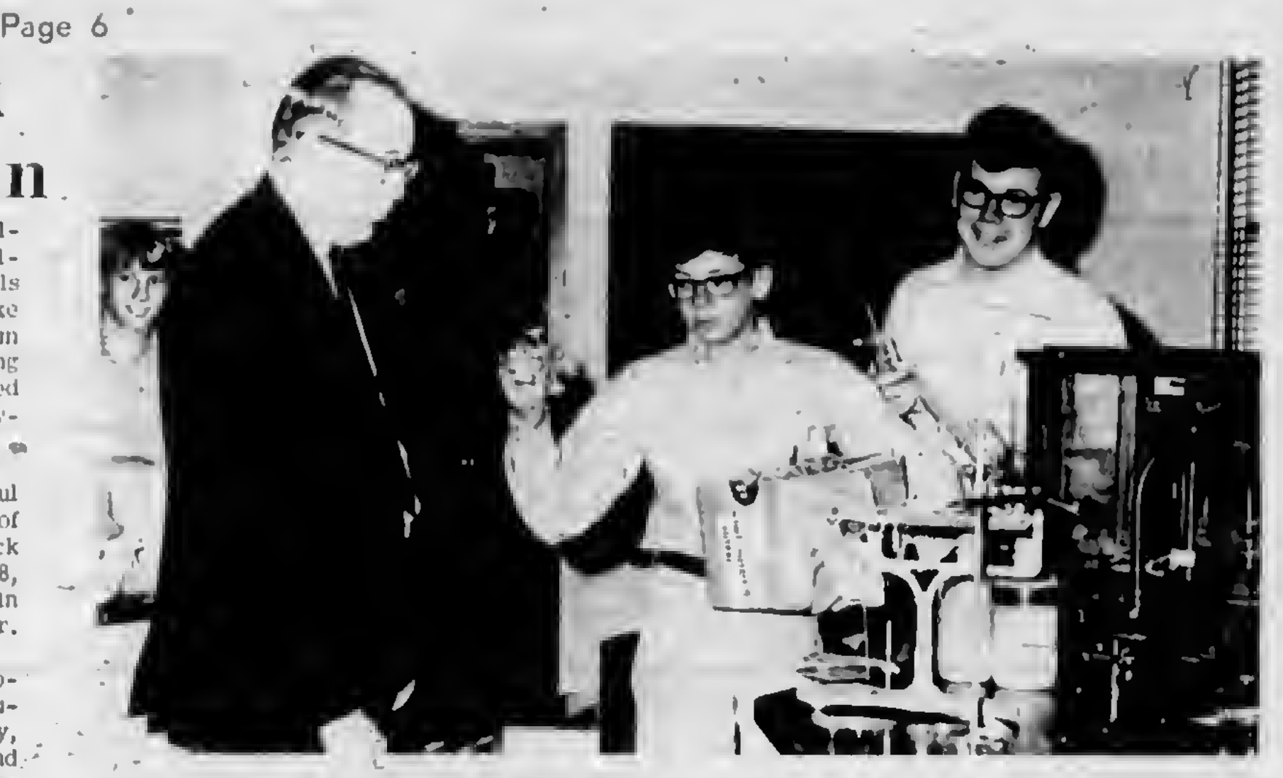
John D. Bouchard, Superintendent of the Canadian Ship Canal, who has done considerable research on the old lock, believes the canoe lock may have failed to operate successfully as a lock because of the tremendous hydraulic pressures against the gates generated by a nine-foot head of water.

He believes the traders would not have been able to operate the gates against these pressures with any means of power available to them at that time. However, he believes the lock gates could have been left open and the entire complex used as a single sluiceway for loaded craft.

In July, 1814, during the War of 1812-15, a U. S. raiding force attacked the trading post and burned the buildings. It is believed the lock, being built of wood and mostly above ground, was destroyed at the same time.

The site of the old lock was excavated in 1889 by a combined U. S. - Canadian group, which found bed timbers and foundations confirming the description of the lock as made by Captain Bruyeres, according to Bouchard.

Later these original remnants were faced with stone and are preserved today as a public display on the grounds of the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Co. in the Ontario Sault, where they may be viewed by visitors attending the Poe Lock Dedication.



Science teacher Jim Jensen and students examine equipment given CHS by Dow Chemical Company of Midland. The gift amounts to over $1,000 in equipment and chemicals according to Jensen.

Pat's Reaction

Thin may be in, Baby

By Pat Begrow

...but fat's where it's at. Those cheerful words which are attributed to the fleshier of the Supremes constitute the first breakthrough that I've heard about dieting in years. Thank goodness there's some charm still seen in a girl who carries a few extra pounds strategically placed. I'm getting pretty tired of all those slim down for summer adds showing skinny girls holding bottles of Diet-Rite, cans of Metracal or refreshing dishes of D-Zerta. Give me a root beer float any day.

Recently I was looking through a wonderful book titled THE AMERICAN MUSICAL THEATRE. In it are many photos of queens of the footlights from the turn of the century until today, and I couldn't help but notice that until 1930 there wasn't a slim one among them. The girls of Florenzo Ziegfield's Follies had tummies that protruded shamefully beneath their tight satin costumes.

In the movie Funny Girl starring Barbra Streisand, the Ziegfield Follies girls are portrayed as the slim, trim show girls of today. I'm sure these girls must weigh at least ten pounds less per girl than their famous predecessors did.

Nevertheless I've been shaken to the depths of my boots by the Doctor's Quick Weight Loss Diet. You know the one I mean where you eat lots of nonfat proteins and drink eight glasses of water a day. According to Dr. Stillman's weight chart, girls five feet tall should weigh between 95-100 pounds and can afford to gain five pounds for each inch in height over that. The trouble with this plan is that I actually have to start subtracting.

And you fellows can just stop laughing. A man six feet tall should weigh between 160 and 176 pounds according to this abominable chart. Subtract five or six pounds for every inch of height less and add five or six pounds for every inch of height in addition.

With summer coming up this picture unfolds as a pretty depressing one with no room at all allowed for ice cream, beer or potato chips.

And heavens that's not the worst of it.

"I can eat fruit and get slim," you might say.

The heck you can. That formidable, fashionable Weight Watcher's Club has now outlawed watermelon and cherries. Either they don't know that Michigan is the cherry capital of the nation or they don't care. In any case I personally think that it would show disloyalty to our fair State of Michigan for any of us to go on the Weight Watcher's Diet just before the cherry season begins.

Actually I think that a summer of hard boiled eggs, cottage cheese and celery sticks would be pretty dismal. I'd feel so sorry for myself that I wouldn't even feel that extra bounce in my step as the pounds rolled off. So in all fairness to myself and to my family and friends who want to see my happy face and not my sunken cheeks, I'll just have to postpone a diet regime until September. After all I want to look trim in ski pants too.

Recipe of the week

Classic Cake In Party Mood

Take a classic cake, add a touch of something different, and celebrate with a new-tasting dessert. What could be more classic than devil's food cake? For that delectable change, try filling your favorite one with a tempting creamy rum filling. For a finishing touch, this cake is topped with an extra-fluffy frosting.

Creamy Rum Filling

½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons corn starch
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup water
1 egg or 2 egg yolks
1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind
¼ cup lemon juice
½ teaspoon rum flavoring
1 tablespoon margarine
¼ cup heavy cream, whipped

Combine sugar, corn starch and salt in double boiler top. Gradually mix in water. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Cover and cook 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. (Increase time to 15 minutes if glass double boiler is used.) Beat the egg slightly and add a little hot mixture to egg. Stir egg into hot mixture over boiling water. Cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from boiling water. Stir in lemon rind, juice, rum flavoring and margarine. Chill. Fold whipped cream into chilled filling before spreading on cake.

Funeral services for Dennis G. Milewski, 22, of Melvindale, were to have been held at the Winchester Funeral Home Monday afternoon with the Rev. Duane Imig officiating. Burial was in Brookside cemetery.

The youth was killed Friday night when the motorcycle he was riding left the road in Kalkaska county. According to Sheriff's officials there, he struck his head on the branch of a tree. Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Terry of Wyandotte, and Tracy of Melvindale.

Born at Stanley, Wis. March 26, 1947, he went to Melvindale with his parents at the age of two years. He was employed at the Ford Motor Co. at the time of his death.

The Junior Class of '69 hosted the Seniors at a Banquet on Wednesday evening May 21, at the Parish Hall.

They chose as their theme, Three Coins In A Fountain. Decorations were in midnight blue and buttercup yellow, the senior class colors.

The interior of the hall, with an indoor fountain, matched the theme. Toastmaster was Kevin McDonough. Invocation was given by Father Louis Wren; the welcome was presented by Angela Wojan.

About 65 persons attended the banquet. Special guests were Father Louis, Mrs. Frances Hooper and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Christy, parents of the graduates and school board members, and the school children from grades eight through 12.

Graduation exercises were held Friday evening in Holy Cross Catholic Church with Father Louis presenting the diplomas and giving a short sermon. After services, a reception was held in the hall.

County receives aid from MSU institute

Michigan communities which need help in solving current problems or in planning for their future can get it from Michigan State University's Institute for Community Development and Services.

The help is available to both municipal officials and community leaders.

The Institute offers university assistance in the areas of economics, education, human relations, land use and planning, law enforcement, and state and local government, as well as organizational planning and adult education. It also provides access to additional resources of the university.

It provides research, consultation and publications on such matters as regional planning, economic development, governmental reorganization, intergovernmental relations, land use, regional and city police, water, sewer, recreational and other needs, and the utilization of human resources in handling them.

In addition, staff members will aid in involving local leaders and citizens in programs of study and action to better acquaint them with the community problems and means of solving them.

The Institute, a division of the Continuing Education Service, is located in Room 27, Kellogg Center, on the Michigan State campus at East Lansing. The director is Dr. Duane L. Gibson.

The Institute now is involved in a number of statewide projects, including a major study of Michigan's law enforcement structure for the Governor's Crime Commission, providing assistance to local Human Relations Councils through its Office of Human Relations and offering a statewide closed-circuit TV workshop, "The Officer and the Law," for police officials.

Its other activities vary from long - range, inclusive projects, such as work on Michigan tax reform and analysis of real and personal property values of Michigan's governmental units, to short-range and special projects, such as a governmental organization study in the Farmington area and conducting an economic feasibility study for the Sleeping Bear National Seashore Park.

Staff members also provide direct technical assistance to chambers of commerce, fine arts councils, planning commissions and women's clubs and other volunteer citizen groups. They help to arrange conferences and short courses on subjects of community interest, and, in the past, have helped to plan pageants and centennial observances.

During the past year in Charlevoix County, the Institute assisted in organizing and conducting Senior Government Day for 311 high school seniors from the county. It also provided educational consultation to the Charlevoix Planning Commission, City Council and Township Board regarding inter - governmental relations and developmental programming.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER

SUMMER SEASON STARTS . . . This was in evidence here at Charlevoix Thursday, May 29, Friday, the 30th, and Saturday, the 31st. Maybe you people punching the cash registers can't agree, but nevertheless, they were here. Today (Saturday, the 31st) we have had considerable personal office contacts, which were slightly different. They had specific questions, and appeared genuinely interested. Even some of the sizable cruisers were showing up here in our harbor, and some of the owners were somewhat disappointed because of the "fine facilities down stairs in the harborside building designed for the boaters use, that is those that rent docking space from the city.

Yesterday, Decoration Day, for my own information, I made three trips to the launching ramp area at the foot of Stover Road next to the Ferry Street Beach area. On my first trip, there were quite a number of automobiles parked having empty boat trailers attached. There were seven campers, four or five of which also had empty boat trailers attached. At the launching ramp there was considerable confusion, that is at least, when I was there. A little later I came back, at 10:50 a.m., the confusion in the parking area had quieted, but the jam at the boating ramp was still there. Folks, these were not all fishermen, they were people who launched their boats for a lake ride. I do not know why I was chosen, but two boaters came over wanting to know where the johns were and another one wanted to know if they would be allowed to sleep in their camper. To this last one I replied it would be well to check with the Police Department, which he said he would. Of course, I did tell him where there were camp sites as such, which were not far away. I came back to look it over again about 4:30 p.m. Quite a number of them were looking for picnic spots for their evening outdoor meal. All the tables were in use, and those who did not get tables had to make the best of it. I had not noticed any scattered debris, but I did notice there was yet confusion at the boat ramp. It must have been overlooked, that this year, according to record, there is indicated more campers, travel trailers, and boat trailers to be on the highway more than any other season. What I saw yesterday, and what I learned from a friend of mine who came into visit us from Cleveland, who left Cleveland about 4 Thursday afternoon, and arrived at our house at 2 a.m. Friday morning, and he said he never in his life in all his travels saw so many campers, travel trailers, and pleasure boat trailers than he saw on his way north after leaving the Ohio turnpike, all of which made for tremendous congestion until he got back to the Higgins Lake area. Now just imagine what we could be in for a little later in the season. I like the Boy Scout motto "Be prepared." Is Charlevoix?

In the U.S. Department of Commerce News Bulletin received today dated May, it might interest you to know it was indicated therein that personal income and personal income per capita reached high record in Michigan in 1968 according to the Department Office of Business Economics. Personal income in our state rose 10.1% from 1967 to 1968, compared to a rise of 9% last year. It was just related Michigan's position among fifty states, Michigan ranked 7th in total personal income in 1968, the same, however, as in 1967. Prior to 1967, Michigan ranked 6th until in 1967 Texas moved in front of Michigan by over one half billion dollars.

To those of you who do not know and who have been curious, the same as I, having to do with the remodeled small building and a new addition on Belvedere Avenue across from Erber Sinclair Service Station, I am pleased to inform you that "The Sandpiper" Art Shop will occupy this premise, sponsored by Karen Kierstead at 103 Belvedere Avenue, handling paintings, pottery, and prints. She anticipates opening up late in June and not later than July 1. The delay is due to the fact she has to finish teaching down state for this term.

As indicated before, this year we are compelled to operate the year with somewhat less budget. I hope at the next Board meeting the Ways & Means Committee will have some ideas for fund raising or otherwise certain phases of different things might necessarily have to be dropped. I certainly hope not. This condition reminds me, there is a repetition of last year so far as membership fees and contributions are concerned, there has been a little slow up and the margin of safety, so to speak, is quite thin. Therefore, I hope many of the members who are in the habit of paying their fees or contributions in June or July will soon begin sending them in. This is mentioned merely to call it to attention and it is planned as the time goes on to have some personal contacts made. There are several potential members who have indicated they will join the chamber, but yet have not got down to the point of writing the check, and they, too, will be prevailed upon.

Many people were inquiring why the public facilities here on the street level of the harborside building are not available in the evening or overnight. It seems as though some of the citizens of tomorrow had some part in the reason for locking the premises about 5 p.m. daily for the last three or four weeks. I have an idea the ban will be lifted and soon these premises will be made available again to the public which they deserve to have, now that all the damage has been repaired.

O.J. Simpson is back in the news this week. Simpson was undoubtedly the most sought-after college football player in the past quarter-century, and he and his Indianapolis agent know it.

Frankly, we wouldn't trade places with Buffalo Bills owner Ralph Wilson for two O.J.'s.

Wilson's team received the first draft pick after their disastrous 1968 season, when you could have counted their wins on one hand, and still had a few fingers left over.

At any rate, Wilson chose the USC great, and his troubles began.

At first, Simpson demanded a $600,000, five-year contract, and an interest-fee loan from the club of $500,000.

Wilson turned a pale shade of green and told Simpson to go stick up a bank.

Simpson countered with the proposal that the Bills peddle him to a West Coast team, where he wanted to live in the first place. But, O.J. added, if Wilson would sign him to a $650,000 contract, he would drop the demand for the loan.

Wilson didn't develop wild convulsions of glee over this "concession", either.

So, dear Ralph, you're saddled with a great football runner who probably won't suit up in a Buffalo uniform next year.

Do yourself a big favor, trade him to the Continental League, or let him play in Canada.

The Continental publicity-seekers have offered O.J. a $350,000 package over five years....unfortunately for the ex-Trojan, the entire league isn't worth that sum, and he probably would be left holding the mortgage on the franchise.

In Canada, as a superstar, Simpson could probably garner a $100,000 contract, but would have to take care of the team's equipment and line the field, too.

Super-inflated thoughts of one's value seem to be a disease that athletes contract with regularity. Simpson would have trouble making $8,000 a year in any other business.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Ward Sr. were visited over the Memorial Day holiday by their son, William H. Ward, and family of Birmingham, Michigan. Scott, their son, will be spending the summer with his grandparents in Charlevoix.

Road Signs for Boatmen

Learning to recognize the meaning of road signs by their shape and the messages printed upon them is basic for every automobile driver. So, too, should boatmen learn to distinguish the shape and markings of navigational buoys.

Buoys have numerous uses. They mark channels, underwater obstructions, shoals and other hazards to navigation. The meaning attached to each buoy is indicated by its shape, color, number and arrangement of stripes. As indicated in the Evinrude publication, "Outboard Boating Skills," some states and municipalities use various methods of marking inland waterways, though most follow closely the standard system used on federal waters.

There are four basic types of buoys in the federal system. These are nuns, cans, lighted buoys and sound buoys (gong, bell, whistle). Long, slender buoys, called spars, are sometimes used in place of nuns and cans.

It is more important to remember the color of the buoy, or its light, than the shape. Red buoys, always marked with even numbers, indicate the starboard, or right, side of the channel. Black buoys, carrying odd numbers, indicate the port boundary of the channel.

An easy way to remember, upon entering a waterway from seaward, is to always keep the red buoys on the starboard side. These are the basic three R's of piloting—"red right returning." In other words, always keep the RED buoys on your RIGHT when RETURNING from sea.

Light and sound buoys may be painted either red or black, depending on their use. They are sometimes combined into lighted bell buoys. The sound buoys are to help navigation in poor visibility, lights to facilitate traveling the waterways by night.

By the same rule, lighted buoys that indicate the starboard side of the channel show red lights, or sometimes white. Lighted buoys that signify the port side of the channel are usually green or white. They may be either fixed or flashing lights. These buoys are identifiable by what are known as their "characteristics." By this is meant the type of flash and the frequency of the flash.

Combination red and black horizontally striped buoys mark channel junctions, or obstructions. They may be passed on either side. However, if the top stripe is red, the preferred channel is to port, and if black, the preferred channel is starboard. Vertical striped black and white buoys mark mid-channel points and may be passed on either side.

There is nothing very difficult about the system. A boatman venturing onto waters marked with the buoy system for the first time should study the meaning of the buoys, and then heed them, just as he would road signs. Remember, the buoys are put there for a purpose.

Boating is a sport on the move. Learning the "boating road signs" is only a matter of common sense.

All boatmen should recognize and understand the shape and markings of navigational buoys. This standard system is used on federal waters and by many states and municipalities.

Cooking Aboard

Cookouts and boating are excellent summer companions, but don't carry togetherness too far, warns the Evinrude News Service.

If you carry a charcoal grill aboard your boat, plan to do your cooking on the shore, safely away from any gasoline.

If you must cook aboard, take a few simple precautions. Place the cooker as far away from the engine compartment as possible. Be equally careful with stored gasoline. Keep the immediate cooking area clear.

It really happened! While playing the Municipal Golf Course last week, Courier's Larry Edwards went into the rough for an iron shot...and found two baby rabbits guarding his ball. Fate of the rabbits was not recorded, but Edwards reportedly took a 9 on the hole.

The State of Michigan is offering college courses in fishing, June 9-12. For the second year, Freshwater Angling School will be held at Alpena Community College, where registrations will be received beginning Sunday, June 8. The cost to students will be $75, covering all expenses.

The Angling School faculty will be composed of specialists in fishing equipment from major tackle manufacturers and specialists in the habitat and habits of freshwater fish, from the Department of Natural Resources of Michigan State University, headed by Dr. Howard Tanner. Among those active in planning and operating the angling school are Dr. Peter I. Tack, concentrating on fish; Dr. Miles Kevern, whose field is water resources; Dr. Eugene Roeloff, sports fishing, and Celvin McNabb, and authority on a wide range of fishing subjects.

An education in freshwater angling requires not only the knowledge of lures, baits and fishing techniques; identification of various fish species and knowledge of their habits; knowledge of the insect life of a stream, and to get the fullest possible returns, an angler should also know as much as possible of the natural history of the area where he finds his sport.

Whether or not he is catching limits, the fisherman will be richly rewarded by recognizing plants, trees, birds and mammals he meets along the way. He should know an otter slide when he sees it and feel kinship with his fellow anglers --kingfisher, heron, osprey, mink, otter, snake.

Perhaps the big moment of his day will be when he rounds a bend and surprises a deer drinking from the stream.

A fisherman likes to catch fish and he likes to eat fish and he likes to talk about fishing. As the years roll on he will remember a few big fish, and, most vividly, he will recall the soaring eagle, the hunting mink, a grouse putting on the broken-wing act to lure him away from her brood. He will remember observing the impossible feet of a shrew running on top of the water in a beaver pond.

Our sporting traditions are derived largely from the British. The British sportsman takes an active interest in all phases of natural history. Publications devoted to fishing, and to what we called hunting and the British call shooting, give almost as much space to the ways of birds and beasts as to rod and gun activities.

Tiger Tales

Another strong second-half resurgence made 1968 a good year for powerful, durable Norm Cash, the iron-man of the Tigers.

"Stormin Norman", who played in 152 games in 1967 and 160 in 1966 despite a hernia, was platooned at first base early in the 1968 campaign because he was not hitting. But, just as he has in previous years, Cash bounced back to raise his average from below .200 to .263 and was among the Tiger leaders with 25 home runs and 63 RBI despite appearing in only 127 games.

Cash also was a World Series hero, hitting safely in his last six plate appearances and ending up with a .385 average, high for the Tigers.

The likeable Texan is a hard-nosed, rugged competitor. He repeatedly has shaken off ailments and injuries that would have shelved more brittle players, and it has been such resiliency combined with rigorous power that has contributed so substantially to Detroit pennant drives.

Cash has hit with power ever since he came to the Tigers in 1960 and every year his feats attain new significance and dimension. In 1968 he passed Rudy York for third place among Tiger career leaders in home runs -- and for the eighth year in a row hit more than 20 home runs.

In 1961, his second season with the Tigers, Cash won the American League batting championship with a .361 average and sent one of his 41 home runs over the rightfield roof of Tiger Stadium. The next year three of his 39 homers cleared the third deck. At the time only two other sluggers had accomplished the feat -- Mickey Mantle three times and Ted Williams once.

In the nine seasons he has been with the Tigers Cash has hit a total of 256 homers, an average of 28 per season, and has batted in a total of 756 runs, an average of 84 a season.

These are the credentials that have identified the Texas rancher as one of the foremost power hitters in the league. He has never approached his hitting pace of 1961, when he became Detroit's 22nd batting champion, but each time his critics have written him off as a flash in the pan he has rebounded with authority.

Such a surge in the last three months of the 1965 season earned him the award as the comeback player of the year in The Sporting News poll. From the Fourth of July of that year Cash hit 26 home runs and batted in 64. This momentum carried over into the 1966 season when he attained his best home run output since 1962 and batted in 93 runs, also his highest total since 1962.

A bouncy six-footer weighing 190, Cash was born Nov. 10, 1934 at Justiceburg and attended Post High School. He went on to San Angelo Junior College, playing summer baseball with a town team. He transferred to Sul Ross State College and became a star in the Lone Star Conference, drafted 13th by the Chicago Bears as a halfback and good enough on the diamond to be offered a contract by the Chicago White Sox, which he signed in 1955. Switching from the outfield to first base, then from Chicago to Cleveland, and then to Detroit in December 1959, Cash has been a regular ever since.

Since 1954 Norm has been married to Myrta Bob Harper, who comes from a prominent West Texas ranching family. They now live in Fort Worth with their two children.

Buick Open tourney is million $$ baby

Golf today is such a golden sport that the Buick Open by itself is a million-dollar baby for the PGA touring pros.

When the 12th annual tournament starts July 3 at Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club in Grand Blanc the Open will be well into its second million. Actual PGA purses since the Open began in 1958 total $814,500, but there have been many additional prizes in cash and cars.

Official purses this year are $125,000, and as in the past another $5,000 for the annual pro-am tournament; use of current-model Buicks to the champion for five years; use of new Buicks to the next five finishers for one year; a new car outright for each hole-in-one; and an Opel as a gift to the champion's wife.

Hole - in - one? There have been seven in the last seven years, two on the same day last year, and they've helped lure an average of 69,540 to the Buick Open galleries for the last five years.

Last year's galleries, including the pro-am, were a record 90,927 and peaked on Sunday when Tom Weiskopf's 280 gave him a one-shot victory over rookie Mike Hill of Jackson, Mich.

Two - dollar - a - day advance tickets, close to the biggest spectator bargain in professional sports, are going on sale at several hundred volunteer agencies in almost all Michigan counties.

The Open again is the only major championship or national PGA golf in Michigan this year, Thurs. through Sun., July 3-6, and will field 144 American and international pros and amateurs.

Weiskopf will defend his title against the best of the pros on the PGA tour, doubtless with heavy competition from other past Buick Open champions such as Billy Casper ('58); Art Wall ('59); Mike Souchak ('60), Oakland Hills' professional; Jack Burke Jr. ('61); Bill Collins ('62); Phil Rodgers ('66); and Julius Boros ('62 and '67) who with the late Tony Lema were the Open's two double champions.

The Open is a full week of golf, official - PGA practice Mon. and Tues., June 30 and July 1; the qualifying round at Warwick Hills Mon.; and the annual Pro-Am Wed.

Advance tickets are printed in $2 denomination, bound in $10 and $20 books, one ticket valid for admission any of the seven days. Gate admission is $3 cash Mon. through Fri., $4 Sat. and Sun. All tickets include parking for as many as 12,000 cars.

The Buick Open also will be the week's big sports spectacular on television - 2½ hours live and in color on CBS-TV, 4-5 p.m. Michigan time Sat., July 5, and 3:30-5 p.m. Michigan time Sun., July 6.

The advance sale closes Sun., June 29. Most Buick dealers are volunteer agencies, nearly all country clubs and golf courses, many driving ranges. Advance tickets also are available by mail for $10 or $20 per book with a stamped, addressed envelope mailed to "Buick Open Tickets," P.O. Box 205, Flint, Mich. 48501.

MSU fishing school set

Gone fishin'.

This is what 30 Michigan fishing buffs will tell people during the week of June 8 to 12. They will be attending Michigan State University's second Freshwater Angling School in Alpena.

The school is designed for retirees and others interested in the latest angles on angling.

It will be sponsored again by the MSU department of fisheries and wildlife, in cooperation with Alpena Community College, and aided financially by a grant from The Sports Foundation, Inc.

"Fishing is the largest single participation sport in Michigan, and one which a person can enjoy throughout his lifetime," points out Dr. Peter I. Tack, school director and chairman of the fisheries and wildlife department at Michigan State.

Angler - students will learn about freshwater game and pan fish, such as trout, pike, bass, sunfish, catfish and smelt.

Other sessions will deal with fly fishing gear and its use, baits and lures, casting instruction and tackle balancing. There also are sessions on the care and preparation of fish for eating and freezing, water and boat safety, and first aid.

To put into practice what they are taught, participants will test their angling skill on nearby lakes and streams.

Presenting the instruction will be seven specialists from the MSU faculty and from major tackle manufacturers.

A nominal registration fee includes meals, housing and instructional costs, but students must furnish their own gear.

Interested men and women can register or obtain additional information by contacting the Continuing Education Service, Kellogg Center, MSU, East Lansing 48823.

Our parade

What would Memorial Day be without a parade?

For most of us, it would be Easter without the well-known Bunny...the Fourth of July without fireworks.

We experienced our first Charlevoix Memorial Day parade last Friday, complete with the high school band and majorettes (maybe the last time we'll see them if the school millage doesn't pass), members of our armed forces, children and speeches.

Memorial Day was established long ago to honor our fighting men who died in the line of battle, but here in the North it also heralds the coming of sunshine and warm weather as well.

The transformation from a calendar spring to a real one is exulted.

Before this past weekend, our beaches were barren, save for a few hearty souls who braved the chill wind and icy waters to start the summer suntan the last full week in May.

But our long Memorial Day weekend brought crowds to the sand...the sun-worshipers arrived. And so did the picnickers, mosquitos, ants, maypole fanciers and a dozen candidates for the Polar Bear Club who actually fully immersed themselves in the cool waters of Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan.

The North came alive...budding flowers and trees. The sun returned from her winter retreat and our summer visitors began to remove a winter's clutter from their warm-weather homes.

To us newcomers, the prediction of beautiful, sun-soaked beaches and waters...lush greenery and sparkling sights were mere promises until last weekend.

Now, however, we have seen re-birth in the North...and it is the most beautiful we have ever experienced.

The day began with a parade...and ended with hundreds of sunburns.

What youngster, be he four of four score, could ask for more?

A fair deal

The problem of what to do with $100 million seems to be creating more problems now that it has been approved by the voters for use in expanding Michigan's recreation facilities than it did prior to the November referendum.

It was thought in many places that former Gov. George Romney argued for support of the bond issue on the basis that $70 million would be used for out-state recreational facilities and $30 million for the cities.

He said this was not the case after his successor Gov. William Milliken created a stir by suggesting that $80 million go to the cities and $20 million to the out-state areas.

SINCE THEN, however, Gov. Milliken has revised the formula to provide $40 million for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the old Conservation Commission, and $60 million to local units of government of which $30 million would go exclusively to cities of more than 100,000 population.

The Oakland County Board of Supervisors has gone on record as favoring the 40-30-30 formula, and so has Kenneth Van Natta and Gerald Lacey, director and assistant director of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Department.

We think the 40-30-30 formula is a good compromise and should be supported.

It is, as those supporting the governor's latest proposals assert, the fairest division of the bond funds in that it most equally balances the needs of all the areas and people of Michigan.

WE HAVE ALWAYS contended that government money could be spent most effectively if it were spent by those dealing closest and most directly with the problems the money is intended to help resolve. Thus we like to see some of the funds being distributed to local units of government.

Urban areas are in need of recreation areas. All too often it is the open space of existing parks and recreation areas in cities that attracts the surveyor's transit of cost-conscious road engineers in their quest for congestion-fighting expressways.

Flint, Detroit, Lansing and Grand Rapids would qualify for expenditures because they have more than 100,000 inhabitants. The re-building of urban centers with this bonding money will now allow the inclusion of consideration of recreation, making the plans more realistic.

We also hope those planning for new recreation facilities both in the cities and out-state heed Gov. Milliken's suggestion that uses be designed so people can benefit year-round and not only at certain times of the year, as is the case with game preserves.

Vote Monday

Monday is election day...and decision day...for the school systems in Charlevoix.

Elections will be held in Charlevoix High School. The outcome will determine whether or not our public school district will function fully next term, or if program cutbacks will be necessary.

In addition, the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District will be asking voters for an additional one-half mill for their programs.

Voters will also choose residents to the school boards of the two districts.

The decisions reached in the voting booths will be most important.

The Courier has urged a "yes" vote to the public school district's request for 3.75 mills for operational expenses and one mill for material centers.

Though we sincerely hope the voter passes these measures, it is imperative that ALL the electors be heard.

Our final plea before Election Day is VOTE on June 9.

Mini-torial

Postal system

(Lapeer County Press)

The nation's postal service is in a "race with catastrophe," the President's Commission on Postal Organization reports.

President Johnson says the report is "sobering." Postmaster General Marvin Watson named another commission to study the report. Whether that's the last anyone will hear of it, no one knows. But before it's filed and forgotten, some of its startling statistics are worth looking at:

Productivity of postal employes over the last 10 years has increased less than 3% while the productivity of U.S. industrial workers has climbed more than 30%.

Yet postal salaries have jumped more than 50% during that period, as against 40% for U.S. industry averages.

Eighty percent of all postal employes in the first 5 grades (and they make up 85% of the Department's total employment) finish their careers in the same grade level as they started.

It takes 13 weeks (minimum) to process an application for employment at the Post Office.

A recent survey showed 67% of the job applicants in 17 large metropolitan areas did not wait for the process to grind to its completion -- presumably taking other employment instead.

An analysis made for the Department recently showed that if every one of the 75 largest post offices could operate as well as the 10 most efficient, their mail processing productivity could improve by 33%.

In 1967 the Post Office handled 78-billion pieces of mail; in 1977, based on recent trends, the volume will reach 110-billion pieces.

So whether the commission's solution is accepted or not, its members are confident the problem won't go away. The report leads off with this "sobering" summary:

"The United States Post Office faces a crisis. Each year it slips further behind the rest of the economy in service, in efficiency and in meeting its responsibilities as an employer. It spends $5 for every $4 it takes in.

"There is widespread disquiet among postal employes."

Working conditions are "appalling" where old facilities are crowded and dirty, with poor lighting, heating and cooling.

The average employe spends "less than 1 day a year in training, more than half of it on his own time.

"The Post Office's inefficiency is starkly apparent to anyone who walks across a workroom floor," the report states.

"In most offices men and women lift, haul and push mail sacks and boxes with little more mechanical assistance than the handcart available centuries ago.

"In this electronic era, the basic sorting device remains the pigeonhole case, into which letters are placed, by hand, one by one.

"The basic parcel post container is the canvas sack, filled, lifted and dumped by human labor."

While the Commission repeatedly expressed its surprise at the high quality and dedication of postal employes, it criticized the political involvement of postmaster and rural letter carrier selection.

Postmasters and other lower level executives of the department find their hands tied. The Postal Manual details so much trivia that the tiniest chore is "done by the manual." The on-the-job manager has no opportunity to streamline archaic systems.

What are the prospects? It'll get worse before it gets better. That's the only thing you can be sure of in the Post Office Department.

Teacher negotiations

Though Charlevoix is not faced with teacher contract negotiations this year, it is interesting to note the problems facing other Northern districts.

With a new contract coming up next year, we may find the going rough:

"With only two weeks remaining in the current school year, representatives of teacher associations and boards of education are busy negotiating teacher contracts for next year.

"Of the 49 school districts in the northern part of the lower peninsula, only three have definitely settled contract negotiations for the 1969-70 school year.

"Negotiations are still proceeding in about 43 districts, according to Mrs. Maurine Wyatt, Michigan Education Association Lower Northern Center Director.

"Teachers are making every effort to complete negotiations before the end of the school year with meetings taking place once or twice a week in most units," Mrs. Wyatt said.

"We anticipate many settlements as soon as the State Aid Formula is definitely determined" she said.

"Progress is particularly slow in only one unit, and that is Cheboygan," Mrs. Wyatt added. "Teachers have been meeting with Board representatives there every Tuesday since the first of February, but as yet have received no counter proposal to their offer. If some progress is not made, negotiations may break off for the summer," she said.

Colleges need veterans

I know how to end all the foolishness on our college campuses. But first we have to bring the troops home from Vietnam.

As you can see, I am here - with going to solve 2 tremendous problems which have long stumped the best minds in the nation. Isn't it amazing that you paid only 10 or 15 cents for this newspaper? You big spenders should buy two and send one to President Nixon.

First, let's deal with Vietnam. All the U.S. has to do is say, "hurray, we won" and get out. Sure, nobody is going to be fooled. But when we finally do cease fire, in 6 months or 6 years, nobody is going to believe whatever phony reason Washington gives then, either. The marvelous difference is that, using my brand of phoniness, 600 or 6,000 or 60,000 young men will not bleed their last drop into the Vietnam mud.

Sure, I know the dominos are supposed to fall Red and the U.S. retreats. I doubt it but, if so, so what? Do you think the average Vietnam citizen will be worse off without U.S. troops shooting? When you have been hungry and homeless and caught in a stupid crossfire all your life, it is hard to imagine that tomorrow is going to be worse. What could happen, the sun fall on the chicken coop?

Ok, that takes care of the war. Now I get devious. The next step is to discharge our troops directly into our colleges on the GI Bill of Rights. For taxpayers, it will be cheaper than killing Viet Cong. For the ex-soldiers, anything is better than working for General Hershey and an education, even if forcefed, is sure to make them more smart than sick.

As for the colleges, and this is the important part of my plot, the influx of thousands of veterans could be a last-gasp reprieve from the death house.

War veterans simply wouldn't put up with all the nonsense now messing up our campuses. I remember from World War II. The ex-GIs were there for 3 reasons: to learn, to drink beer and to renew relationships with females. They sneered at such childish things as panty raids and snake dances and water fights. If some punk freshman had barred an ex-infantry sergeant from entering the library because there were not enough black history books inside -- the sergeant would have thrown the freshman over the clock tower.

Constant readers (Mother and Aunt Madeline) know I am not against dissent from our youth - or from their parents. I support anyone who protests war, racism, the draft or unsalted popcorn. But the protest must be peaceful in that it does not interfere with the rights of others -- to get an education or to get across the street. When the protestors break laws, they should be prepared and willing to pay the penalty, ala Martin Luther King. They shouldn't holler for amnesty while still wiping the blood from their hands. A lot of dumb laws need breaking. But a lot of dummies are breaking any old law just for kicks.

A major point in my plan is that black men are fighting much more than their share of the war in Vietnam. This would mean a lot of black veterans on the campuses. They could plant some convincing combat boots into the fannies of their Negro brothers who don't realize that, just because it is immensely more justified, black racism doesn't make any more sense than white racism. And a bomb in the Literature Bldg. is as senseless as a bomb in Saigon.

It is a minority of students who are making battlefields of our campuses. But the majority are sitting around watching. Veterans of bloodier battlefields could spur that majority to laugh - or throw - the silly kids out of the dean's office and back into class.

Then a guy could get down to peaceful studying, beering and wenching.

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

From our "hard to believe but true" department comes this item:

The old Byers Opera House in Ft. Worth, Tex., never would have threatened New York's Metropolitan Opera; but on Sept. 21, 1908, there was an electric happening on its stage that proved a hard act to follow.

BARRY BURKE, a stagehand, screwed in a tight bulb. To this day, it's still burning.

Nobody knows why. The average bulb lasts 750 to 1,000 hours.

"It's a phenomenal thing," said a Texas Electric Service spokesman. "I guess the reasons it has burned so long are that the filament was heavy carbon and the light has never been turned off.

"It's up there in the ceiling where there is no jarring. Everything is favorable for it to burn."

Burke died more than five years ago and the Byers Opera House is now the Palace Theater.

But the light burns on.

While most were enjoying a long Memorial Day weekend, members of our staff mixed in a little work with their fun.

Larry Edwards told us his golf game went from fun to work with double bogeys on several holes. . .Claudia Bost not only climbed aboard a horse to ride in the parade in town, but wrote the story you'll find in this issue.

We snapped a few pictures at the parade and loafed on the beach.

We journeyed "to the farm" with the kindergarten classes last week. About 100 five-year-olds flowed over the acreage, milling with sheep, calves, and turkeys.

The youngsters, sheep and calves seemed to take the entire event in stride, but the turkeys didn't take kindly to the kindergarteners attempts at petting them.

As is probably normal, the youngsters were most interested in the resident German sheppard and some young kittens, animals most of them have in their own homes.

A tip of the hat to: All the Charlevoix High School graduating seniors.

It's about time to start thinking of cleaning our public beaches. Winter always seems to bring a rash of discarded cans, broken glass and other assorted goodies to the shoreline.

Last week, we ran a picture of the Welcome to Charlevoix sign without its "L". . .we note now that a small "L" has been inserted. We know not who is responsible for the fast action.

The motor vehicle people in Lansing send the following word:

In an analysis of the rush-period of plate buying, Secretary of State James M. Hare said sales soared to new record highs. Hare said sales of plates were more than a quarter-million higher than the same period in 1968.

'Phlu'

"Box P" received two letters in the afternoon mail. Both of them were postmarked in Oakland, California.

In a yet undertermined way, the Montclarion - Piedmont Spectator learned of the Courier ad and informed its readers that the item was available "in Charlevoix, Michigan".

With that encouragement, and an apparent desire to own a Phlugerhaggen, Jim Young, proprietor of the Merrlewood arts and crafts shop in Oakland, offered to swap the "phlu" for his Model 007 Bidetfortisier.

Not to be left behind, Stanley Lichtenstein, also of Oakland, suggested we trade our "phlu" for his rare Model 22 Phundra, "complete with tutmen, yabish and glubs".

"You'll be the hit of Charlevoix, Michigan," Lichtenstein informed us.

The Phlugerhaggen ad is not new to the newspaper business. It has been used in numerous publications over the years by editors and advertising men to add a touch of the unusual to the classifieds. It was placed in the Courier for the same reason.

However, we didn't expect to hear from people in Missouri and California.

Of course, it does not take the unusual or humorous to make a Courier classified "pay off".

In fact, the direct opposite normally is true. When area residents have something to sell, or are seeking a particular item, a low-cost Courier classified is the "people reacher".

Courier ads are read by thousands each and every week, and all for less than the price of a movie or a pair of socks.

If you want to buy or sell a Phlugerhaggen. . . .or any other item. . . . .do it the proven way--with a Courier classified.

In addition, Riker will teach pen and ink sketching August 4 through 8 from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Riker's work is already very familiar in our area because his pen and ink drawings are on sale in numerous shops both here and in Petoskey. He studied at the Flint Institute of Arts; Layton School of Arts, Milwaukee, Wis.; School of Practical Arts, Boston, Mass.; Don Kingman, NSWA Watercolorist, New York City and in Mexico City for a year.

He has exhibited at one man shows in San Francisco, Mexico City, Palm Beach and New York. He has lived and worked in San Francisco, Calif.; Alberquerque, N.M.; Chapala, Jaliwco, Mexico, Heritage House Loft Studio and for the past year in Charlevoix.

Anyone interested in joining either Greenbowe's classes or Riker's classes may register by dropping a note to the Charlevoix Library, 109 Clinton Street, or telephone 547-2651 between 1 and 8 p.m.

Both artists plan to teach in the great outdoors, weather permitting. Otherwise classes will be held on the lower level of the library. "We are very proud to sponsor such a wide selection of art classes here this summer," says the Rev. Hewitt Johnson, chairman of the Friends of the Library.

Match that, anybody.

We give you an honest increase in car at an honest decrease in price.

Take the '69 Impala above. We improved the ride. Made it quieter inside. Added an anti-theft locking device. Put steel guard rails in the doors.

Still, this Impala with a 300-hp V8, Turbo Hydra-matic, advanced-design power disc brakes, head restraints, whitewalls and wheel covers is priced $101* less than in 1968.

The 300-hp V8 is priced $40 less than last year's 275-hp. Turbo Hydra-matic costs less. Power disc brakes about half as much. Whitewalls a little less. Wheel covers about the same. And head restraints are now standard.

Upping value and dropping price. That's the way Chevrolet operates.

However, the ten-cent fee is not mandatory: As the sign tells it--"If you don't have a dime now, give it to the church later!" Dr. Ratigan has thus arranged so even a dime noval cannot be stolen -- he gives it freely in a true Christian spirit.

At Dockside Press, Dr. Ratigan pores over ancient charts and contemporary maps in his continuing search for authentic Great Lakes' lore. Here his vintage typewriter clacks noisily as his research is transferred to copy that will one day delight those who yearn for adventure by land or by sea.

Among the many historic items at the tiny Dockside Press facing Belvedere avenue from the Round Lake shore, is the printing press that once belonged to Charlevoix County's famous Mormon King, James J. Strang of the Mormon colony established in 1850 on Beaver Island, a scant 20 miles from Charlevoix to the northwest.

"King" Strang printed what was undoubtedly the first newspaper in the county but the newsheet was as short-lived as the colony. However, the old press lives on although the square riggers and side wheelers that brought it to the north country have long since passed from the scene.

Also on display are several ship's models included in which are models of the old Mackinaw boats--those sturdy double-enders so steady in storms that even the most cautious landlubbers were willing to sail with a Mackinaw.

Dr. Ratigan, like all good sea-going skippers keeps a log--an outside ledger which he requires all visitors to Dockside Press to sign.

The great and the near great are here--a testimony that Charlevoix and the north country are not so far removed from the mainstream of life.

The Dockside Press is a nondescript building with little to recommend it as the treasure trove that it is. The sign over the front door is as weatherbeaten as the building, the walls of which are covered with sunfaded "book" letters.

But in case the visitor needs other confirmation that this is "the place", Dr. Ratigan's 1920 Kelly green (to compliment his Irish forebears) Model T Ford is usually parked alongside like an ensign on a mast denoting that the Skipper is aboard! Whenever the outmoded pick-up is at the curb, Dockside Press is open for business, Skipper Ratigan is at the helm and ALL'S WELL!

Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, established in 1888, is the oldest town between the Alleghenies and the Rockies.

City rec plans set

Plans for the city's summer recreation program have been announced by director Dean Davenport. The popular program that continues to grow each summer will offer several new activities to local residents.

If enough interest is shown, a women's jogging and activity class will be scheduled. A bicycle derby for youngsters is tentatively planned with several activities planned around bicycling. Croquet activities, including play in a doubles league, will be scheduled in one of the parks located downtown.

In announcing the preliminary plans, Davenport emphasized that the popular events and activities from previous summer programs will continue.

Archie L. Livingston retires after 56 years

The people of Charlevoix are aware of Archie Livingston's history with the First State Bank of Charlevoix, but not everyone is acquainted with some of the events that have happened to Livingston, which are directly responsible for his successful years here in Charlevoix.

He and his family have a background in banking which makes it easy to understand why he himself has been such an outstanding businessman in the field. Livingston's brother, and his own two sons are directly involved in this business, too. So, there is definite evidence that shows, when one speaks of banks, you must automatically include the name of Livingston.

His first position was in a very small bank in the town of Harietta. It was a relatively small establishment. In the next town, there was another bank, run by a man named Alva Crimmins. In the next town from Crimmins was a very close acquaintance of Livingston, his brother. And this is where his career as a banker began.

When he left Harietta, he journeyed to Detroit. There he came across a larger operation in banking. Although the buildings were larger, the trade remained the same. There was not much difference in procedures, and Livingston felt right at home. It was through his personal friend, Crimmins, that he learned of an opening in Charlevoix.

Livingston said, "I couldn't get here fast enough". He came, applied in person, and was employed by Mr. Rachow.

But this was not the first trip to Charlevoix for him. When he was a youngster, he used to sail to Charlevoix with his father on their small yacht from Traverse City. He remembers sailing all night and floating into Charlevoix very late and tying up the boat to get some rest. These are expe-

Elementary picnicers enjoy pre-vacation get-together

By Claudia Bost

Did you notice the difference in Charlevoix this past Friday? If you didn't you must not have been outside. It was almost like being in a hugely magnified garden with flowers blooming all around. Only the flowers were replaced with Charlevoix's younger generation.

And if you were to have looked a little closer, you would have noticed our beach areas swarming with our little people. For Friday was designated as "Picnic Day" for the Charlevoix Elementary School.

We visited with the second graders as they were enjoying the sun and fun at Lake Michigan. It was a scene mixed with swinging, rolling in the fresh, green grass, and just plain running and jumping around. We spoke to a few of the children, including David McDaniels, Lori Kerner, Paul White, and Lisa Flower.

It's kind of surprising how these little ones can come up with some good answers to given questions.

We asked them if they were glad school was out, and received this as a reply, "Yeah, now I can play with my brother; now I can ride on my Terra-Tiger; now I can go to Beaver Island; now I can ride my pony all day long; and now I can go visit my grandma."

These children aren't too aware of our existing worldly problems, and it's a good thing, for now is the time for them to enjoy themselves and be "little kids".

When asked if they will like to return to school this fall, they answered, "Yes, No, Maybe." They didn't seem to share the same opinion. For the most part, they will be excited to enter the third grade with a brand new school.

They seemed to think third grade would be "easy because we have worked hard in the second grade".

Gee, don't you feel proud of these little citizens? They are ready to meet next year's challenges without any armor.

We next visited the fifth graders while they were busily progressing along with their outing. We can truthfully say the fifth graders are much more active in the art of combat than our second graders. While sitting on the beach in the sand talking to Linda Kaele, Carla Wells, and Heidi Hanson, we were under attack from their fellow-classmates. We may also add that these classmates were of the pants-wearing set and quite good with an aim. While trying to bombard their friends with water balloons and a constant spray of water from a soda bottle, we somehow became available as a possible target. Seeing that it was to no good to try and out-fox their manouvers, I enjoyed the spray of water and carried on.

The fifth graders have mixed emotions about returning to school next fall. Some want to get back so they can see their "boyfriends", or so they can see who their new teacher will be. The kids said they are really going to miss their teacher because she was so nice. They were referring to Mrs. Meyers.

The girls said, "she was really nice to us, sometimes we were crabby to her, but she just took it and was nice instead".

The scene around their picnic area resembled a teen camp. There was a record player providing "groovy music", and the kids were dancing and having fun. Many of the children went home wet. It seems the boys had a hard time trying to behave when all that water was there to throw on the girls.

All in all, the kids had a good time, and had the wet clothes, dirty faces, and possibly, a few nicks and scratches to prove it.

Kindergarteners last week closed out their school year with farm visits. Above, youngsters turn their attention to a baby lamb.

Council tells Casino owner to 'Clean up'

City Council announced Monday night that Hal Forbrig, owner of the Casino property on Meech Street, would meet certain requirements by July 10, or the city would perform the necessary work and charge him for the job.

Mayor William Fochtman and city attorney John Michael stated that Forbrig had met conditions of an order to "cease and desist" from manufacturing and warehousing activities at the residentially-zoned property.

Forbrig earlier appeared in district court and stood mute to charges of violating the city zoning ordinance by manufacturing and storing pre-built walls at the casino.

He reportedly signed an agreement with the city to clean up the entire property and secure the crumbling building no later than July 10.

Should the work not be completed by that date, Council will direct city work crews to do it, and Forbrig will be forced to pay the city.

The action came on the heels of a Courier investigation which revealed that the property housed the industrial plant and posed a distinct safety hazzard to youngsters who used the premises as a playground.

In other business, the city fathers discussed the traffic problem on Dixon Street.

Further consideration will be given to the proposition of making the street one way all year, or allowing parking on one side only.

The street becomes one way eastbound, effective June 18.

Richard Wood Sr., representing the Woodshed on Petoskey Avenue, appeared before Council in an effort to avert a potentially serious problem with motorcyclists this summer.

Council will consider solutions to the problem.

Keith Wilson, director of the Michigan Waterways Commission, notified Council that a state appropriation for expansion of the Ferry Avenue launching ramp is doubtful this year.

Council also paid bills totaling $40,012.80.

Voters of the Charlevoix School District await ballots during Monday's election. Voters were faced with five ballots. Public district saw two elected to Board, and both millage issues defeated again.

Millage request downed; third try not likely

The second effort failed, and now the School Board of the Charlevoix District must decide the fate of its schools.

Voters Monday turned down the 3.75 mill raise proposed for operational expenses and the one mill levy for materials centers. Both measures were also turned down April 7.

Monday's vote saw the operational request go down by a 725-523 vote, while the five-year single mill failed by 127 votes, 687-650.

Following the April setback, the Board and school administration made a concerted effort to change the public's mind about the 1969-70 budget, but the attempt fell short.

2 ELECTED

Two positions on the School Board were also up for grabs Monday. Elected to four-year terms were Richard Donaldson and Charles R. England.

Candidates and their votes were: Donaldson, 1,220; England, 478; Clement J. Wagner, 478; Robert G. Lieberman, 462; H. Dale Glass, 235.

WHAT NOW?

Batting zero-for-two in millage elections, the Board is faced with final decisions on the budget. Prior to the election, it was indicated that numerous teachers, programs and activities would have to be pared to the tune of over $100,000.

The first official fatality was the Community School program, including all adult education courses offered in the district.

This move was taken Monday as the Mott Foundation, which helps fund the program, had to be notified if the district was planning to continue the project.

Explanations for the majority of "no" votes centered around public reluctance to accept higher taxes for increased teacher salaries and increased costs in education, and at the same time have to face inflation, added federal and state taxes and the rise in the cost of living.

"It's the only tax to which the voter can say no," said one member of the Board.

INTERMEDIATE

The Charlevoix-in Emmet County Intermediate District had better luck at the polls.

Their request for one-half mill additional was granted by a vote of 700 to 549.

Elected to six-year terms on that Board were William A. Parsons, 830 votes, and Maurice M. Taylor, 560.

Also running was Frances J. Hill, who collected 478 votes.

Elected to fill an unexpired term of two years was Douglas Way, who ran unopposed and picked up 913 votes.

Vote again?

Will the School Board again ask the voters to return to the polls in August for a final attempt at passage of the budget?

"Not likely," says the Board.

The earliest another election could be held is August 5 or 11, but the Board feels the try is useless.

As it stands today, the school district will operate next year with reduced programs and activities.

Graduates hear Hill

By Claudia Bost

Those who attended the 1969 Graduation Ceremony, were presented with a most enjoyable evening. Most graduations could easily be compared with the joy of taking a final exam. Even my own graduation was a dred. My particular class consisted of 1,070 seniors. It was a long-drawn out affair.

We not only cannot remember who was the guest speaker, but we cannot begin to remember what was said or implied with their talks. Then after all 1,070 of us marched across the platform to receive our long-awaited diplomas, the ceremony came to a close.

But not so of last Thursday. The seniors marched in procession while the band played the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance".

The Rev. Albert Mansen gave the invocation and set the mood for the program to follow. The salutatorian for this year's class was Kenneth J. Heeres. He stated that the students, for the most part, "are more aware of our existing problems than most people". He spoke up for his class so they may be counted among the adults.

Valedictorian was Deborah Jean Potter. Her message to her fellow-classmates was mixed with a farewell and encouragement for success. She said they finally consisted of the adult class with all the added responsibilities. "Time to go out on our own and make a new way of life," she said.

Raymond O. Carr, principal of the high school, introduced to the audience and particularly to the students, Earl J. Hill, administrative assistant, public relations, Consumers Power Company.

Hill greeted the audience with humor and sincerely kept everyone's attention throughout his whole speech. He told the graduates that their opportunities are now greater than ever.

"You have just completed four years of ceaseless activity and have made numerous decisions, for better or for worse. Now you will journey onto a busy, useful, successful life," Hill stated.

The graduates all turned their tassels together, and sang the Alma Mater. This is always a point where the class members must be aware that it is finally over. Everyone stood for the National Anthem and then Rev. Duane Imig offered the benediction.

Davis wants budget slash

The 1969-70 State General Fund Budget has reached the half-way point in its bumpy journey through the Legislature. As they now stand, the budget bills propose spending about $8 million more than recommended by Governor Milliken.

Republican legislators, although outnumbered the House by majority Democrats, were successful in some cases in holding down budget-shattering increases, and hope to cut more fat from the spending bills before final passage.

Because of bloated recommendations by the Democrat-dominated House Appropriations Committee, the Legislature was faced with a deficit financing possibility when the bills emerged from committee. Despite Republican economy moves, the measures are still perilously close to plunging the state into red ink in their present form. The Governor asked a budget of approximately $1.510 billion. In their present form, the bills contain $1.518 billion.

Governor Milliken's budget projected a surplus of only $12 to $13 million. Unless we can further reduce the proposed level of spending, unforeseen problems could easily create an unconstitutional deficit and in so doing force higher taxes.

House Democrats last week also pushed through a trio of insurance bills which will almost certainly push group health insurance rates higher.

Ironton

Mrs. Ross Alexander
547-9878

The Ladies Fellowship Bake Sale Saturday was again successful with homemade bread, cookies, pies and packages of fresh asparagus. We thank each and everyone.

Well, it's off again and on again for our local Ironton Post office. I don't think they realize how much we want to keep our own postmark and convenience. We don't want to be divided like our district and school system was. We are getting along alright out here, and we know it wouldn't be any economy for our country, so why pick on Ironton?

Our community extends its sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Milewski of near Detroit, who have purchased the home of Mr. and Mrs. Goode on Sweetbrier Lane near the lake, on the fatal accident of their son Dennis this past week near Kalkaska. More than 30 relatives and out of town friends enjoyed dinner the day of the funeral on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jentzen with help from neighbors. Burial was in Brookside.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Roberts and family of Detroit are guests for several days at the home of their mother, Mrs. Ruth Roberts. On Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Alexander and daughter Diane were their dinner guests, and was a beautiful day and a beautiful spot for a picnic.

The Ladies Fellowship have changed their meeting time to the first and third Monday of each month. They will meet on Monday evening at 7:30, June 16, with Hilda Alexander. Everyone is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. David Murray of Grosse Pointe Farms spent this weekend at Sunnyslope, the Robert Wilson summer home, and enjoyed some horseback riding over the countryside.

I visited with Mrs. George Zipp of Petoskey this Sunday afternoon, who had heard from Mrs. Alice Switzer Overstreet, a former Charlevoix resident, and now living in Selma, California, near Fresno, and a graduate from Charlevoix in 1919 and is interested to know if that class is planning a reunion this summer as she is planning on being in Charlevoix and would come at that time. If the 1919 graduates will call me, I will get the information to her as I knew her while attending the County Normal.

Friends and neighbors extend their sincere sympathy to Walter and Zola Kemp on the sudden death of their only daughter, Mrs. Marvin Rubingh who passed away. Carrie attended our church Sunday School and will be remembered by many friends. She leaves six children and one grandchild. Funeral services and burial were in Mount Pleasant.

I don't think I ever saw the Lilacs more beautiful than they have been this spring; must be they need all this rain we have been having. In fact, everything else seems to be appreciating it. But wasn't it beautiful Saturday with so many sail and motor boats out on the lake; also fishermen. Makes one wonder why some want to go to the moon.

In Michigan in 1967 there were 1,049 deaths caused by emphysema, a chronic respiratory disease that is steadily increasing.

The new Gas self-cleaning oven will clean itself automatically, spotlessly and do the whole job for about 2¢. It's a new way of life for the housewife. No more rubber gloves, strong detergents or harsh cleaning agents.

And while we're on the subject, this new Gas range simply cooks food better than anything you've ever used. It provides complete heat control. At all times. No matter what you're cooking. It will cook faster. Cleaner. And do it all for less money. See the new Gas self-cleaning oven today at dealer or Michigan Consolidated Gas Company showrooms. Chamber Chat

CHAMBER MANAGER

We certainly appreciate recently receiving from the Charlevoix Ministerial Association several copies entitled "Churches of Charlevoix, The Heart of Our Community Welcomes You", which lists all of our churches and pastors, Sunday Schools, morning and evening-worship hours, etc., enclosed in a clear, plastic envelope. This most certainly surpasses the accomplished list we have, and I will use this current one to make our take-off for our certain type mailings.

I recently received from Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Michigan Tourist Council, director's office, reports showing "Use Tax Collections", for 1968 by month and by the county, and also reports showing total "Sales Tax Collections" for calendar year 1968. It is interesting to note 4% use tax on room rentals in motels, resorts, and other transient accommodations brought a total of $4,550,549 to the state of Michigan in 1968, an increase of approximately 4.5% over the previous year. These details are here at their office for your observation.

It is possible that you know the state's four regional tourist associations, one of which jurisdiction we are in, which is West Michigan Tourist Association, proposed legislation which was introduced this year to divert 50% of the annual use tax collections to tourist promotion activities. The house bill is number 3025, and the senate bill is number 614, both designed to accomplish this, are pending in the current session of the legislature.

Yes, some folks are careless and unconcerned about other people's property. Accordingly, one of a number of things I have noticed are the grocery carts over in Oleson's Shopping Center, which serve many customers, and the carts are often left in the parking space instead of being returned to the store. This subjects the expensive little gadgets to damage and thievery. On Monday morning, June 2, for example, I took one of these carts back to the entrance before the store was open, and soon there followed another gentleman, another cart picked up at the corner of Antrim and Bridge Street. How unnecessary, but that is the way it is.

The Regular monthly Board of Directors meeting was held June 3, here at the Chamber of Commerce office, as usual, the first Tuesday of the month. The meeting was called at 7:40 p.m. and those answering roll call were Lyle Miles, Gordon Neff, Bruce Bartlett, Dave Juilleret, John Schroeder, Larry LaGrow, and Tom Hanna.

Copies of the minutes of the previous regular meeting, May 6, were passed to those who were present and after reading, there was no discussion, changes, or corrections, and there was a motion by John Schroeder to accept the minutes as read, which was seconded by Larry LaGrow, all voted yes.

Secretary Loder had but a brief report. There was some discussion about fireworks at the Venetian Festival, and Loder brought this up because of the short time left to get a display made available and the supplier arranged in ample time to display the fireworks. Folks, this phase of the Venetian Festival is hanging on a string, so to speak, and I am sure it is not necessary to indicate why. There was considerable discussion and comparing of ideas about the festival and also the availability of contestants for the two queen's contests. Dave Juilleret, chairman of the queen's committee indicated that again, he and his assistant Mrs. Billie Smith would strenuously attempt to get this phase of the program established. Strange, other communities seem to have these queen's contests with little difficulty and a huge success.

Ways and Means were discussed and finally concluded having to do with $1,000 for the Chamber's share of assistance to have the Michigan Amateur Golfer's Association Tournament here this year. Secretary has already completed his portion in this fund raising. The other, being the committee, will be personal contacts. Off the record, I should like to again point out that the tournament this year should bring more dollars in because the registration had to be stopped at 340 golfers, which is 100 more than last year. In turn, of course, it will increase the number of people here for approximately one week and likely will leave more than the usual approximately $100,000.

The real old sign having to do with the Waterfront Art Fair, which generally hung over the band shell area downtown in the east park was discussed because the old derilect has just about had it and in addition to the years of weather boating, it seemed as though some person or persons has gotten a kick out of removing some of the letters, such as has appeared on other signs in the area. However, it does need to be replaced, and again, it is a question of money.

Now, back to the minutes. Having to do with the Venetian Festival, there was discussed extending the program to probably start with more attractions or events, for example, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, prior to July 26 and 27, nothing concluded, however, it was decided, because of the need, to increase the donation for booth space along the sidewalk between the corner of Clinton Street on Bridge Street to Neff Brothers' Store.

There was discussion of different items, and ways and means, but nothing complete to report on. In as much as there was no actual further business or new business, John Schroeder motioned to adjourn the meeting, which was seconded by Gordon Neff, all voted yes. The meeting was adjourned at approximately 9 p.m.

There has been some activity around the dockage of the Great Lakes Charter Service. Among the captains here this week were Captain Red Oosterbaan, Captain Jerry Ison, Captain Bill Holt, Captain Mel Wantz, Captain Bob Ryan. They have had a number of trial runs out in the big lake off and on for several weeks and in an effort to better acquaint themselves with the techniques to catch lake trout, their locations, etc. There is no question but what the trout are around and plentiful. They may have had some payloads before so to speak, but the first one I observed was Friday, June 6, Mel Wantz had a party of four out for one half day aboard his Dawn Marie, a beautiful cruiser and well-equipped. They returned after an enjoyable trip, and did have some good looking lake trout.

I should like to point out in a recent bulletin from the West Michigan Tourist Association, which is regularly sent out to its membership and the different membership can reply to these if they wish, listing all the inquiries they received, the names, addresses, and they are put in a separate category, dates, number of persons in the party, etc. The last one had ten pages of legal sized paper, and under American Plan inquiries, there were 52 contacts; under the heading of hotel and motels there were 88; under housekeeping cottages were 194; and under camping was a total of 80. Some of these fitting our area, of course, were answered with both barrels. I have been watching the trend in this bulletin and noticed that American Plan inquiries as well as housekeeping cottages have increased. It is too bad we are losing ground in the category of housekeeping cottages, as in the last several months I have been getting notice to not include in any reference cottage after cottage, whether they be privately owned or those that were a portion of a resort around the lake, etc., because they have been sold for private use.

Miss Potter wins grant

Miss Deborah Jean Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Potter, Route 1, Charlevoix, has been named winner of an Alvin M. Bentley Foundation Scholarship Award for Excellence to Northwestern Michigan College for the academic year 1969-70. Her Bentley Foundation Scholarship amounts to $250.

In commenting upon these awards, Norman L. DesJardins, Secretary of the foundation stated: "It is with deepest regret that we announce the death of Mr. Alvin M. Bentley, who with Mrs. Bentley created the foundation in 1961. The foresight of the Bentleys has made it possible to reward these most deserving scholars and to continue rendering assistance to educational and other worthwhile projects for years to come."

Scholarships were given this year to students who had graduated or were graduating from Michigan high schools who applied for the scholarships at the 62 Michigan institutions receiving the grants. Selection of the winners was made by the scholarship committees of the colleges and universities.

The Bentley Foundation is currently contributing $37,500 for scholarships for the academic year 1968-69. Its commitments for the school year will bring total contributions to nearly $517,000 for the eight years the foundation has been in operation.

Trustees of the foundation determine each year which Michigan institutions will benefit from the foundation's program "to administer funds for science, education and charitable projects." The institution itself determines who will receive the individual scholarships, which may amount up to a maximum of $500. In addition to the scholarship program, foundation trustees have also made grants in furtherance of the other objectives of the foundation.

Ronnie Daugherty will be five years old tomorrow, June 12. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Daugherty of Gaylord. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. James McClanathan, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daugherty of Charlevoix.

Cummings donates new art building

Stanford University recently formally dedicated their new $2.3 million Nathan Cummings Art Building. The major donor of this lavish structure is a man known among our community, Nathan Cummings, the multi-millionaire who vacations here in Charlevoix.

Although a busy man, Cummings takes time out to appreciate art and their exhibits. He firmly believes that art is a good business. The dedication of the building was witnessed by business tycoons, professors, students and miscellaneous art lovers. A very eloquent buffet was prepared and enjoyed by all present.

Cummings and his wife enjoy a quick pace of life. During half the year, they are busy traveling around the country. The other half, they spend hopping from their residences in New York, Chicago, and Charlevoix.

Besides being largely involved in art, Cummings is the founder of Consolidated Foods Corp., which owns Union Sugar Company, Sara Lee Kitchens, Chicken Delight, Inc., Abbey Rents, Electrolux Corp. and Fuller Brush. Charlevoix is proud to claim Cummings as her resident, even though it is only on a part-time basis. He adds versatility and indeed charm to our community.

MSF deadline is August 1

If you are going to be an exhibitor at the Michigan State Fair this year, then you must return your entry form on or before August 1.

Under a new policy announced by E.J. (Jeff) Keirns, State Fair general manager, August 1 will be the deadline for all departments without exception.

He said the decision was made to allow State Fair personnel sufficient time to prepare for the 20,000 or more entries expected for this year's fair, Friday, August 22, through Monday, September 1 (Labor Day). He said a better fair will result for both the exhibitors and fair patrons.

In the past, separate entry dates have been set for various reasons in some departments which has caused confusion, Keirns said. Also, there has been laxity in adhering to deadline dates.

But this year there will be strict adherence to the August 1 deadline as published in the premium book which will be distributed in three sections: Agriculture and Livestock, Horse Shows, and Community Arts.

The premium book this year will announce an all-time record of $151,000 in premiums for the 1969 State Fair exhibitors. Premium books, which will be distributed in June, are automatically sent to former exhibitors. Requests from new exhibitors should be addressed to the Michigan State Fair, Detroit, Michigan 48203. Exhibitors should indicate which section of the entry book is desired.

Youngsters above norm

Charlevoix grade schoolers are reading at an above-average norm, according to test results released today by Glenn Snider, elementary school principal.

Second graders were tested with the Gates-MacGinitie reading survey and showed a comprehension score of 2.6 and a vocabulary score of 2.5.

The national norm for the survey is 2.5.

Fourth grade readers showed even better results. With 4.5 the norm, Charlevoix youngsters scored 4.9 in vocabulary and 4.6 in comprehension.

Charlevoix Hospital awards scholarship

Ellen M. Buzzard has been awarded the Charlevoix Hospital Nursing Scholarship.

Presented last week, the award carries a $700 stipend, according to Rollie Dudik, hospital administrator.

Miss Buzzard will graduate from Charlevoix High School tomorrow, and will study nursing at Delta College, Bay City. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Buzzard, North Point.

Library Notes

With patrons still in a vacation mood, the Library suggests a variety of new books for lazy summer reading. The following recommended list of bright new volumes will mean pleasant hours of relaxation whether they are read on the boat, on the beach or on the front porch.

"The First Book of Bugs" by Margaret Williamson seems a likely book to head the list of books for summer reading. The illustrations, done by the author, are charming and authentic. The print is agreeable even for the very young reader. There is information about spiders, ants, crickets, wasps and bees--and even cockroaches!

"Everyday Weather and How it Works" by Herman Schneider is a new and revised edition of a popular weather book which contains the latest data on the use of airplane reconnaissance, weather satellites and other new weather-detection devices. Included in the small volume are detailed instructions on how to read weather maps and how to make a home weather-forecasting station out of simple everyday items.

"Let's Do Fingerplays" by Marian Grayson offers wonderful new ideas for rainy summer days. All kinds of childhood activities and interests are included. There are traditional "fingerplay" songs and poems, and each fingerplay is accompanied by simple, line-by-line instructions for the use of hands to dramatize the rhymes.

"An Inheritance of Poetry" collected and arranged by Gladys L. Adshead Annis Duff is a rich treasure of verse from both sides of the Atlantic. There is something here for any mood and every taste: serious, gay, spiritual poems; ballads, sonnets and ancient runes. The complete index in the back makes it easy to find old favorites.

"Worlds in the Sky" by Carroll Fenton and Mildred Fenton is appropriate and timely reading before the next Apollo mission. The book is especially for youngsters with simple, factual information about the planets. It is vividly illustrated with deep blue line drawings. Pictures of moon craters are particularly effective, and we discovered that some meteorites look like Petoskey stones!

"High Timber" the story of American forestry by Charles Coombs will be of interest to travelers. It is an important book for those interested in conservation and the perpetuation of wild life. The book is profusely illustrated with very old historical photographs, and some very magnificent modern pictures of forest fires and vast reaches of timber.

Fie on schedules

Some people thrive on schedules, but I'm not one of them. To me a schedule is like a prison and I'm always trying to escape, usually with success.

That's why with school finally out, I'm happy as a lark. Those five mornings a week when the alarm went off at seven and the school bus didn't come until eight-fifteen were sheer torture. While fixing substantial nutritious breakfasts for eight, I was bombarded by questions until I felt like the chief contestant in a quiz show.

"Where's my book bag?"

"Have you seen my other shoe?"

"Did you check my arithmetic? Yesterday you got five wrong."

"Did you sign my slip for the farm trip?"

"Can I take flute lessons this summer?"

"Do I have to take the Weekly Reader?"

"Can I have a dime to go to the Dairy Queen?"

"Mom, he's only supposed to go on Tuesday."

"Yes, but yesterday it rained and I spent my money on gun."

"Mom, if he gets an extra dime I get a dime too."

Where is justice? I mumble this question as I begin to make the sandwiches for lunches. Curses on the hot lunch program which ceased operation the last week of school. Have you ever tried to pack five lunches, some peanut butter and raisin sandwiches, some peanut butter and jelly, some cold meat without mustard, some cold meat with mustard? I don't like to cry, but sometimes I do get jittery.

So now that school is out I'm really going to enjoy myself with the only scheduled activity in my life, swimming lessons.

To tell the truth I learned my lesson about schedules, plans and programs five years ago when I first moved to Charlevoix. It was at just this time of year and Charlevoix was beautiful. As June changed to July the area became even lovelier and those hot beach days rolled around.

But where was I? Like a darned fool I was trying to get my new house settled and have everything put away nice and neat. During those hot July days I worked like a slave planning to take the whole month of August off to loaf on the beach.

But things didn't work out that way. In retrospect I can see that we should have lived out of boxes for by the time that August rolled around my house was nice and neat, but Charlevoix had its annual cold snap which cooled off the lakes too much for old mommies to swim.

So now that I'm an old timer of five years I've learned to forget schedules for the summer and when the day is warm and the breezes blow I shun responsibility like the plague and head for the lakes.

Chief Noc-A-Homa

Atlanta Braves Chief is ex-Charlevoix man

Chief Noc-A-Homa, mascot of the Atlanta Braves in the National League, is actually Levi Walker, Jr., of Charlevoix.

For the Braves, he is the first true Indian to play the part. And, the Braves are happy about that. From a story by the Braves' Tom Bennet, we were able to get some background on Walker:

At last. . .a Chief Noc-A-Homa who is a real, live Indian!

Levi Walker, jr. (how did an Indian get to be named Levi? We'll get to that later) is the latest to wear the tribal warfare of Chief Noc-A-Homa, official mascot of the Braves. Like his predecessors, he leads the Braves onto the field of battle at Atlanta Stadium, and his war whoop and dance signals another Braves home run.

A 27-year-old Atlanta insurance agent, Walker applied for the job over the winter and was hired on the spot. Levi's predecessors were Larry Hunn, a Georgia State College student who learned Indian dances in his Explorers troop, and Tim Minors, a 17-year-old high schooler who was the son of a Georgia Power Company executive and thus referred to his "total-electric tepee" in left field.

Now, how did the latest Chief Noc-A-Homa acquire the name of Levi? Well, his grandfather was pastor of an Indian church in Green Sky Hill, Michigan. Granddad naturally selected for his son a biblical name, which was then passed on to the grandson.

Levi came to Atlanta after he was discharged from the U.S. Army at Fort Benning, Ga. in June, 1964.

Here in his words is the description of his Indian background:

"My Nation is Algonquin. The tribes are Ottawa and Chippewa, now one of the descendants of the Grande River Band. Ottawa, Canada was named after this tribe of Indians. The Chippewa Tribe is represented in the book by Henry W. Longfellow, 'The Song of Hiawatha'. . . .

"Pontiac was an Ottawa Indian. I was told that we were related to him by distant blood.

"I had the joyous pleasure of being born an Indian so I try to preserve the tradition of my race, nation, tribe, and band. I've made a few things of my tribe such as war bonnets, double tail war bonnets, and other head gear. I've made garments and moccasins of my people. I had a peace pipe once that I carved from soap stone, but I left it with my old things. The bowl was black and the stem was made of sumac, carved with a twist.

"Since the Indian language is seldom used in these modern days, my understanding is only by ear.

"The traditional dances I have performed include the Hoop, Snake, Hunter, Eagle, Happy, Death of an Eagle, Rabbit, War, Tomahawk, Horse, and Naming of a child."

Recently, though, Walker probably wished he had stuck to selling insurance.

Walker sets off smoke bombs and goes into a war dance to celebrate every Brave home run. Two weeks ago, Clete Boyer tagged a two-run shot and Walker went into his act.

Then, something unscheduled happened. Flames enveloped his canvas tepee, shooting up about two feet over the top of the flimsy structure.

"It was sabotage," claimed Levi. "Somebody got into my smoke bombs and fooled with them."

Not to be overcome by the emergency, the resourceful Walker grabbed a trusty broomstick he keeps "in the tepee for housekeeping" and beat out the flames. But, not until fire destroyed his home.

"Maybe," said the Chief, "It was just a hot game."

Tiger Tales

One of the steadiest players in the American League is Don Wert, the Tiger third baseman who is ranked high among the circuit's third-sackers.

In 1965 Wert was voted Tiger of the Year in balloting by the Detroit Chapter, Baseball Writers of America. He had played in 162 games, finished with a .261 average with 12 home runs, and led all third basemen with a .976 fielding average.

In 1966 he kept right on going, hit the first grand slam of his career, and ran his streak to 261 consecutive games played. A respiratory infection sidelined him for 11 games but he quickly rebounded, hit 11 home runs, drove in 70 runs, and finished with a .268 average. His play afield again was high class, with a .972 fielding average.

In 1967 Wert was sidelined for 22 games and his power production fell off to six home runs and 40 RBI. His glove magic, however remained, as it did in 1968 when he appeared in the All-Star game, an honor long overdue the quiet Pennsylvanian.

Wert was beaned in June of that campaign and never did recover his effectiveness at the plate. He finished at .200, the lowest mark of his career, but tied his career high for home runs with 12.

Success is commonplace in Wert's career. In his fourth season of pro ball, at the age of 3, he won a Triple A batting championship. It was his first year in the league, and he had never played higher than Class B before going to Denver in the American Association where he hit .328.

Prior to that batting title, there was nothing in Wert's record that hinted such prowess at the plate. He hit .284 for Valdosta in his first year out, then .220 and .276 in 1959 and 1960 with Durham, a Tiger farm in the Carolina League.

Given a chance with the Tigers in spring training after his big year at Denver, he was struck in the face by a batted ball and went back to Denver. This time he dropped to .267, but in 1963 spring training showed enough class to warrant another shot and he came north with the club to back up Bubba Phillips at the hot corner. The season was scarcely six weeks old when Wert had the job. He's been there ever since.

Born on July 29, 1938, at Strasburg in the rich Pennsylvania farm belt, Wert was a freshman at Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa., when Scout Ralph DeFranco disregarding his size, signed the 5-10, 160-pound infielder. He is only slightly heavier now, but as a playmaker he stands nine feet tall.

Take It From A Pro Who Should Know— And Does

DANIEL W. HODOWANES of Warren was selected Driver of the Year last February by the Michigan Trucking Association. He has driven 21 years for Chrysler Corporation between plants in heavy city traffic for over a million miles without a blemish on his record.

Michigan's Truck Driver of the Year Says:

CONCENTRATION

is the Key to Safe Driving

This little quiz Danny sometimes gives friends gives them a pretty good clue as to what kind of driver they are. Want to try it?

The last time you took the car out for a spin, did you:
— leave parking lights burning upon your return?
— leave a turning signal blinking unnecessarily?
— drive off without sufficiently wiping or scraping windows in inclement weather?

If you just happened to answer "yes" to all three — watch your step. They're common enough, everyday lapses, to be sure. But, says Hodowanes — these are signs of a driver "not concentrating and a driver not concentrating is not doing his best to drive safely."

"If you want to be a good driver and a safe one, you've got to CONCENTRATE on being one," according to Michigan's No. 1 truck driver. He wheels a big semi through Detroit's busy traffic about 100 miles a day between plants. There are a lot of stops and starts and plenty of tight cornering. He has to CONCENTRATE!

Got time to read and think about one more little tip from Michigan Truck Driver of the Year? It's a good one and all of us should heed it every day, Danny says. Here it is:

"Always stay clear-headed and never get behind the wheel in a depressed state. A wife can be very helpful to her husband by seeing that he doesn't leave home each morning with a lot of problems on his mind."

So, when you're driving, just concentrate on driving and nothing else, says this No. 1 professional driver. That's really all you've got time to do . . . safely. Right?

Changes at post office

The retirement of one rural carrier, Harold Withers, after 41 years, has resulted in six re-assignments and the addition of two men to the staff at the Charlevoix post-office, Postmaster Dan W. Genelt has announced.

When Withers retired last October, he had served Route 3 which covers the area north of Charlevoix to Bay Shore, since 1927.

No permanent assignment to the route was made until recently when John Sladek, a veteran of 14 years in the department and carrier on Route 2 southeast of the city since 1961 was transferred to Route 3.

To take his place, Gordon Dennis, a dispatcher during his 27 years with the department, decided to go outside and take over Route 2 which includes Ironton.

His place was filled by William Seese, an 18 year veteran who has had the North side route in the city since the retirement of Walker Miles.

Bruce Henley, substitute clerk for 13 years, has been advanced to regular clerk due to the increase in business at the post office.

Paul Stephan, substitute clerk for six years, has been advanced to regular city carrier and will fill Seese's vacancy on the north side.

Gary Brodine, temporary carrier, has been named substitute clerk on the office.

The two new men were selected from the Civil Service registry after having completed the examination for clerk - carrier. They are Maurice Cudd who has been appointed substitute carrier and Anthony Engler who will become temporary substitute and auxiliary carrier. Cudd comes to the department from Penn Dixie's Petoskey plant. Engler is employed at a local plant and will serve part-time at the post office for the present.

Thanks, Glenn

Glenn Kenney is concluding a two-year reign as President of the Charlevoix School Board.

Kenney, unknowingly, picked a financially disastrous time to be selected to the top post.

During his administration, not a single millage school budget has been readily accepted by the public. To a lesser man, the situation might have developed into a complex.

Kenney fought on...collecting the magnificent sum of $150 a year for his efforts...trying to direct one of the areas biggest businesses, that of education.

The growth of our schools has taken place primarily in the past ten years. During the first part of that period, it was possible to ignore the increases by merely pretending they did not exist.

When classrooms filled to the bursting point, teachers discovered unionism, and the educational process rapidly blossomed, there came Glenn Kenney into the explosive picture.

The need for constant budget increases, more teachers, another school building; and an expanded curriculum have not made his job a pleasant one.

We feel Glenn Kenney has performed well in the face of extremely trying circumstances.

Kenney has helped provide our community with a new elementary school, which experts say is one of the most practical, economical buildings in the state.

He was instrumental in forging the present two-year teacher contract, which, though admittedly not perfect, averted a shutdown of our schools.

The outgoing President has closed the gap between the Board of Education, school administration, teachers and the public.

The job is by no means finished. The man who succeeds Kenney will face an even greater challenge.

One of his first jobs will be new negotiations with the Charlevoix Education Association, and this may make the last contract look like child's play.

Costs will continue to increase, and the educational process will continue to change.

Kenney has helped our schools during a turbulent time. We thank him for a job well done.

No more elections!

By some 200 votes, the people of the Charlevoix School District have issued a mandate to the School Board and administration.

Whether or not that decision is in the best interest of education bears little importance at this juncture.

Twice the electorate has shouted a resounding "No" to the improvement and expansion of the learning process in Charlevoix.

We think a third attempt by the Board would be useless.

Let us now plan to "forge ahead" with the three R's.

We will have no athletics, band, adult education, or school activities, but they obviously are not important to over 720 voters in the district.

Our children will be mass-fed instruction in greatly overcrowded classrooms, but the electorate has shouted "who cares?"

A third election would serve no purpose. We have made our decision, and, quite frankly, we deserve nothing better.

Protecting rights

All too often in recent years, we have heard again and again that certain "rights" of citizens of this country were being violated.

In many cases, those "rights" may have been violated. But that doesn't give those who feel they are on the receiving end of a bad deal the right to violate other people's rights.

We bring this up in view of the current troubles at the University of North Carolina.

For two weeks now, there have been demonstrations as a result of a strike of cafeteria workers.

The other day Chapel Hill policemen, State Highway Patrol troopers and other law enforcement officers were sent to the campus.

Even National Guard units, including the one from Siler City, were moved to Durham to be ready if trouble broke out.

The reason for the troops on the campus was that a scuffle had broken out when demonstrators attempted to keep non-participating students from eating in the cafeteria.

Regardless of how our sympathies were running in connection with the strike, we feel that the demonstrators made a serious mistake.

They violated the rights of those students who wanted only to eat in the cafeteria.

Therefore, we feel that the calling in of law enforcement officers was completely justified in order to preserve "rights."

To add more fuel to the fire, a group calling itself "Concerned Graduate Students" suggested Saturday that faculty and graduate student instructors "reschedule" their classes until demands of striking cafeteria workers are met and police leave the Chapel Hill campus.

Now, the university officials have warned that if graduate student instructors fail to meet their classes as threatened, they will face possible dismissal.

We could not be more in agreement with this latest policy statement of the university officials.

There is definitely a difference between a peaceful demonstration and a confrontation where non-participants have to suffer.

It is time that a get tough policy was initiated to protect the "rights" of all. (Chatham News, Siler City, N.C.)

Reunion visitors

by John Reddy

I met a fellow not too long ago who was looking forward to going to an upcoming high school class reunion. He was particularly exhilarated because he fancied himself in pretty good condition; that is, he was pleased with the fact he was slim, trim and sported a wavy crop of his own hair.

Considering that it was the 20th reunion of his high school class, it is understandable that he looks forward to rubbing in the fact that "it's all part of life."

NOW IT STRIKES me that there are two kinds of people who look forward to going to reunions; one is, of course, the guy who plans on basking in the light of his physical maintenance program; the other is the woman who the startled, aging classmates call the "late bloomer."

Usually it will be the women who will be the driving forces in planning reunions. Perhaps they have the time that men don't. But men, it seems, really aren't so concerned about reunions unless they are college reunions and there is some way of displaying their economic or social prowess.

I guess that's why college reunions attract more men than high school programs.

POSSIBLY THE women look more attractive to reunion-goers than do men because of the great advances in cosmetics and the emphasis on fashion and style that women nuture.

But if women are "late bloomers," then men have to be classified "early wilters."

And you can always tell a guy who's planning to go to his high school or college reunion. He shows up for all his tennis matches, jogs around the block or nags his wife about her hipline.

It seems, however, that it usually is the woman - the reunion committee - organizer - who will do the prodding. And a man who agrees to attend his wife's reunion can be headed for a most trying time.

I, a taxpayer

The following is reprinted from the Otsego County Herald Times. It is a taxpayer's letter to Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee in Washington:

Dear Sir:

Why do you allow me $600 income deduction to raise my child for one year? When you allow $1,200 per year for a Cuban refugee, and if the Cuban boy or girl is going to school, an extra $1,000 per year? You allow $2,300 to keep a man in the federal pen, and he doesn't use the family car; $168 per month for social security for retired persons, but say I need only $50 for a child's monthly costs.

The Vista Training Program costs $3.1 million to train only 202 young people. This costs more than $15,000 per year per trainee.

The Job Corps, so far, has spent approximately $18,000 per year to teach each high school dropout.

To feed, clothe, and train a boy in the armed forces costs $1,076, but you expect me to do the same for my youngster on $600.

But this one takes the cake. . .you allow me only $600 to take care of my child, but will give, through ADC, $800 care for a fatherless child. This seems to say you think he is more important than my child.

I am yelling Uncle, because I think it is time someone pointed out these inconsistencies.

Ruppe blasts social security

Congressman Philip E. Ruppe today called the $55 per month minimum primary Social Security payment "outrageously low" and introduced legislation to raise the minimum to $100.

Congressman Ruppe stated, "Anyone who believes you can subsist on less then $100 per month in this time of rising costs simply has his head in the sand." The Northern Michigan Representative noted that the Ways and Means Committee intends to consider Social Security legislation after completing action on a tax reform program this session. He indicated that the goal of new Social Security legislation should be to protect senior citizens "against the crippling impact of inflation."

Ruppe recalled that he previously had introduced a bill to create automatic cost - of - living increases for recipients of Social Security. "If we were to raise the minimum payment to $100 and grant automatic cost-of-living increases, we would bring the entire program into the modern age," the Congressman said.

If it Fitz

Too rich, too smart

There is only one thing more disgusting than a brother-in-law who sires smarter kids than you do. That is a brother-in-law who makes truckloads more money than you do.

I have both kinds and, unfortunately, they live nearby and it is necessary to exchange regular visits (It is typical of my luck that my only brother-in-law who is fatter than I am lives so far away I can stand next to him only once a year).

Anyway, it was Mother's Day and the only way I could see my mother was to drive to brother-in-law Jack's new home in Bloomfield Hills. That's Detroit's lushest suburb, the one where George Romney used to go on Sunday to ask God what he should do on Monday.

It was little sister Mary Lou who married Uncle Jack. She's the one whose hair turned grey when she was 10 and she doesn't care. When she was 25 she married Jack and her life turned golf. Her relatives turned green.

I can't describe their mansion fully. I got lost in the foyer and fell behind the guided tour. But there's a redwood sundeck in back, beside a swimming pool big enough for a Holiday Inn. There's a living room untouched by human hand because there are so many other rooms to really live in. Between the master bedroom and bath there is even a dressing room, which certainly beats hiding in the closet.

At one point I thought I'd discovered the family room but it turned out to be the dog's room. It was in the real family room, knee-deep in carpet, that Jack asked if I'd have a drink. I said yes and expected him to head for the kitchen. Instead, he snapped his fingers and a complete bar twisted out of the wall. That's class. That's also where I fell out of the tour for good. I was sick of hearing my daughter say she never wanted to go home.

It was then that Uncle Bill arrived. He is married to Terrible Jean, the big sister who used to beat me up for lunch every day. They have 5 kids. The oldest, Steve, is typical. He's a scholarship student at tough U of D High where he gets all A's. Steve makes millions caddying and saves every lousy cent for his education.

Another son, Dan, is so nice he volunteered to miss the big party and stay home with a sick sister. This probably means he'll have a medical degree before he is 15.

And then there's Sheila, a preteen who takes after her mother only she's better looking. Super Sheila can leap wide swimming pools in a single bound without getting wet. Hardly.

I keep wondering why their smartie kids don't fight like my kids fight. Especially the little twins, Mary and Maureen. "Those two must have some great battles, don't they?" I asked Terrible Joan.

"No," she said, "in fact, with Mary sick today, Maureen wouldn't leave her behind without first writing her a get-well note."

Boy. My only hope is my youngest sister, Linda, who is still single. If she doesn't hurry and marry a poverty-stricken bum, and have some rotten kids, I'm never going to another family party.

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

Dick Brown of the Ingham County News last week wrote of the annual convention of the United Presbyterian Church in San Antonio.

It turns out one of his pet peeves is also one of ours. Brown wrote:

Daily newspapers last week carried news stories datelined San Antonio and concerned with deliberations of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. The headlines and many of the stories would give the impression that delegates in the true democratic manner were speaking for all Presbyterians on many varied problems.

And thus brings to mind one of my pet peeves - delegates/in and/or any organization speaking for all members of that organization and issuing news releases making it sound as if a few million members of that organization were unanimous in the conclusions reached.

It just ain't so.

The few hundred delegates of the millions of Presbyterians in the United States did not speak for the individual members.

When the delegates proposed that the United States should kiss and make up with Castro's Cuba they presented their own notions - not mine. When the delegates went on record as opposing an ABM system they did not speak for me because I haven't made up my mind yet.

When the delegates voted to support conscientious objection to a particular war or urged the dismantling of United States military bases in Latin America they were speaking their own minds - not mine.

No matter how organized modern churches become, Christianity is still a matter between God and the individual.

Christian conscience is an individual thing. An individual's Christian conscience can't be spoken for by committee or by consensus.

One of the problems of society today is that it is highly organized and that it takes committees, opinion polls, questionaires and self-annointed spokesmen to reach decisions which should best be left to the individual.

Whether I eat California grapes or Michigan grapes in my Waldorf salad is a matter decided by me and possibly my chief cook. It is not a matter for the Grand River Presbytery or the Mason Presbyterian church to decide for me.

If churches concentrated more on teaching the individual the right way toward Christ and less time in issuing consensus communiques then possibly there would be fewer problems facing the world.

The month of June must rate as the favorite among school pupils.

After what seems like years, the school term has ended and freedom is theirs for three months.

As we remember it, the first few weeks without homework, tests, and the regimentation of education were the best.

After the first month, time began to slow, and we couldn't wait for September. . . . .and the excitement of another school year.

Livingston

riences that he will never forget.

When he first came to the bank, there were only three or four employees. The building itself was still a "baby" of one year old. So he came into the scene when it was still very young and quite impressionable. Livingston raised the bank from a baby and created her into a prosperous business for Charlevoix.

Banking became part of Livingston's life. When he switched banks in earlier years, he noticed something very interesting. At the small-town bank in Harietta, they used the Boston ledgers, regular savings books and discounts, and the usual loans and mortgages. After transferring to Detroit, their system of banking included all the procedures as the small bank did. When he moved to Charlevoix, he found the system repeated once again. Only it was soon to be changed.

In the late 1920's and early 1930's, new systems were brought to Charlevoix. They did away with the Boston ledger, and took on the Burrough's posting machine for checking accounts.

After this, changes came and radically changed the banking of Charlevoix. They received the proof machines to lessen the chance of errors, and they started using the new computers designed to help banking.

Livingston recognized these changes as progress and could see it being very beneficial to our community bankers. He also recognized the need for younger people to come in and start working with these new computers, for they are the ones who created the computers and with it helped progress to beam.

When Livingston was a rather new face in the community, he was persuaded to run for city clerk. He ran against a local man and was defeated. After the election, Dr. Wilkinson came to Livingston and told him not to feel badly, because he had his complimentary vote.

Livingston remained involved with the activities of the city, and later went on to be elected city clerk, alderman, and chairman of the water commission.

He has been widely interested in the community and has the record to prove his sincerity toward the growth of Charlevoix.

Livingston said he is happy to see the new bank building coming along so well. He stated, "Right now we are very handicapped in our present quarters. With the new buildings, we will be able to serve the community in a much broader and finer way. Charlevoix and her surrounding areas are destined to progress."

In all his years of banking, Livingston was always present among his co-workers. He was there to unlock the door and greet them with a cheery "Good morning". Sometimes, he would not make it to the bank in the morning hours, but no matter what time he would arrive, he always had a "Good morning" for everyone. It became sort of a trademark with him.

Livingston is now set to retire. He stated, "I am very happy to have turned over my majority interest to such a fine group of men. I can feel that the bank's progress will be taken care of for service to the bank, stockholders, and the community."

He has always felt that he has had an exceptionally fine group of employees to work with. No matter what work was to be done, or what he would have liked to do, the bank always came first. When there was something for Archie, he would always share it with his employees. The bank became his life.

Livingston and his wife will be taking advantage of some free time now. They will be traveling to Sun City, Arizona, during their free time. They have been going to Sun City for several years, and have watched it grow from five model homes to a city with a population of 11,000 and still growing. They hope to build a home in Sun City and split their residence between Arizona and Charlevoix.

No matter where Archie Livingston goes, his banking will still be a part of him. Even after retirement, he will remain in the hearts of Charlevoix. He is letting the young take over the work at the bank, but the bank is still a part of Archie Livingston. It is his pride, his joy, and his life.

Just because he is retiring, it does not mean he will no longer be a part of Charlevoix. A close friend of his, while chatting on the corner, summed up his life quite well. Ben Gill said, "Archie, you are the only darn thing around here that hasn't changed."

William Supernaw, a member of the class was hospitalized and unable to attend. Mrs. Supernaw, however, did attend.

Joining them were several classmates who moved away or did not graduate with them for various reasons. They were Mr. and Mrs. Wesley (Edna Himebauch) Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gibelyou, Mrs. Versal (Irene McCann) Seymour, and Sister John Marte (Theresa) Bronersky of Lake Leelanau.

Mrs. Gibson, assisted by Mrs. Murray, arranged the event.

Tentative plans were made for the forty-fifth reunion.

State aid cuts $40M

The 1969-70 State School Aid Bill was given final legislative approval late last week and signed by Governor William Milliken, but Charlevoix was left out in the cold.

As signed by the Governor, the measure provides for approximately $848.7 million in state aid to education, or nearly $90 million more than last year. The final school aid figure is about $4 million more than recommended by the Governor.

While state lawmakers hail the bill as a milestone in education, a sober look at the local significance of the measure shows that the Charlevoix School District will receive $40,517 less in state aid next term that it did last year.

And, if the remedial reading course is dropped because of a teacher shortage due to the millage failure, the local district will lose $4,000 more.

The main culprit behind Charlevoix's decrease in aid is the state-ordered property revaluation which took place recently.

Local high-value property cut down on the dole from the state. Districts with lower property values throughout the state will share in the increased state aid, while the local school board attempts to cut over $100,000 from its proposed budget.

For the next school year, the state will give Charlevoix $147.72 for each public school pupil. This compares with $175.55 for each student last year, or a net loss of $27.83 per student.

Representative Robert W. Davis issued the following statement to the Courier concerning the bill:

"The only problem involved in the school aid bill is the length of time it took to work the measure through the legislative process. Progress on the bill has lagged some two months behind last year, when the school aid bill was passed in mid-April and signed into law on April 30.

"The early passage of the bill last year set an all-time record, and many legislators and educators believe that the decrease in teacher strikes could be largely attributed to this factor.

"The 1969-70 increase in education financing is a very generous one, and seems to be the maximum the State can give with present revenues and financing methods. Now that they know exactly how much money is available, educators at least have a chance to settle contracts in time for normal school openings. But the late passage of the bill leaves little time and an upswing of contract disputes could result.

"A comprehensive review of methods of education financing is planned by the Legislature this fall. Hopefully by next year we will have a more adequate means of financially supporting our school system. Most legislators are looking for a financing method which would ease the burden on property taxation," Davis concluded.

Pre-historic villages to be unearthed

Two pre-historic Indian villages in Charlevoix are being unearthed in a Michigan State University study.

Exact locations of the diggings are secret, but Charles Cleland, who is heading the project, said the sights were on Lake Michigan, in the county.

"These sights were discovered last summer during a short-term project designed to locate Indian habitations in the county," Cleland said.

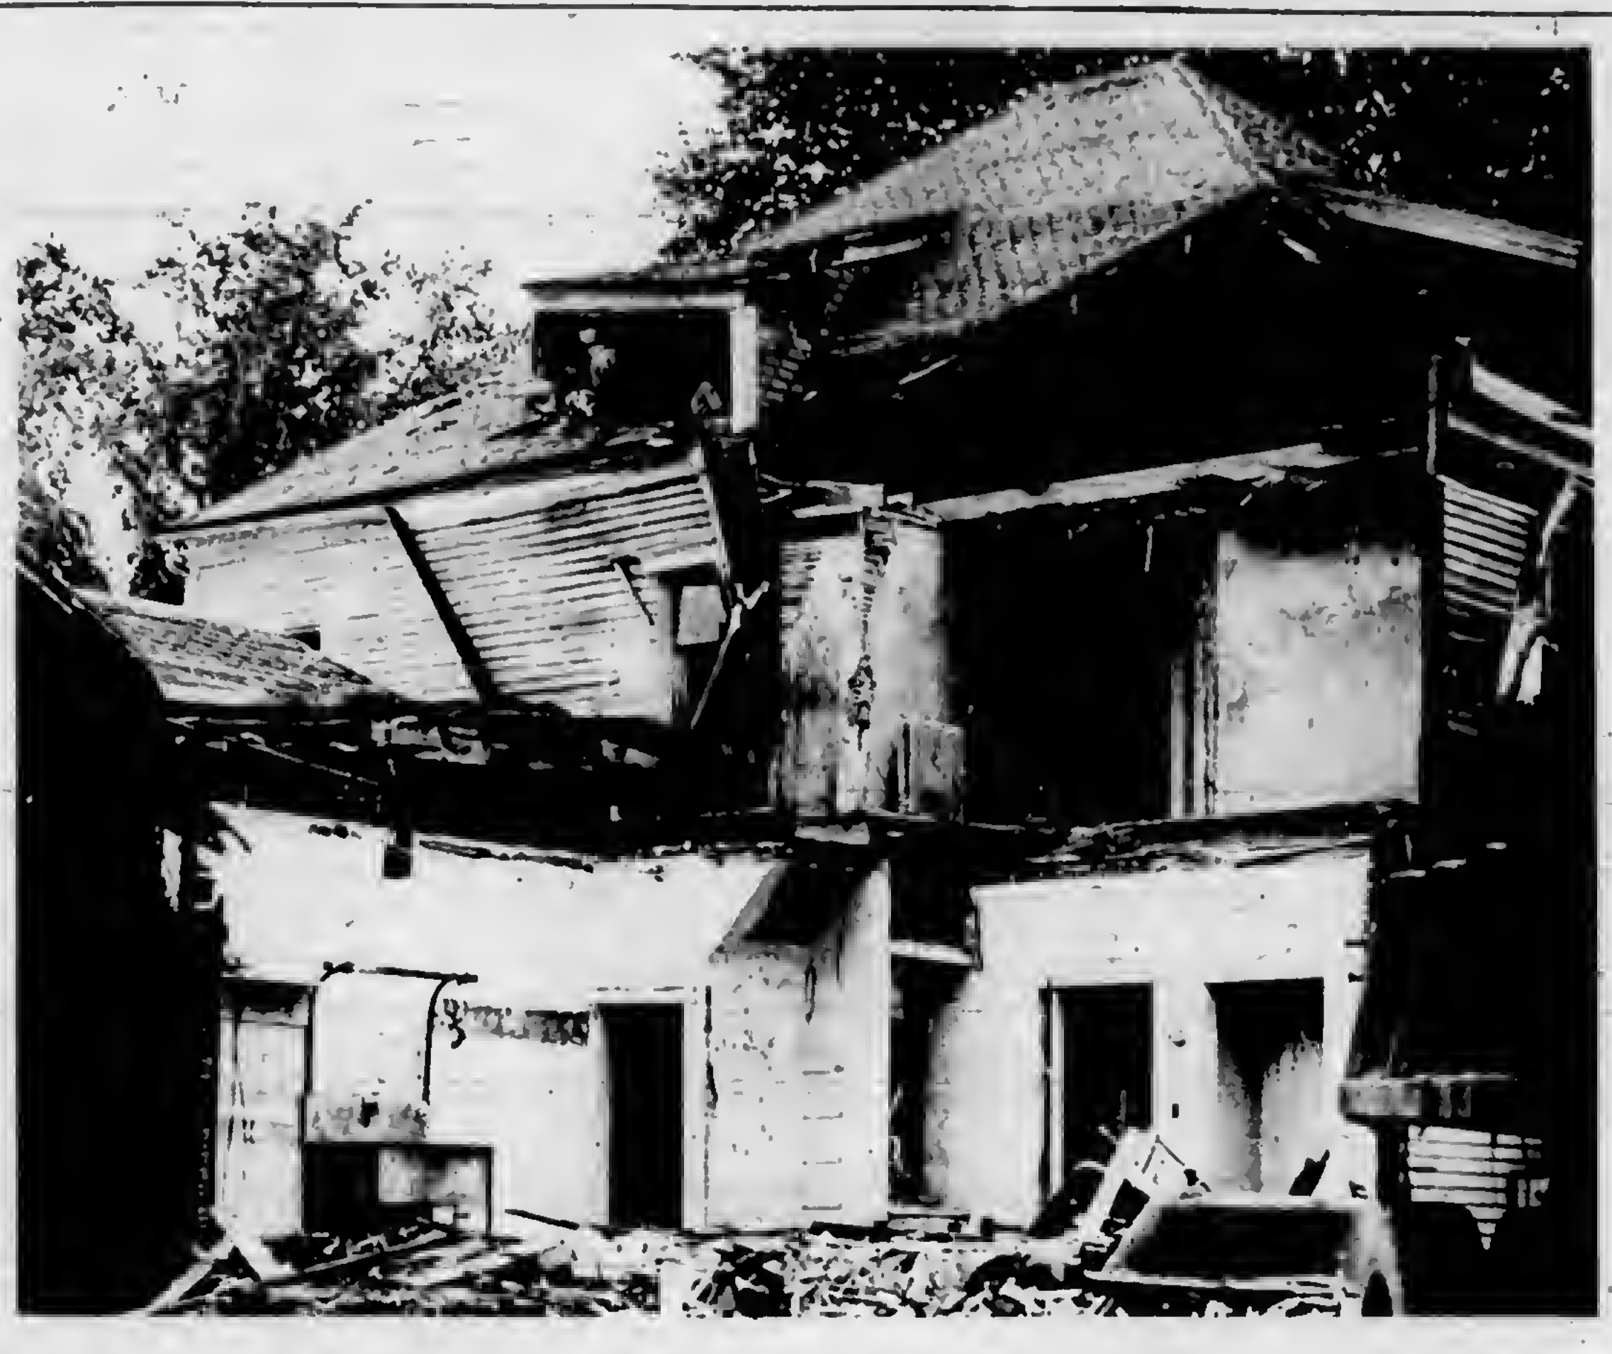
"Material found on the surface leads us to believe we'll find villages below. We found artifacts such as broken pieces of pottery, flint projectiles, knives and hide scrapers, as well as flint debris, which indicates that the village were occupied about 1,000 years ago.

"We are here to excavate the sights in hopes of learning more about the culture and way of life of early Indians in Northwest Michigan," Cleland added.

Cleland is an associate professor in the MSU department of anthropology and is also the curatove of anthropology at the MSU Museum.

Working with Cleland on the 10-week project are six graduate and undergraduate students, majoring in archeology at State.

In addition to their summer work, they are interested in gaining information about archeological material in the county.



Old casino on Meech Street was topic of recent Courier article. City Council ordered owner Hal Forbrig to clean-up property and secure the building. Work began this week with demolition crews on hand.

Redeker new president of First State Bank

Jerrald H. Redeker

Jerrald H. Redeker has been elected President of First State Bank of Charlevoix, Thomas A. Duke, Chairman of the Board has announced.

Redeker fills the position vacated by the recent retirement of Archie L. Livingston who has been elected President Emeritus in recognition of his half century of service to the bnk.

Redeker, a native of Waupun, Wisconsin, is a graduate of Hope College, Holland, Michigan, where he majored in business administration. In addition, he holds gratuate certificate from the American Institute of Banking.

He joined Michigan Bell Telephone Company after graduation from Hope, working in their traffic department until 1960, when he left to begin his banking career with Old Kent Bank & Trust Company, Grand Rapids. During 1958-1959, Redeker served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps., spending 17 months of this two-year period in Germany.

Beginning as a teller with Old Kent, he was promoted to assistant branch manager in 1962, and in 1964 at the age of 29, became the youngest branch manager in Old Kent Bank's history.

In May 1965, he joined Metropolitan National Bank of Farmington, as vice president, where he remained until November 1, 1967, when he joined First State Bank of Charlevoix, then known as The Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

Ten months later he was promoted to Executive Vice President and became chief administrative officer of the bank. His advancement to President was announced at the meeting of the Board of Directors last Friday.

Redeker is a board member of the Charlevoix Public Schools, vice president and elder of the Consistory of Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix, charter board member of Petoskey Area Youth for Christ and a director of the Charlevoix Lions Club.

He served as chairman of the commercial gifts division of the Charlevoix United Fund Drive last year.

Redeker and his wife, Elsie, and their three children, Lisa, Joel and Cara reside at 712 E. Dixon Avenue.

New county prison still priority item

Charlevoix County Board of Supervisors discussed the proposal for a new jail at their meeting last week.

Robert J. Russell, jail inspector for the Michigan Department of Corrections, was scheduled to speak at this meeting, but his visit was re-scheduled for July 8, due to illness.

Russell had advised the Board that the present county jail must meet state specifications, but thus far the Board has not started any re-modeling, re-building of the present structure. They have, though, purchased property as a site for a new jail and plans for construction have been drawn up by Steve Gerganoff of Ypsilanti.

A discussion was held on what should be done, but was concluded when John Kujawski, board chairman, told Kit Carson, chairman of the building and grounds committee, to prepare some firm figures and a proposed method of financing a new jail.

"The board apparently feels the community should be given the opportunity to express its wishes in the matter. A bond issue versus a building authority was discussed, but no decision was reached.

Kenneth Staley suggested that there should be a more detailed study of the present jail situation, to see if re-modeling could be done to meet the specifications. Kit Carson explained the establishment of a building authority, and William Taylor, of East Jordan, suggested methods of financing the project through a millage election.

Taylor did not think re-modeling would be practical for the existing building.

Kujawski asked Carson to bring in figures on the cost of financing the proposed jail and methods of financing it.

After this discussion was concluded, the board heard reports from Ralph Richardson and Jack Fitzgerald, engineering manager of the Road Commission on the progress of work being done at Whiting Park.

Fitzgerald is hopeful that toilet facilities now under construction, would be ready for the July 4th weekend.

Board ponders closing school

Setting the stage for its regular meeting next Monday night, the Charlevoix School Board met yesterday morning on the sight of the new elementary school.

School Superintendent Rex Milligan and the Board discussed briefly the "skeleton" budget, which will be aired at length Monday.

According to the school administration, the budget would include all program cuts originally discussed, and operating the district with two schools again next year.

According to the Board, it is possible that the system would operate only the high school and the new elementary school next term.

Should the two-school proposal be adopted by the Board, kindergarten through fifth grade would be housed in the new school.

Sixth graders would remain in the portable classrooms on the high school property, and seventh through twelfth grades would meet in the high school.

In that event, the present elementary school, slated to become the "middle school" next year, would become vacant.

The Board noted that with the basic skeleton budget, there would be a surplus which would be used to restore some of the program cutbacks.

Should all three school buildings be used next September, all proposed cutbacks would remain.

In other business, the Board heard a progress report on the new school.

According to spokesmen of Barnes Construction, general contractors, the building is going up at the expected speed. There are several minor problems, including the large amount of rain and delays in equipment delivery, but none presents a serious setback at this time.

The Board discussed the re-modeling of the present elementary school. Questions were raised concerning the feasibility of the project if the building will not be used next term.

The Board moved to complete the job whether or not only two schools are opened in September.

Three price estimates were received by the Board, and the contract was awarded to Barnes Construction. Work will begin this monh.

Barnes estimate of $116,000 for the job was considered fair, according to Board members.

High estimate was submitted by Pearson Company of Grand Rapids at $125,000.

All estimates excluded equipment.

The Board also discussed the summer band program, and decided to allow the project only if it is self-supporting. In order to reach the break-even point, 130 students must participate in the activity. The basic charge per student was set at $10.

Live-saving blood donated; hospital issues "thank you"

(Ed. note: Just after this story was written, a Charlevoix Hospital patient was in urgent need of blood. The call for donors was issued by the hospital and numerous donors came forth. The demand was met easily, according to Rollie Dudik, hospital administrator.)

Willa Riggs has worked at Charlevoix Hospital for one year. During that time, she has seen 130 pints of blood given to patients. Every drop of the life-giving substance was donated by area residents.

"We at the hospital just want to say 'thank you' to all those whom we have called upon to donate blood over the years," Mrs. Riggs said.

Mrs. Riggs, who is the chief laboratory technician at the hospital, migrated to Charlevoix from Lexington, Kentucky. She has been a technician for seven years.

She noted that many area organizations and businesses have donated blood in the past. "Among those who we have called on are the crew of the Coast Guard Cutter Sundew and the land Coast Guard station, American Mold, East Jordan Iron Works, Wil-Flow Corporation, Medusa Portland Cement Company, Freedman Art Craft, the Air Force installation at Bay Shore, Kroger Food Store, Staley's Hardware, Charlevoix Insurance Agency, ministers and the police," Mrs. Riggs stated.

Rollie Dudik, administrator of the hospital, noted that if it were not for the donors, patients would have to pay for blood they received.

"Now, there is no charge for blood that's donated. The blood itself is free, and only a small charge is made for the work involved in setting up the transfusion," Dudik said.

Yet, there is a side to the blood donation story which is not as bright.

"Our donor list is actually quite small," Mrs. Riggs related.

"We have approximately 50 donors on the active list, but over half of them have seldom - used blood types.

"Only 20 donors have the standard 'O' positive or 'A' positive types, and we try to take blood from a donor only twice a year," she added.

Dudik noted that 70 percent of the populace has these two most common blood types.

He indicated that individuals in the area are welcomed by the hospital as donors.

It was pointed out that such a donation could be a good way for an individual to help the local facility.

Dudik agreed. Mrs. Riggs noted that a blood donation is actually a painless process. "About the only discomfort is the momentary injection of the needle. Giving blood hurts very little."

Donations are requested only when the need arises for a particular patient. "It can only be stored for 21 days," Mrs. Riggs said, before it loses its usefulness.

To join the list of donors, a resident need only contact the hospital. Arrangements will be made to determine the blood type of the donor, and his or her name will be placed on the active list....to perhaps one day receive a call which might save a life.

Historic Greensky Church marks another milestone

By Bernice Wexstaff

Mah moo yuh mah dah mah huh
Wain je shih wain dah go ze young:
Wa yoo se mind Wa gwo se mind,
Kuh ya Pah ne zid O je chog!
Amen

The congregation, predominantly white, had considerable difficulty twisting tongues to form the unfamiliar combinations of vowels and consonants which comprise the Chippewa-Ottawa language, but manage they did and the oft-sung strains of the orthodox rang out at Greensky Hill Indian Church Sunday afternoon.

The special occasion, to which Charlevoix townspeople were invited, was the dedication of their newly acquired electric organ—quite an achievement in itself with the church's scanty membership of only 18 dedicated souls.

The event was also the Swan Song of Reverend Leona M. Winegarden, who is retiring from her pastorate in Charlevoix Methodist (now United) Church and affiliated Greensky Hill Church, due to personal health problems.

The merger resulted in both laughter and tears: Joy in the acquisition of the new organ and sorrow at the loss of Reverend Winegarden's ministry.

The short formal service culminated in the dedication of the organ in memory of George and Susan Greensky, who originated the ministry at Greensky Hill... Susan Aghosa, a woman of sterling character, well known in the North Country from Traverse City to the Straits of Mackinaw, as well as Margaret Joe, Theresa Walker, Jennie Francis, Sarah Carrow and Nellie Willis, all long time members of the hilltop church.

Old members still living honored at the dedication were: Mrs. Isabel Oliver, Andrew Wasaquam, John Willis, Louise Harrington, and Agnes Kagee.

Following the worship, a guest and friend of the Rev. Mrs. Winegarden, who summers at Elk Rapids, played a program of organ music for the listening pleasure of the assembly. The Prelude was the usual recital offering and all was quiet until Mrs. Browne began Bach's "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee", when the birds in the century-old maple trees came alive in the leafy bows above adding songs of their own to the continuing program.

Thus another historic episode was chalked up on the eternal ledger of the century - old Greensky Hill Methodist Church on the old Dixie Highway at Charlevoix.

Claudia's comments

Look-out beer-lovers, your days are over! You people that have long enjoyed the taste of a nice, cold beer on a hot afternoon, may be switching to ice tea or possibly to even plain water....Your beer-drinking days may be numbered.

When we weren't looking, a bill was sent to Congress to raise the price of this beverage. The House accepted the bill, passed it, and sent it on to the Senate for their vote. It must have been a rainy and cold day when they voted, for the bill was passed in the Senate, 60 to 40.

A Republican, freshman lawmaker from Saginaw Bert C. Brennan said it would "raise the price of 'the poor man's champagne' close to the cost of champagne, except without the bubbles' ".

So, all you beer lovers out there, you are going to have to pay more to enjoy your beer. It is estimated that the price will increase about 10 cents a six-pack, or 40 cents a case. That averages at 1 2/3 cents more per bottle or can than what you are now paying. This bill will set the minimum retail price at 22 percent over the wholesale price. With the passage of this bill, the State Liquor Control Commission now makes beer subject to their price regulations.

Is beer worth this hike in price? Some will answer yes, and others no. It really makes no difference. Those who enjoy their beer will gladly put out the extra 1 2/3 cents a bottle. Others, who don't like beer, or just consider it an un - necessary item on their shopping list, will simply drop it from their diet and switch to something else.

In either case, the law has been passed, and we pay the consequence. To all you beer-drinkers, I extend my condolences. And to those of you who do not drink beer, I consider you 10 cents a six-pack richer!

Fluoride dates set

Dates for the Charlevoix Fluoride Program have been set for August 13 through 25.

One hundred and fifty youngsters have applied to receive the applications. Appointment cards have been sent out to be signed and returned as soon as possible to the chairman, Mrs. Jacqueline Klooster, Route 1, Box 145, Charlevoix.

The treatment will consist of four applications a day or two apart, of Sodium Fluoride, applied directly to the teeth. The first appointment will also consist of a cleaning of the teeth.

Anyone not able to keep the appointments should notify the chairman as soon as possible, so others who applied later can take advantage of the opening.

The hygienist this year comes from Ferris State College in Big Rapids. She is Miss Lynne Nensewitz of Alpena, and will be staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sundquist.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER
CHAMBER MANAGER

By way of the grapevine, I learned someone in town apparently is interested in establishing a Welcome Wagon program here. I hope the inquirer reads this column and accordingly, if he or she gets in touch with me, I will gladly give the name, address and other detail for contact.

Safe boating week, June 29 through July 5. Twenty national organizations are mounting a coordinated effort to observe and promote National Safe Boating Week, proclaimed by President Nixon. I presume our County Sheriff's Office will have available further detail.

A letter received from Youngstown, Ohio, expressed appreciation for brochures and letter in response to an inquiry. They greatly appreciated our letter and happy to advise they rented a cottage here for their holiday for the first time in Michigan. This is one of many examples.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. This office yet has many names of applicants of young student's availability, anywhere from grass cutters on up to light factory work, secretarial work, dishwashing, waitress, etc. Let's hear from you. In some measure or other we have been able to assist a number of these youngsters so far.

A listing from West Michigan Tourist Association showing contacts they received this week at their Grand Rapids office. This list indicated 67 American Plan inquiries, 120 motel and hotel inquiries, 117 housekeeping cottage inquiries, 79 camping. Those fitting and/or requesting our area or similarity, we respond to.

To you business people and otherwise for what it is worth to you, we have a 1969 directory of Chambers of Commerce, (Michigan) Trade and Professional Association. We also have a worldwide directory of Chambers of Commerce which can be used at this office.

Our inbound mail is continuing to be quite heavy, which has gone on since last October, plus other phases we normally would be involved in.

The University of Michigan Graduate School of Business Administration at Ann Arbor, have scheduled two general meetings regarding help for increasing exports, one at Ann Arbor on June 25 and the other at Grand Rapids June 26. We have full details for any of you industries or otherwise who would be interested in attending or getting more pertinent information having to go with this.

The swans in our harbor, Monday June 9, really attracted attention. The mother and father, so to speak, had five little ones out for a swim and they were having a ball and made the usual rounds from one boat to another begging for food. Sorry I did not have a camera handy. It would have been an interesting shot or two.

Here's one of unusual merit. A little 12 year old girl, Suzette, applied for babysitting and left her homemade business card which I quote as follows: "Pet Owners! Attention! Don't let your pet stay tied up. Take him for a walk. 'Sue's Pet Walking Service' 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Call 7-8679."

In case you do not know, your Chamber of Commerce has membership in two worth while organizations, one being the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce and the other National Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

It might interest you to know the Great Lakes Charter Service for the sports fishery, personal cruises, etc. based here at Charlevoix are on the way. They had quite a number of successful bookings recently and had a good play so far as their Bass Fishing Camp out on Hog Island. Probably some of you saw Bob Clock's article and pictures in the Petoskey News-Review recently having to do with this group. It was quite informative, I would say.

Library Notes

As a change of pace from the current and popular best sellers of the day, the Library would like to bring to the attention of its readers some rather serious and important new additions to our shelves. Some of the books offer tranquil inspiration, others provide thought-provoking reading and still others are of timely interest. All of them are highly recommended.

"Jean-Paul Sartre, The Existentialist Ethic" by Norman N. Greene has a ponderous title, but this small volume is one of the fairest and most searching studies on Sartre which has appeared in the English language. Published by the University of Michigan Press, its purpose is to help explain and understand Existentialism and its foremost leader.

"The Abominable Airlines" is an alarming report by George Johnson that asks, "Why is pilot error given as the cause of so many air disasters?" "Why does only one out of five American airports have adequate all-weather landing facilities?" and "Why does only one major line want to lower fares even though half of all airline seats are flying empty?" The author concerns himself with these and other airborne issues. It is a well-written book which will be of interest to anyone who travels, or plans to travel, by air.

"Arms, Money and Politics" by Julius Duscha is a challenging book about our defense program. It gives a searching look at the politics involved and the problems of gradual disarmament. The author is a political and economics reporter on the national news staff of the Washington Post.

"Re - Appraisals: Some commonsense readings in American literature" by Martin Green will appeal not only to specialists in American life and letters but to novel readers as well who may have found themselves out of step with some of the modern guides. Mr. Green has re-read certain American classics, seeking a fresh appraisal of the works themselves, and the result makes rewarding reading.

The lovely book with its equally lovely title "The Singing and the Gold" is a collection of poems translated from world-literature. It offers the reader a chance to compare the different approaches to the great themes of existence of men of different nationalities and epochs, and it also offers proof that man through the ages and across continents thinks essentially the same thoughts in his eternal musings over God, death, love, the seasons, sorrow, and despair-indeed, in his universal quest for truth and beauty.

Anyone who is not familiar with Japanese Haiku has missed an enriching experience. "Cricket Songs" a tiny volume of these delicate, non-rhyming verses will delight readers of all ages and perhaps even inspire them to write their own haiku.

Hospital Guild

Charlevoix Hospital Women's Guild held its monthly meeting on Monday June 9, with 21 members present.

Rollie Dudik, hospital administrator, addressed the group, and spoke of in-service volunteer work. He asked the guild members to participate in this new venture, which will become effective in the next few weeks.

This will enable volunteers to give much needed assistance to hospital personnel. Guild members can volunteer for any time of the day or week and can assist in most departments of the hospital. For further information, members may contact Mrs. Donald Couse at 547-2883, or Mrs. Donald Berlage 547-9961.

A special thank you was given the Cub Scouts of Den 1 and Den 4 for special tray favors for each patient on Father's Day. The den mothers are Mrs. Tom Hanna and Mrs. Walt Hufford. Each scout made his individual favor and they were unique.

The scholarship committee announced the recipient of the practical nursing scholarship for next year. It will be awarded to Miss Cynthia Shooks, of Central Lake. Miss Shooks plans to attend practical nursing school in Traverse City.

Final plans and projects were discussed for the annual Kitchen Tour on July 16 were discussed.

Nazarene news

Sunday at the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene, Glenn Bearss will be the guest speaker at both worship services, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Bearss had been associated with Rev. Cecil Drost on the radio from Petoskey. He sang the gospel songs on the programs when Rev. Drost preached. He also accompanied Rev. Drost on a trip to the Holy Land about two years ago.

The church especially invites the people who have no church home to attend, as well as any others who care to worship with them.

EMU grads set record

A record - breaking 1,516 degrees were awarded by Eastern Michigan University at its 116th June Commencement last weekend in Bowen Field House, Ypsilanti. A crowd of more than 5,000 attended the ceremonies.

She also received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities conferred upon her last year but which she could not accept at the time because circumstances did not permit her attendance.

Davis says jobs open

The Michigan Civil Service Department is now accepting applications for state jobs in specialized clerical work, economic analysts and anesthology, according to State Representative Robert Davis.

Representative Davis said that a July 7 deadline has been established for submission of applications for these jobs. All of the positions are available on an open competitive basis.

Positions for hearings reporters (employment grade 9), a specialized clerical field involving transcription of verbatim testimony, have an annual salary scale of $8,775 to $10,800. Three employment levels (9-11) are available for economic analysts, with salaries ranging from $7,850 to $12,475. Prison anesthetists (grade 12) are being sought for positions paying $11,050 to $14,075 annually.

An evaluation of education and experience will be an important factor in judging the qualifications of applicants. Written tests, if required, will be held August 9. An oral appraisal may also be required.

Rapresentative Davis suggested that anyone interested in more complete information on the qualifications, work responsibilities and salaries of these and other state employment opportunities should contact their local state employment office or write the Michigan Civil Service Department in the Lewis Cass Building, Lansing.

Levern McGhans note 50th wedding date

Mr. and Mrs. Levern E. McGhan

Mr. and Mrs. Levern E. McGhan will observe their 50th Wedding Anniversary at a reception Sunday afternoon, June 22, at Harmony Hall, United Methodist Church in Charlevoix.

Their children and grandchildren are inviting relatives, neighbors, and friends to attend. The honored couple will greet guests from 2 to 4 p.m.

Mr. McGhan and the former Florence U. Meggison were married in the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. George Meggison of Marion Center. The late Rev. Henry Chandler officiated at the marriage ceremony.

The attendants at the wedding on June 18, 1919, were Mrs. Grant (Beryl) Mudge, the bride's sister and the late Harlan McGhan, brother of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. McGhan made their home on a dairy farm in Marion Center until their retirement in 1958, at which time they moved to their present home at 502 W. Upright Street in Charlevoix.

Both have been active and held offices in the Gleaners, Marion Center Grange, and Farm Bureau, of which he was a charter member. Mr. McGhan also served as chairman of the board for the Charlevoix Co-Op for 20 years. Mrs. McGhan is a former school teacher.

Both are active members of the United Methodist Church of which they have been members for 45 years.

They have two children, Clare L. McGhan of Fresno, California, and Mrs. Robert (Joyce) Borchardt of Bay City, and four granddaughters and one great-granddaughter.

A request is made that there will be no gifts.

Fashion takes on another dimension

In California couture collections, spring's elegantly ladylike fashions take on a new dimension.

For daytime, the ensemble's the thing . . . and dress plus jacket costumes are in the forefront of fashion. Silhouettes are soft and fluid. Jackets are either long and belted or cropped to show a wide belt on the softly shaped dress underneath.

Where there is fullness, it's controlled. Where there are pleats for movement and flare, they are inverted and soft rather than razor-sharp. Hemlines are pegged at a ladylike level: at the top of the knee to a few inches above.

The subtle silhouettes naturally focus interest on the fabrics—and especially those with extra dimension. Cotton, the fabric of a thousand faces, rises to the occasion with surfaces that are ribbed or nubby . . . puckered or tweedy . . . waffled or sculptured. Prints-on-textures add further interest in the form of eye-pleasing plaids and checks, florals, abstracts, and geometrics.

What it all adds up to are spring costumes that are pretty, feminine, and flattering — a look the ladies like and the men applaud.

(Ed. note: The following column was written during the National Hockey League meetings in Montreal last week. At the conclusion of those meetings, Chuck Hamilton was traded from the Detroit Red Wings to the Montreal Canadians.)

CHUCK HAMILTON

Detroit Red Wing fans watched the National Hockey League meetings in Montreal closely.

What may turn out to be the most important move by the Red Wings was the selection of Chuck Hamilton during the major-minor league draft.

Hamilton has spent the past seven years with the Hershey Bears of the American League.

We have known him for three of those years.

Though not blessed with great speed on the ice, Hamilton always seems to be in the right spot at the right time.

He combined on a line with Gil Gilbert, ex-St. Louis Blue, and Michel Harvey, to form one of the highest scoring lines in pro hockey this past year.

The cigar - smoking Ontario - bred Hamilton has the reputation of giving 100 percent every moment he's on the ice.

During the off-season, he attends college in Canada, working toward a degree in math. When his hockey days are over, he wants to teach in the backwoods of Northern Canada, and spend his spare time fishing and hunting.

As it turns out, the Red Wings not only collected a Hershey player, but they also tried to discard one in Poul Popiel.

They left Popiel off the protected list...and in this defenseman's case, it may mean the NHL end for Pope.

He has now been given shots with Boston, Los Angeles and Detroit, but hasn't been a big hit anyplace. Former teammates have told us he has the ability it takes, but not the attitude.

In the Open

By Lee Smits

They tell you in South Dakota that their pheasant is not the bird he used to be. Present - day pheasants refuse to fly. They are runners, hugging the ground, not presenting themselves as shotgun targets.

Every Michigan deer hunter knows that bucks are well aware when they are legal game, whereas protected does pop into view frequently, assuming that they won't be shot.

Michigan trout fishermen who fish the waters of the Ontario wilderness quickly discover that Canadian trout are by no means as shy and cautious as our native brooks.

At the turn of the century a prized bird dog in the Upper Peninsula was a "tree dog". He would put a covey of grouse into a tree then bark to hold their attention while they were gunned down, one by one. Today an occasional grouse may sit in a tree, waiting to be shot, but it is a rare occurrence.

How do animals learn to evaluate danger? There are two theories to account for major changes in animal behavior, and there seems to be no general agreement among wildlife biologists as to which is the right explanation. Because pheasants that flush are killed, while runners survive, suggests that, over the years, a race of running birds is developed. The opposing school of thought holds that wariness is a learned trait, somehow communicated by educated specimens to their ignorant associates.

Science has solved many a mystery of nature, yet has left us with plenty of unanswered questions. It was firmly believed, years ago, that crows could smell gun powder. Otherwise why did they keep at a distance from a man with a gun, yet pay little attention to an unarmed farmer?

A few years ago a permit was issued to collect a Michigan raven for a collection of mounted birds in an Audubon museum in Connecticut. Ravens have become common in some northern counties, possibly because traffic - killed deer provide a super-abundance of food. Two men, one driving the other in readiness with a shotgun, drove highways and back roads in the central part of the Upper Peninsula, determined to kill a raven.

They would spot a raven, half a mile down the road, and prepare for action. Invariably the raven took off long before they got in range. Driving without a gun in the car, they passed ravens at distances of 20 feet, perched in trees or feeding on a dead animal. Those two men could never be convinced that ravens aren't mind-readers.

Rangers in national parks are convinced that wild mammals and birds have advance notice of earthquakes, floods, destructive storms. Questions any professional dog trainer and he will give you instances of estrasensory perception in dogs. The dog that is enthusiastic about riding in the family car can't be coaxed into the car when it is planned to deliver the dog to the veterinarian for surgery.

Care must be taken not to go overboard for the occult, yet there is no harm in examining some of the outdoor mysteries that the professors can't explain.

Tiger Tales

When the Tigers signed him for a bonus as soon as he graduated from Detroit's Northwestern High School in 1961 they labeled Willie Horton as the finest homegrown prospect to wear the Bengal blue since the signing of Barney McCosky and proclaimed to the world that he could not miss being a big-league star.

Willie has fulfilled the prophecy. In fact, it took just one week of the 1965 season to project him into the ranks of the game's premier sluggers. In seven games at Washington and Boston he clouted six home runs and five doubles and batted in 16 runs. He raised his average on May 18 to .408 and was voted a starting outfielder for the All-Star game.

For the season Horton batted in 104 runs, second highest total in the league, and his .490 slugging percentage placed him sixth among the big bombers of the circuit. Fourteen of his 29 homers traveled 400 feet or more. Four times he hit two homers in a game.

In 1966 he continued his assault on the power records. He hit the first grand slam of his career and delivered 10 "clutch" hits (tie-breakers or come from behind to win), six of them home runs, to lead the club.

Hobbled the entire 1967 season by a bad ankle, Willie still managed to clout 19 home runs and drive in 67 runs. The Tiger slugger was praised for his courage and gutty performances in overcoming the painful injury. He underwent surgery immediately after the final game and emerged his old self in 1968 -- a powerful, ever-dangerous clutch hitter.

Horton clouted 36 four-baggers in the pennant - winning year and again won a starting berth on the All-Star team. His .285 average was fourth best in the league, and he capped the year by hitting .304 with a home run and three RBI in the World Series.

Horton developed swiftly in the minors. As a 19-year-old he hit .295 for Duluth, then .333 at Knoxville in 1963 and .326 in 15 games when the Tigers called him up in September. In spring training in 1964 he was the most devastating of all Tiger hitters with five homers and 18 RBI. One full season at Syracuse, where he belted 28 home runs and batted in 99 runs, rounded out his program of apprenticeship.

One of 13 children and the son of a coal miner, Horton was only eight years old when the family moved from Arno, Va. to Detroit. Even before he entered Northwestern High, Willie attracted the eye of veteran Detroit scout Louis D-Annuzio with his sandlot play. By the time he was 16, Willie was hitting .400 in summer league action and leading his prep team to the City League championship.

On his second trip to the plate in the majors the 5-11, 200-pound Horton blasted a home run off Robin Roberts of Baltimore to serve notice of bigger things to come. Strong and not slow, Willie has battled his waistline and has overcome his weight problems with the same determination with which he solved major league pitchers.

Willie is married to the former Patricia Strickland, and they live in Detroit with their son and daughter.

Softball opener set

The City softball league officially opens with a doubleheader tonight (Wednesday). The fastball league Tip Off tournament finds a twinbill with Medusa meeting County State Bank at 7:15 and Ellsworth going against defending Champion, American Mold, at 8:45.

Medusa will pitch Sonny Wright against County State Bank's Rich Heeris. In the nightcap, two seasoned veterans will square off. Ellsworth's Bob Klooster will oppose Mold's Nate Boss. This year's fastball league is composed of just four teams. However, the feeling is that they are the best teams to compete in the summer-long program for many a season.

The finals and consolutation games of the tournament will be played Friday Night with the two losers meeting at 7:15 and the winners scheduled for 8:45.

A slow pitch league is in the planning stage and at present four teams appear to be ready to go. This league is for players who don't desire the highly competitive fastball league. Anyone desiring to enter a team or desiring to join a team should contact Deano Davenport at 547-6433.

The Peanut league will start league play on Thursday with the Lions meeting the Tigers at 6:30 p.m., and the Cards taking on the Braves at 7:15. The remainder of the league will be in action next week. The Junior league will open Thursday night with Freedmans meeting Novaks at 8:45.

The Blooper and Women's league will be opening next week.

Grandvue Report

Patients who will be celebrating birthdays during June are: Erma Beckwith, June 7th; Edward Robinson, June 7th; Glenn Maxson, June 10th; Newton Thomas, June 18th; David Moby, June 21st; and Grace Smith, June 29th.

We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Hunter and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pochert of Port Hope visit our Facility on May 19th. Mr. Hunter was Exchange Mayor, and Mr. Pochert is a councilman in Port Hope.

Area pastors chose Grandvue as their meeting place May 20th for the monthly Ministerial Meeting. Those present were Rev. George Majors, Albert Mansen, James Larsen, Chandler Benton, Stanley Hayes, Seward Walton, and Marcus Krake.

May 20 was also the day of the monthly Utilization meeting, with Dr. Martin, Dr. VanDellen, and Dr. Savory attending.

Al Anderson and several of his accordion students visited on May 20th and played several numbers for the patients.

Patients and staff alike have enjoyed the visits of Mrs. Loren C. Bow of East Jordan recently. Mrs. Bow has played the organ, given readings, and sung several songs for the patients. We appreciate these "extra's" greatly, as it helps to break the daily routine living for these patients.

The monthly meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Social Welfare was held at the Facility on May 21st, with Mrs. Doris Reynolds, Rev. George Majors, Vern Whiteford, and Mrs. Jewel Bryan present.

An interest in organizing an Auxiliary for Grandvue has been expressed, and in order to acquaint ladies in the surrounding area with the need and duties of such an Auxiliary, there will be a Tea and Open House at the Facility on June 12th at 2:00 in the afternoon. All ladies who are interested in this project are urged to attend.

What does the figure $52 billion mean to you? It means a brighter future for millions of Americans who own that much in Series E and H bonds and "Freedom Shares".

Davis notes state jobs

The Michigan Civil Service Department is now accepting applications for several state jobs, according to State Representative Robert W. Davis (R-St. Ignace).

Representative Davis said that a June 23 deadline has been set for submission of applications for jobs in chemistry, social service, agriculture and promotion work. The positions are available on an open competitive basis.

Two employment levels (7 and 9) are open for chemists, with annual salaries ranging from $7,575 to $10,800. Other jobs available are social services representative (10), $8,900 to $10,950; agriculture resource analyst (12), $10,150 to $13,200; and department field agent (11), $9,350 to $12,050.

An evaluation of experience and education will be an important factor in judging applicants. Written examinations and/or oral appraisals may also be required upon notification of the department. If written tests are necessary, they will be held July 26.

Representative Davis also reported that applications will be accepted until further notice for several other state jobs. The applications will be used to establish employment lists from which vacancies will be filled.

Representative Davis suggested that anyone interested in more complete information on the qualifications, work responsibilities and salaries of these and other state employment opportunities should contact their local state employment office or write to the Michigan Civil Service Department in the Lewis Cass Building, Lansing.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith

Wedding bells ring for area couples

Smith, Hiller troth told

Mr. and Mrs. E. James Hiller, 415 Prospect Street, Charlevoix, announce the marriage of their daughter, Pamela, to Donald Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Smith, Barnard Road, Charlevoix.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lawrence E. Tenhopen, June 14, at the First Congregational Church, Charlevoix.

The wedding took place at 2 p.m., with approximately 200 guests attending.

The bride's gown was of silk saki with the princess line style. The elbow length sleeves and jewel neckline were of embroidered medallions touched with irredescent sequins. The cathedral length train was fastened at the shoulder by two matching Dior bows. A cascade of matching embroidered medallions held the double silk tulle veil. Her bouquet was made of phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Roberta Hiller, sister of the bride. Best man was Carlton H. Smith, II, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Jeanne Smith, sister of the groom, Mary Biagini of Fenton, and Rebecca Hiller, sister of the bride. They were identically attired in aquamarine linen gowns, with tiny triple cap sleeves, edged in white picot, wide sabrina necklines and Dior bows at the Empire waistline. They had matching headpieces of flare tulle and Dior bows. They carried cloud bouquets of rose and pink miniature roses, pink carnation and baby's breath.

The flower girl was Kate Pow of East Grand Rapids. Her costume was styled similarly to those of the bridesmaids and she carried a basket of pink miniature roses and baby's breath.

The Ringbearer was Timothy Hiller, brother of the bride.

Groomsmen were Rich Nicolai of Fraser, Randy Carey, and Jim Uhrick. Ushers were Dennis Warner and Melvin Matchett.

A reception was held at the Weathervane Inn immediately following the ceremony. Mrs. John VanDam of Bronson, cousin of the groom; the Misses Toni Goss, Linda Supernaw, Nancy Smith, and Merilyn Edwards, all of Charlevoix; Christine Cross of East Lansing; and Mr. and Mrs. William Sheatheim of Okemos all assisted at the reception.

A brief wedding trip is planned, then both will be attending the summer session at Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant.

The bride is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and is a senior student at Central Michigan University. The groom is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and Michigan State University, where he was affiliated with Phi Eta Sigma fraternity. He is presently teaching in the Petoskey High School.

Charlotte church wedding

Elaine T. Warner, 6661 Canal Rd., Windsor Estate, Dimondale, Michigan, and Richard C. Ranshaw, Route 1, Fairview Rd., Charlotte, were recently united in marriage by Rev. Mother, at the Lawrence Avenue Methodist Church, Charlotte.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Leland R. Warner, 317 Mason, Charlevoix. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ranshaw of Charlotte.

The bride chose a silk organza over taffeta gown and delicately trimmed with rosepoint lace. The dress had slightly belled sleeves, jeweled with seed pearls and myriads of babypearls. To complete her attire, she chose a head piece Camelot Cap of English netting trimmed with re-embroidered Alencon lace, Babypearls, and sequins. She carried a cascade of white and pink varigated mums, rose buds and baby breath.

Jacquelyn M. Warner, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Junior bridesmaids were Rachelle, sister, and Jill, sister, Mrs. Roger Nevins of Lansing, friend of the bride.

Their costumes were identical gowns of pink dotted swiss over taffeta, trimmed with venice lace flowers at empire bodice. They carried hurricane lamps which were centered in an arrangement of pink and white variagated mums, pink rose buds, and baby breath.

The flower girl was Sharon Foskit, cousin of the groom. She wore a miniature replica of the bridesmaids gowns.

Ringbearer was Clayton Troyer, cousin of the groom from Detroit.

Best man was Jim Banfield, close friend and fraternity brother of the groom, from Lansing.

Groomsmen were Ronald Dehn, cousin of the bride from Lansing; Larry Ranshaw, brother of the groom, and Roger Nevins, friend of the groom from Lansing.

A reception was held at the Charlotte Armory. Mr. and Mr. Richard McMahon, cousins of the bride, assisted with the guest book. Mrs. Max Dehn and Mrs. Gerald Burnett, aunts of the bride, help served the wedding cake.

The bride is a 1967 Charlevoix High School graduate and has recently graduated from Lansing Business University.

She is affiliated with the Gamma Omicron Chapter of Alpha Iota Sorority, and is employed with Raymond L. Scodeller, prosecuting attorney for Ingham County.

The groom is a graduate of Charlotte High, a veteran of three years in the Navy, and a graduate of L.B.U. He is a member of Phi Theta Pi Fraternity, and is employed in offices of Oldsmobile.

Approximately 150 guests attended the ceremony, coming from as far away as Indiana, Detroit, Lansing, St. Johns, Florida, Flint and Charlevoix.

Miss Losa is bride

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Losa announce the marriage of their daughter, Lynn Williams of Pinckney, to Charles E. Coleman of Stockbridge, son of Mrs. S. E. Coleman and the late Mr. Coleman.

The ceremony was held June 14 at a p.m. service at St. Mary's Church in Pinckney.

Matron of Honor was Mrs. Peter Loso, Jr., sister-in-law of the bride. Stewart E. Coleman, brother of the groom, was the best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. The couple will be honeymooning in the East, and will reside in Charlevoix for the summer on Meadowlane, while Coleman will be harbor master.

Lynn teaches in Gregory, Michigan, and Chuck in Stockbridge. Both will return to their jobs in September.

The bride is a Charlevoix High School graduate, and a student at Davenport College of Business.

There were guests from Mancelona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Central Lake, Pennsylvania, and Ellsworth.

4-H notes Dairy month

June is Dairy month. The time when statewide attention is focused on the good taste and nutrition of dairy products. Hundreds of 4-H'ers observe the month which originally represented a high period of high milk production. May and June are still tops, according to the American Dairy Association, but science has made the remaining 10 months highly productive, also.

The national 4-H Dairy awards program, sponsored for the 13th straight year by the Oliver Corporation of Chicago, covers such a broad area of activities that even city kids can participate. So says a recent bulletin published by the National 4-H Service Committee.

Sons and daughter of dairy farmers are in the production end of the business. But youngsters living in urban communities read up on dairy products, tour a dairy farm and a local milk distributor or processing plant. All 4-H'ers working on dairy projects can find out about the wide variety of jobs the $12 billion industry has to offer.

Dairy projects are at their peak right now. Dairy animals will soon be groomed for 4-H shows and fairs. Contests, demonstrations, judging and records will be considered by the Cooperative Extension Service in determining the 1969 award winners.

County, state, sectional and national awards will be provided by Oliver Corporation. In order named they are: gold-filled dairy medals, $50 U.S. savings bond; expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress; six $600 scholarships.

Enrollment in the 4-H Dairy program is not restricted to boys. Last year 17 of the 48 top award winners were girls.

4-H news

Approximately 80 garden club members received their tomato plants, beans, zinnas and marigold seeds June 3. They would like to thank the Charlevoix Co-Op Company for helping with the garden seeds.

The Charlevoix County 4-H Council meeting was held June 9 at the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce Building. Bill Grimm, Bill Gaunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Jones, Mrs. Alfred Crowell, Mrs. Harry Howard, Louise Howard, Mrs. Eugene Umlor, Joyce Umlor and Keith Lampkin, 4-H youth agents were present.

Bill Grimm's committee announced plans for the June 30 4-H awards supper, at Whiting Park at 8:30 p.m. Council members are urged to bring meat dishes.

The awards will be presented at 7:45 followed by a baseball game and folk dancing.

4-H camp will be held August 4 thru 8 at Wilderness State Park. Information will be mailed out to 4-H members.

If any 4-H clubs in Charlevoix have information or news call 536-7751.

School fiscal reform

School elections are over now, and elected board officials and their administrations will have to wrestle in earnest with the problem of financing education.

State law requires that school budgets be set, aired before the public and confirmed by July 1, start of the school fiscal year.

BUT MANY schools ignore the statutory requirement and even Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley in a report on Troy school finances said the existing laws for school fiscal periods is unrealistic.

This appears true particularly when contract negotiations with teachers and other organized school-district employees drag on into the summer months. Then, too, the Michigan Legislature contributes to the delay by failing to produce a state aid allotment in time for many districts to evaluate their total fiscal picture.

Frankly, the Michigan education system is a mess fiscally. Teachers mistrust school boards and the school boards have been enveloped in a cloud of contention with a public made suspicious by the very elements of collective bargaining that require adversary secretiveness.

FURTHER AGGRAVATING the situation is the economic squeeze property owners suffer because of a taxing system that is outmoded.

The governor has set a special session of the legislature to deal with the whole matter of school finances. It will convene in October at which time a special commission studying the problem will make its report.

We contend the burden of school financing will have to be shifted from the property tax or the state school financial structure will collapse.

ALTERNATIVES INCLUDE an income tax, sales and nuisance taxes, increased race track taxes and such possibilities as dog racing and lottery revenue.

We favor the income tax, which the state constitution stipulates can only be a flat rate. Deductions up to $1,200 per individual would remove the inequity for those at the lower end of the economic ladder.

However, there will be no equity in bearing the school fiscal burden as long as teachers have the unregulated right to strike. The legislature is preparing measures that would require compulsory arbitration for police and fire unions. Legislators indicate they will adopt a wait-and-see position with regard to application of such bargaining restrictions for teachers.

WE DON'T THINK there is a need to wait. Clearly, though, we strongly support the right of trained and qualified teachers to be appropriately paid for their contribution to community and society. In the past these professionals have been abused economically. Their militancy, however, is no justification for driving education to mediocrity, which is all that will occur if public resistance to taxes grows.

An income tax can support basic education. If there is a desire by a community to enrich its school programs, then there should be a means for asking residents to produce the revenue needed by local taxes on the basis of fair property assessments. (Birmingham Eccentric)

Pension plans

Some 30 million Americans can look forward to retirement income from a private pension plan in addition to the benefits they will receive from social security and personal savings.

Retirement benefits from private pension systems now total about $5 billion annually and are increasing each year. However, future new growth is threatened by proposed federal legislation which would set restrictive minimum standards and establish unnecessary federal pension insurance against plan failure.

Passage would lead to drastic curtailment of private pension plans at a time when private group pensions, according to a recent report of the United States Senate Special Committee on Aging, "will continue to be essential supplements to basic social security benefits in the future."

Each private pension plan is based on the particular resources of the company and the needs of its employees. Many plans are the result of mutual agreement with employee representatives. As a result, they must vary widely in the kinds of benefits and the costs. For example, in the early years, most private pension plans are structured to grant immediate protection to older employees who will soon retire. As the plan matures, more emphasis can be given to other benefits.

The continued growth of private pension systems would be substantially impaired without this vital factor of flexibility.

Private pension plans have an excellent record. Of all the millions of employees covered, one-tenth of one percent lose out because of private plan failures. This is better than the well-known 99. 44/100's percent pure, but loss of a pension is tragic for the individuals affected and more stringent fiduciary standards for pension administrators might reduce pension plan failures even further.

However, it is hardly necessary to impose the specified vesting, funding, and plan termination insurance provisions which are now being proposed in the Congress. Not only would they be expensive to adopt and administer but they would impair most pension plans by making it more difficult to tailor such plans to the mutual needs of employees and the financial resources of their employers.

Big look at weather

The truth in Mark Twain's remark that everyone talks about the weather but no one does anything about has been steadily eroded in recent years. More and more is being done about the weather-about understanding it, predicting it; even about eventually exercising some control over it.

A new manifestation of this modern approach to weather is the forthcoming government project described as "the most intensive scientific investigation ever made over a large ocean area."

All this will be brought to bear on perplexing questions about how the mechanism of the sea-air interaction produces our weather. It is an example of concerted scientific inquiry which is sure to have practical effects of importance to all of us.

Viewpoint!

State booze

In Wisconsin recently I noticed that liquor stores were as common as drug stores. As in Illinois, New York, Florida and most other populous states, liquor is sold by independent merchants who are free to set their own prices. It's just another commodity, like Coke and cigarets. As a result, prices are about 15% cheaper than in Michigan and stores are seldom far away.

In Michigan, liquor is looked upon as a necessary evil - something to be licensed, restricted and handled as clinically and inconspicously as possible. When I go into a Michigan liquor store I feel a touch of guilt - like an addict going to a government hospital to get his withdrawal shot.

Despite Michigan's clinical approach to booze, consumption here is as high as in other states. By the strict licensing, we give monopolies to favored merchants. The taxpayer pays a higher price for his booze and drives further to buy it.

The fault lies not entirely with our Legislature. We worsen the problem in our home towns.

In Lapeer recently, our city commissioners first turned down Pay Less Drugstore for a package liquor license. Then they turned down the new Perry drugstore.

One commissioner said, "We have 2 liquor stores in town now. That's enough. It would be different if the store had been here for years and demonstrated its community spirit."

We have 1 state store that is not open evenings or on state holidays. We have 1 private store that admittedly has no trouble handling the business except at Christmas or New Years.

But why do we limit the business to these 2 stores? What's wrong with a 3rd and 4th store? Why do we give a free evening monopoly to 1 store -- a monopoly that is probably worth $20,000?

Why do we say a store must demonstrate its community spirit before it can sell liquor? The one private store we have recently changed and the new owner got his license the day he took over.

Just what is there about liquor that requires all this control? If we allow anyone to sell motorcycles and cigarets and contraceptives and dirty books, and almost anyone to sell beer, and anyone to rent motel rooms, just what is there about liquor that requires these special measures?

In this instance, the irony was twofold. Both drugstores really asked for beer licenses but city officials misunderstood. They voted against giving them a liquor license. Last week they learned that only beer licenses were wanted. So now it appears the city fathers will withdraw their objections.

Whenever we give government officials the power to license, we give them the power to make 1 man rich and to drive another out of business. We give them the power to tell us where we are going to buy and when we are going to buy it. Licensing is a huge and menacing power that should be used as little as possible.

The toll

by Cong. Phil Ruppe

This month in Sault Ste. Marie the nation's attention will be focused on the Tenth Anniversary celebration of the St. Lawrence Seaway. This is a good time for us to reflect upon how we can strengthen and develop this vital link in the nation's commerce.

A major hindrance to economic progress is the toll which must be paid by vessels using this great canal, which is the only waterway in North America which is not toll free. When American-Canadian toll discussions begin within the next two years, our attention should be focused on how to totally remove the tolls.

Recently, Herbert Doan, who is the General Chairman of the Governors' Committee, Tenth Anniversary, St. Lawrence Seaway, addressed the Economic Club of Detroit. Mr. Doan asked in that speech that

1) Efforts be made to lengthen the Seaway season beyond the present eight months,

2) The United States give "serious thought" to allocating funds to widen and deepen the Seaway,

3) The problem of freight rates discriminatory to the Seaway be resolved, and that

4) The St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation be permitted to advertise its product, "which is low-cost transportation."

I believe that Mr. Doan's suggestions should be supported by action in order to increase the commercial benefits of the vast area served by this important trade route.

Problems too much

As I type this, Willie Horton is back in leftfield for the Detroit Tigers and I am back at my typewriter, as any fool can plainly see.

Willie walked out in the middle of the 7th inning. I quit on a Tuesday morning, about half way through editing that week's issue of my favorite weekly newspaper.

I went home and into seclusion, locking the bathroom door behind me. My family stood outside and begged me to get back on the job.

"The publisher just called," my wife said. "He has suspended you without pay until you return. It is costing you $8.73 a day to sit in there."

"Walter Cronkite just said on TV that you quit because you couldn't stand all the insulting letters-to-the-editor," my daughter said. "Especially the one from your mother."

"Yeah," added my son, "and Joe Garagiola said you are unhappy here and want to be traded to the Detroit Free Press. He said you're mad because your publisher won't pay your bar bill at the country club."

"There's a little boy at the back door and he's crying," my wife said. "He says you've got to get back on the job or the newspaper just won't be the same. And he'll never get the $2.50 you owe him for cutting our lawn."

My assistant pounded on the door. "The newspaper is in terrible shape without you," he said. "I remembered that you don't use periods after Mr, Dr and Jr but I forgot how you get rid of all those unused periods. They are rolling all over the floor and people are tripping."

"All your close friends are on the front porch," my wife said. "They both said to tell you the whole town is behind you. Those people who spit at you and throw rocks at your car don't really mean it. It is just their way of saying they love you Jimmie way of saying they love you, Jimmie, and they know you can do better."

"Yeah," added my son, "just go back and write something decent for a change and things will be ok again."

A note was slipped under the bathroom door. It was from Professor Gilmartin who taught me everything I know about writing, who encouraged me to enter the newspaper game, and who has always given me wise advice when I've been troubled. I've always said that Professor Gilmartin has been like a father to me, even if she is a woman.

Unfortunately, I couldn't read Professor Gilmartin's writing. But I shall always treasure her note.

After 4 days, I went back to work. "I wasn't mad at my readers or my boss and I don't want to be traded. I love it here," I explained. "The pressure of personal problems simply got to be too much. But I feel fine now after 4 days in the bathroom, near my Right Guard and my Listerine and my Crest."

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

After the school election results were tallied and entered in the official election book last week, Dick Donaldson was credited with 1,220 votes in his successful bid for the School Board.

The day after the count, which lasted until 4 a.m. Tuesday by the way, it was discovered that Donaldson's vote had been "enlarged" by some 540 votes, from the actual total of 680.

The error caused some red faces, but nothing more, as the 680 tallies for Donaldson still ranked him as the top vote-getter of the five persons running for the Board.

As long as we're on the election topic, we must comment further.

Clem Wagner lost his bid for re-election by TWO votes. We can't help but feel that a capable man was not returned to his seat on the group.

Wagner is not the flamboyant, noisey person that some Board members are. Yet, whenever Wagner opened his mouth, considered, relevant words came forth.

The Board has lost a "thinking" man...a man who did not abstain from casting his vote on important issues as some Board members have done... one of the men on the Board whose judgment was respected.

We can think of others on that august body whose presence we would miss a good deal less.

MICHIGAN Chapter of Submarine Veterans, WW II, met in Charlevoix last weekend. Reunion was Climaxed with Memorial Service Sunday, at Memorial Bridge. Warren Stien of Ionia, state commander, delivered address at service. Wreath to the right was placed in water at end of ceremony, in memory "of those who are still on patrol".

City Council debates school sewer placement

Charlevoix city Council debated the problem of the sewer line to the new elementary school at its meeting Monday, but did not come up with a definite answer.

The difficulty stems from confusion over whether the line will be connected to the city system on Meech Street or Petoskey Avenue.

Originally, a Petoskey Avenue hook-up was planned, but platting uncertainties moved Council to change course and bring the sewer to Meech Street.

At Monday's session, the Petoskey Avenue connection was brought up again, but Council indicated they would not formally accept such a placement unless the location of the roadway and platting of property was approved.

In other business, Council heard Don Brown ask the city to improve the condition of tennis courts and backdrops at the Clinton Street courts.

Council directed City Superintendent Jim Taylor to contact the school district, owner of the courts, to see what improvements can be made.

Orville Sommerville and Cecil Richardson were named Belvedere Club police officers for the summer months at no pay.

The city fathers discussed the extension of Alice Street from Belvedere Avenue to the lake.

Referred to the superintendent's office were complaints of violations of the junk car ordinance. Council directed the superintendent to enforce the ordinance.

Tri-Cities Concrete of Charlevoix was awarded the contract for curb and gutter work with their low bid of $3.14 per foot.

Fire and ambulance contracts were signed with Hayes, Eveline and Norwood townships.

Bills totaling $31,251.60 were paid.

Beach hours announced

The City Recreation department will be opening the three public bathing beaches as soon as warm swimming weather dictates. They will be definitely opened on July 3, and could be opened earlier in late June if a warm spell should come.

Director Deano Davenport announced that Judy Sommerville will be at the Lake Michigan Beach daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Miss Sommerville is returning for her third season. Al Lusk will be at the Depot Beach for the second summer and will be on duty from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily except Sunday, when he'll start at noon.

Ron Eddy will be guarding at the Ferry Avenue beach daily from noon until 6 p.m. Miss Eddy is a Central Michigan College student and will be working in the program for college credit.

Camp Charlevoix opens Saturday

Camp Charlevoix, nationally-known boys' camp, will start its 44th season on Saturday when boys arrive from Florida, Kentucky, Iowa, California, Nevada, Kansas, New York, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, and Michigan.

Boys are also enrolled from Alaska, Santo Domingo, the Dominican Republic, and from Dakar, Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bingham, of Charlevoix, are back as business manager and bookkeeper, Harry for his 35th year. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Townsend, of Lynn, Indiana, are back; Bill as director of activities, for his 14th year. Mr. and Mrs. Dan Ross, of Cincinnati are back; Dan as assistant director of activities, for his 11th year.

Louis Warren, of Piqua, Ohio, is back as head cook for his tenth year. Rose Hilton, of Charlevoix, is back as assistant cook for her tenth year. Mrs. Shirley Gordon, of Dayton, Ohio, is back for her second year as the camp nurse.

Also in the staff are: R. Prbhakaran from Iodia; Luis Valenzula from Mexico; Merrill Stahell, from Utah; plus men from many colleges and universities all over the country.

Camp Charlevoix is owned and directed by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Smith of Grosse Pointe Woods, Michigan.

School program 'zapped' to balance new budget

By a unanimous vote, the Charlevoix School Board moved to officially cut the school program for the 1969-70 year at their meeting Monday.

In making the decision, the Board moved on the "mandate" issued by the voters April 7 and June 9.

On those dates, school district voters turned down millage proposals which would have allowed a full program next term.

The Board did leave the door open should the electorate ask for a third try at the polls. The directors approved Jarrold Redeker's proposal that an election be scheduled August 11, provided petitions signed by at least 1,000 registered district voters be presented to the Board by July 15.

The Board stressed that the third election, if it is held, would again call for 3.75 mills for operational expenses and one mill for instructional materials.

The only portion of the austerity program to possibly escape the hatchett was remedial reading.

A petition with over 300 signatures asked the Board to leave the program intact next year. The directors agreed to consider the request.

P.T.A. president Fred Payne presented the request, citing figures from the Mental Health Clinic which indicated that four pupils from each elementary class were in definite need of the service.

In another money move, the Board approved a proposal that will have students rent books.

Total cost to students is yet to be finalized, but it appears to be approximately $5 in grades one through four, and $7 from grade five up.

This move will raise between $7,500 and $9,000 per year.

After the Board intimated that only two schools will be operated next year, the question was raised about three principals.

Glenn Kenney, Board president, said that all three would hold positions in the system next year, with one of them most likely filling Del Terrill's now-defunct administrative assistant role.

Charles England, who will assume a Board seat July 1, came up with another money-saving idea. He proposed that Board members forego their $150 per year salary.

In the only other action, the Board opened bids on the 1969 Pontiac station wagon owned by the district.

Successful bidder was Dean Boss of Jackson, who purchased the auto for $2,906.53.

Kusina Motors of Charlevoix submitted a bid of $2,700. The Board purchased the vehicle last year for $3,105.

Monday's meeting marked the final session for Board president Kenney and member Clem Wagner. In addition to England, Richard Donaldson will join the group July 1.

DNR to unveil fishery plans

Michigan's Department of Natural Resources will offer members of the Upper Intermediate Chain of Lakes Association plans for a better fishery for the lakes.

The plan will be discussed at the annual meeting of the group in the Ellsworth Community Hall, July 22.

According to officials of the association, the plan includes a chemical fish kill late this fall at Six Mile Lake, the building and maintaining of a pike spawning marsh to supply the entire upper chain of lakes, and plantings of trout or splake and bass to create sport fishing until the pike and bass are of legal size.

"All concerned people will have the opportunity to ask DNR representatives questions about the program," an association spokesman said. "Our board of directors has researched this matter thoroughly, and we believe it is the very best way to achieve one of the best sport fisheries in Michigan," he added.

A member of the board stated, "Our lakes have been surveyed by the DNR and have been found to be much out of balance and some species stunted. We have clean water....we need a good fishery. It will take time, but our association will put forth every effort to cause this program to produce the desired result."

During their board meeting last week, a report was heard concerning an adequate bridge to replace the tube in the St. Clair River, located in Ellsworth. Among the officials present were George Taack, DNR; and representatives of the State Attorney General's office, Ellsworth Village Council members, and others from DNR.

Taack advised Council members that considerable time had elapsed since their first meeting on the problem in 1963, and DNR felt that the village should now be able to build a bridge to take care of both water and highway traffic.

Taack also said that Council's responsibility was "evident and action on their part should be implemented at once."

The Attorney General's office concurred with DNR officials, and asked Council to start work on plans immediately and make a decision at their next meeting.

It was also called to Council's attention that the village is responsible and could possibly be held liable in case of accident resulting from the structure and placement of the tube. "Under new legislation, governmental units do not enjoy the impunity they once did," the spokesman said.

Association officials feel an adequate bridge would restore the chain of lakes to its former beauty and desirability, as well as create new business and raise property values.

CHARLES Cleland of Michigan State University joins in the work of excavating pre-historic Indian village along Lake Charlevoix's shore.

MSU troop uncovers ancient Indian village

"The diggin's fine, but slow", says Charles Cleland, who is heading a group of archeologists who are excavating a pre-historic Indian settlement on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Cleland, an associate professor of anthropology at Michigan State University, and curator of anthropology at the MSU Museum, brought six undergrads and graduate students to the North for a ten-week project in Charlevoix County.

A visit to the diggings this week found the group with two prime sights already excavated. One of the "holes" had proven discouraging, with the only artifacts found a few pieces of flint, shaped to points.

The other sight, however, has disclosed numerous pieces of pottery, flint arrowheads, and other artifacts.

"We probably will leave this sight around July 4," Cleland stated, "and move to another spot in the county, but not on Lake Michigan."

Both areas of excavation are not being pinpointed by Cleland and his crew. Though the group has no desire to hide anything from interested persons, observers may accidently injure the diggings by knocking down excavation sides, and occassionally wander off with artifacts important to the project.

"You can say that we are south of the city along the lake," Cleland told the Courier.

MSU sent the group to the county following a "scouting" trip last summer. At that time, material on the surface indicated the habitation. According to Cleland, indications are that the village was probably inhabited 1,000 years ago.

Progress on such a project is slow and meticulous. The first step, after deciding where to dig, is a careful removal of earth to a level where it is thought that artifacts will be present.

Then with trowels, soft brushes and sifters, the real work begins. Small quantities of earth are removed by hand and put through the sifter. What remains is brushed and cleaned. It may be a useless rock or root, or, hopefully, a piece of pottery or flint in the shape of an arrowhead or hide scraper.

After being labeled and bagged, the artifacts will be studied at MSU and used to document the history of the Indian in Michigan 1,000 years ago.

The second portion of the ten-week project will take place in the Walloon Lake area.

The annual Jordan Valley Festival will feature three days of fun, games and activities. Above, Hillbilly Haven, a traditional "laugh" event, always draws a large crowd. Festival will be held in East Jordan over July 4 weekend.

East Jordan Festival is billed "bigger and better"

This year's Jordan Valley Festival is being heralded as the "biggest and best" ever by pageant officials.

Scheduled over the July 4 holiday, activities will fill three full days, commencing Friday morning, July 4, with "Kids Day," and conclude Sunday with boat races and tentative parachute jumping.

Joe Wilkins, chairman of the festival, says this is his last year in the director's position, and he wants to "go out" with a weekend to remember.

Highlight of the three-day event will be the parade at 4 p.m., Saturday. "Everybody in the county should see this parade, as it will be the most outstanding line of march that has ever hit the streets in the area," Wilkins said.

All youngsters are eligible to help open the festival with the Kiddies Parade, Friday at 10 a.m. Theme of the parade is "The Comic Strip Character." Forming at Main and Williams Street, the youngsters will prance through the city.

Immediately following the opening event, there will be a greased pig contest and a greased pole event.

Children will also be featured in the afternoon with a Soap Box Derby on Division Street at 1:30 p.m., and a Little League baseball game at West Side Park Friday evening.

According to the schedule published by the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce, the first day's events will be concluded with an evening boat parade on the harbor.

"Saturday is THE big day," Wilkins said, noting that the action begins at noon with the annual snowmobile drag races at the club house on Old M66, one mile south of the city. Foregoing snow or ice, the snowmobilers will ramrod their machines over the sod and dirt, racing for the checkered flag.

East Jordan's Rotary Club will be on hand to feed the throng with an old fashioned barbecue.

Chairman Wilkins also went overboard on baton twirlers and majorettes, with the result that the parade Saturday will feature about 300 marching twirlers.

Other parade features are the Clown Band from Lansing, many floats and a Scottish Bag Pipe band.

"Smokey the Bear will be on hand to tell everyone about fire safety," Wilkins added.

"In addition, the Devil from Hell, Michigan, and his court will also be here, as well as much more," the chairman noted.

Boat races in the harbor are the highlight of the final day's events. Beginning at 2 p.m., over 50 boats will be entered, with approximately ten races of three heats each, or four hours of racing.

As usual, the firemen will sponsor their carnival all three days at the West Side show grounds.

Swim, golf deadline set by Rec Dept.

The City recreation department's summer swimming and golf instructional programs have set their signup deadline for tomorrow, June 26. The official enrollment blank appeared in last week's Courier. Parents wishing to enroll their youngsters or themselves in either program can do so by contacting the City Hall.

There will be a class for every swimming level from five year's of age on up. Classes will be 30 minutes in length and nearly all will be meeting three times weekly until early August. The popular Red Cross approved program had over 200 enrolled last year.

Classes are planned for the beginner, advanced beginner, intermediate, and swimmer. In addition, if enough interest merits, classes will be given for Junior and Senior life saving and adult beginning swimming. In announcing the classes, recreation director Deano Davenport, said, "We are fortunate to have Al Lusk returning to head up the program as water front director. And we anticipate another large group of swimmers to take advantage of the free lessons." Tom Webb will assist in the program.

The golf instruction program will meet for 45 minutes four times weekly for a three week period with emphasis placed on the proper grip, stance, and swing. Rules and etiquette will be stressed also. As in the past, two levels will be taught with a class for youngsters and adults scheduled.

Those signing up for the programs will be contacted as to the time and days they are to come.

VASCAR, the new computer "clocking" system put into use this month by State Police, takes up little room in cruiser, with great effectiveness.

Speeders beware! Police 'clock' with computer

Michigan State Police patrol troopers in the seventh district at the Petoskey Post began to strengthen their speed law enforcement with use of an electronic computer (VASCAR) last week, Sgt. Vaughn Blake, post commander, told the Courier today.

The district includes the post areas of Traverse City, Cheboygan, Gaylord, Alpena, Houghton Lake, Cadillac, Manistee and Petoskey. Other districts are already using the computer in actual speed gauging.

Twenty troopers from these posts have been trained in the use of the computer and have been certified as qualified operators of VASCAR (abbreviation for "visual average speed computer and recorder"). The training and certifying were done by district traffic safety officers who first were schooled and qualified by VASCAR company officials.

The department began training about 200 officers in the use of VASCAR in April and expects to be using the computers in enforcement statewide by July. Prior to enforcement the State Police are orienting judges and prosecutors and other concerned officials in this speed checking technique.

The State Police, with the aid of a federal grant of $85,000, have purchased 100 VASCAR units to provide for one or more of the computers for each of the department's 59 posts. They are installed in both regular and semi-marked patrol cars.

VASCAR is a small, two-part instrument which is mounted on the dash of a patrol car. One component is called the digital display module. It provides an instant digital read-out of the calculated speed of a motorist and is reported to be extremely accurate.

The other component, called the control module, enables the officer to enter the factors of time and distance into the computer which then determines the average speed electronically. It is reported in use in more than 30 states.

Versatility of VASCAR allows an officer operator to "clock" a vehicle regardless of its direction or speed in any kind of weather, day or night, and whether the patrol car is parked or cruising.

The officer by means of the control module's on and off switches enters the time factor as a target vehicle traverses a selected distance. Then the officer, again using on-off switches, enters the distance factor as he drives his patrol car over the selected distance. The computer then will give the digital read-out of the target car's average speed. The distance factor also may be "locked" into the computer prior to the timing of a suspected speeder.

This week should be the decisive one for the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company and their striking union the Utility Workers Council of America.

In locals all over the State of Michigan strikers are voting on whether or not to accept the contract proposed by the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company last week. By next Sunday the last of the locals should have voted.

Library Notes

Last week the Library offered a suggested list of sober, thought-provoking books. This week, looking at the brighter side of the bookshelves, we suggest some smiling and amusing reading for summertime pleasure.

The list of chuckling literature begins with "Nuts in May" by Conelia Otis Skinner, one of the all-time delightful books. If you enjoyed it the first time, you will enjoy it just as much the second time. If you have never read it before, you have missed a lot of fun.

"Wheels In His Head" by M. M. Musselman deals with father and his Inventions. There is a chuckle on every page.

Jean Kerr is famous for bringing good, rib-tickling humor to all her many fans. "The Snake Has All the Lines" is simply another good book by her. It is, some say, even funnier than "Please Don't Eat the Daisies".

"Grandma Called It Carnal" by Bertha Damon is written in the first person. It first appeared in 1938, and it is still as funny as it was the first day it was published.

"Yma, Ava; Yma, abba; Yma, Oona; Yma, ida; Yma, Aga. . . and others" is a slim volume of collected paradies written by Thomas Meehan. It deals with such important matters as the great Kansas City Fig-Newton walkout and the sensational success of the No Book-of-the-Month Club. Now in it's ninth edition in ten years, it's still one of the most entertaining books around.

"Snips and Snails" by Louise Baker is recommended because it is such good fun. A very lighly, happy book.

"Lost In The Horse Latitudes" by H. Allen Smith, needs no introduction. It is included in this list as a reminder to patrons that another session with this awfully funny book is rewarding.

Europe Without George" by Irene Kampen is a light-hearted treatist about travel for females without escorts. It is very very funny and is interesting whether or not you intend to travel to Europe, with or without an escort.

"Life With Father," by Clarence Day, remains on the library shelves for obvious reasons. It is one of the great classics and it deserves being re-read by old friends every so often.

Max Shulman's "Guided Tour of Campus Humor" is a collection of the best stories, articles, jokes, poems and nonsense from sixty-five college magazines. It contains a hilarious mixture of sometimes silly, sometimes sophisticated, sometimes rowdy but always funny campus humor. It is a big funny book which will appeal not only to young people but to the oldtimers who remember what it was like around the campus.

For the youngsters, we suggest "Hailstones and Halibut Bones", by Mary O'Neill. The book is as delightful as its title and is charmingly illustrated.

Miss Pickerell Goes to Mars" is a timely adventure about a little old lady who met up with quite a surprise when she led her cow out to pasture one day.

"The Wonderful World of J. Westley Smith" is a slim paperbook of cartoons. One of the best of which shows two Roman senators looking over an ancient scroll. One of the senators says: "I never could lick these Roman numerals. How much is XXVI plus CLXXIV?"

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER
CHAMBER MANAGER

Well, here we are again, well on the way into the season and before you know it, it will be gone.

The Submarine Vets convention, for which Ben Gill made arrangements to have here at Charlevoix, have come and gone after an enjoyable get together. A number of these guys and dolls were never here before and I understand were very much impressed, who knows but what some of them will get the habit.

This meeting is followed by the Michigan Amateur Golfer's Association Tournament that is now in full swing. And don't overlook the next event, which will be the first annual, the Lakeside Hobbycraft Show, scheduled here in the parkway at harborside downtown July 12. You interested citizens toss the idea around, and far and wide over the fence, give us a little assistance, if you will please. This affair has quite a potential and the committee and this office are working hard to have this event become well established.

Having to do with the Waterfront Art Fair (new name starting this year), plans are well on the way, also. The applications are reasonably steady coming in, and it appears the committee will have another worth while show. This event does very much good for the community. As most of you know, it is scheduled for Saturday, August 9, and is the 11th annual.

Plans for the Annual Venetian Festival, July 26 and 27 are slowly developing.

Do not forget the third annual Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Color Cruise aboard MS Beaver Islander, Sunday, October 12. This event is designed for one's pleasure as well as a much needed fund raiser.

Speaking of funds, we are somewhat behind in receiving membership contributions or other contributions, extending a bit too long to be comfortable. Apparently, we will have to do one thing or another to stimulate the situation. Do not overlook the fact that a needed Chamber of Commerce depends on the community, and the community depends on the chamber, and it takes personal effort and dollars to bring about what is expected.

I have available here at the office something of interest, at least, I found it so, from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, at Washington D. C., and they are copies of a certain economy chart brought about by Mr. Carl H. Madden, Chief Economist of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

It shows the Federal Budget Dollar: The story of $190 Billion, and The Corporate Dollar: How Investors and Employees Share, More than one third of U.S. workers are women; Share of Gross National Product (All government expenditures, domestic, non-defense expenditures), and little articles on "What Your Federal Tax Dollar Buys", "What Happens to The Corporate Dollar," "Are We Spending Enough For Public Needs?", and "Woman's Place No Longer In Home?" Stop by this office if you are interested.

This season so far more than before since I have had this appointment, we are receiving contacts for American Plan premises in our area. Accordingly, if any of you know where any such facilities are tucked away, as I do not, please report to this office. Thanks.

The next regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, as usual, the first Tuesday of each month, is July 1, here at this office.

Phone for job notes

The Detroit office of the Michigan Civil Service Commission installed a unique telephone recruiting service dubbed the civil service "job hotline" for state residents today.

The "dial-a-job" number (area code 313, 964-4359) will deliver a one and a half minute recorded resume of positions where state agencies are seeking recruits. The caller will then be given a chance to state his name and address to receive applications for examination in which he indicated an interest by return mail.

State Personnel Director Franklin K. DeWald said the use of the telephone recording device was adopted in Lansing last year as a result of a suggestion submitted by an employee in the state's suggestion award program.

"The Lansing job 'hotline' has averaged 100 applications weekly, including some long distance calls," he said, "and it's available on a day or night basis."

About one-fourth of the State's 45,000 jobs are located in the Detroit Metropolitan Area, according to State Personnel Director Franklin K. DeWald.

Jobs listed on the first hotline recording this week will include institution worker, attendant nurse, prison guard, housemother, and boys' supervisor as well as clerical and stenographic positions.

Two thousand Michigan firms engage in world trade.

Rising crime topic of rural groups

Crime in the United States has risen 90 percent during the same period of time in which our population has increased by only ten percent! A Michigan Congressman states that a criminal has 94 percent chance of "beating the rap every time he strikes" and our courts appear so overly-concerned with the rights of the accused that few consider the rights of the victim.

Still, State Corrections Department director Gus Harrison reports that Michigan prisons are now almost filled to capacity even as the department experts a net increase over last year's commitment of 3,600 persons to the state's prison system.

It is not surprising that the rising tide of criminal activity has caused a greatly stiffening public attitude toward law enforcement. One result is the increasing attention which even farmers and farm leaders are paying to the problems of crime--although most rural areas are less involved than city centers. Still, farm areas are not immune, with an increasing number of rural crimes noted--ranging from rustling to rape.

"Law and Order" is the July Discussion Topic for rural Michigan, under the leadership of 1,100 Community Farm Bureau Groups. The discussion groups have been cautioned that enforcement is only part of the picture, and a negative part at that -- with "crime-proofing" through prevention providing the positive side.

Best crime preventers in rural areas appear to be 4-H Clubwork and the work of FFA and FHA (Future Farmers, Future Homemakers) -- Farm Bureau Young Farmer programs, and similar activities which provide constructive outlets and recognition.

In City areas, Boy and Girl Scouts, YWCA and YMCA, the work of Big Brothers and Big Sisters, and Foster Parents programs provide similar stability.

Lt. Don Luedke, president of Charlevoix County Big Brothers, chats with Don Kowbel, area's Number 1 Big Brother, and William Peck, president of local Community Chest. The new organization was recently accepted as a member of Charlevoix Community Chest.

FACTS ON ARTHRITIS--The doctor aids the false promoter when he tells a patient there isn't anything that can be done about arthritis, Jerry Walsh (holding booklet), told doctors in Petoskey recently, at the monthly meeting of the Northern Michigan Medical Society. At his right are Dr. Robert Martin, Charlevoix, NMMS president and Dr. Victor Tsalof, program chairman. Urging persons to write Arthritis, Petoskey, Michigan for free facts on Arthritis, a disease which strikes young and old alike, is Rick Smith (left), Arthritis Foundation Area Director. Walsh is Director of Special Services for the National Arthritis Foundation, New York City, N.Y., and was recognized in 1963 by President Johnson as "Handicapped American of the Year." He now travels more than 100,000 miles each year to promote the conquest of America's Number one Crippler, arthritis.

Pat's Reaction

Here comes the bride

By Pat Begrow

Now that June that month of marriage is here, it's time that someone with authority made a few discerning remarks on the subject, but since no one knowledgeable seems about to do so, I will.

The first step is to find someone to marry but all people don't go about this in the same manner. Some girls put the cart before the horse and invest in a hope chest before they have any real reason to hope. Then to make matters worse they talk about it.

This talking about it is fatal, for although most girls consider every new man in their life as a prespective husband, most young men do not consider themselves as such. On the contrary, single men imagine themselves as perennial gay bachelors escorting one beautiful girl after another so to say "hope chest" to these men scares them off.

Actually looking back it seems to me that all of my lighthearted friends who spent their money on clothes and skis and not on pots, pans and linen sheets were the ones whom men were anxious to marry. I know that it doesn't seem reasonable, but that's the way it was. Who said life's fair?

Many girls get married when they're seventeen or eighteen and I always wonder how they do it. Frankly I didn't get married until I was 23 because nobody would have me. I didn't have a hope chest for I was too realistic to suppose that someone would agree to support a wife who couldn't cook and had never even babysat. If that isn't a loosing proposition I don't know what is.

At 23 I really didn't feel like an old maid, but Jack and I had been on-and-off type friends for five years, so when he decided to plunge headlong into marriage I agreed to take a chance.

Speaking for myself I've been happy these 15 years, but just this month my husband surprised me with a gift subscription to Good Housekeeping Magazine. Do you suppose that after all these years he's trying to tell me something?

I went to the University of Michigan where there is no school of home economies for that sort of practical thing is frowned on, but I'm forced to admit that the smart girls go to Michigan State.

My friend Barbara went to MSU and after four years earned a degree in home economics. Then she proceeded to get married and have children just like I did. She had her children bing, bing, bing. I had my children bing, bing, bing, bing, bing and bing. We both ran around fixing formula, changing diapers and wiping noses from morning to night. That is one of us did, for smart Barbara analyzed the situation; realized that she couldn't do it all; and threw up her hands.

"I quit. Find someone to help me," she declared to her husband.

And the good guy did. He worked day and night moonlighting to get help for Barbara five days a week so she could relax and look beautiful.

I have to hand it to her for she does look beautiful, whereas he is still running from job to job with his tongue hanging out. Nevertheless he adores her. Now if that isn't smart I don't know what is. Home Ec at MSU really taught that girl something.

My friend Margo Levin told me that a smart girl will either marry a Jewish man or a maharaja. Unfortunately I was already married by the time that she gave me this tidbit of advice, but I believe her, for all the Jewish men that I know treat their wives like queens. They sincerely want their wives to spend their time making themselves intelligent and beautiful. It seems to me that this is a much smarter approach than keeping another woman or going through an expensive divorce. It's easier on the bank account and on the conscience. So if there are any of you girls reading this column who are in the marriage market, you'd better start looking around, for both Jewish men and maharajas are at a premium in this area.

Community Chest sets $17,914 goal

A goal of $17,914 has been set in Charlevoix's upcoming Community Chest campaign this fall, Mrs. Donald Anders, executive secretary, has announced.

Mrs. Anders said the figure was reached last Thursday at the conclusion of a four-hour budget and admissions meeting of the Chest's board of directors at which representatives of local agencies appealed for funds.

Actually, $18,414 has been earmarked for the 12 local agencies and the Michigan United Fund, plus $1,000 for campaign and administrative expenses, using a surplus of about $1,500 in the present budget.

Among the local agencies, the Scenic Trails Council (Boy Scouts) will receive the largest amount, $2,200, the same as last year. The council had asked for $2,530.

Charlevoix Community Nurses General Fund will receive $2,000 and the nurses emergency fund $200. Also earmarked for $2,000 is Charlevoix Hospital. The nurse funds are the same as requested, although the hospital contribution is considerably below its request for $3,900.

Other four figure beneficiaries are Crooked Tree Council (Girl Scouts) $1,800; Michigan Children's Aid, North West Branch, $1,800; Charlevoix Association for Retarded Children, $1,500; and the City Recreation Program, $1,200.

The Salvation Army will receive $700; Charlevoix Big Brothers, a new agency, $500; Mt. McSauba Recreation program, $750; American Red Cross, $450; and the Charlevoix Service Organization, $300.

The $3,014 earmarked for Michigan United will be shared by 18 state and 18 national agencies, such as the Heart Fund, the Arthritis Foundation and the National Council on Alcoholism.

Tiger Tales

Denny McLain, who is a professional organist in the off-season, has played some sweet tunes on the mound for the Tigers.

At 22, he took his place among the Tigers' all-time pitching leaders by winning 20 games, the club's first 20-game winner in five years. That was in 1966, when the young righthander was 13-4 midway through the season and pitched three perfect innings as the startor in the All-Star game.

After a 17-16 year in 1967, when he missed most of the stretch run with injuries, Denny wrote himself into the record books for all time in 1968.

The chunky righthander, virtually invincible on the hill, posted a fantastic 31-6 record with a career low 1.96 ERA. He became the first hurler to win 30 since Dizzy Dean did it in 1934 and the first in the American League since Lefty Grove in 1931. He set Tiger club records for strikeouts (280) and victories, won the Cy Young Award, was chosen the Most Valuable Player in the American League (both unanimously), and was voted Tiger of the Year by the Detroit baseball writers for the second time.

Denny defeated every team at home and on the road in his fabulous year. He started 41 games, completed 28 and had an unbelievable 17-2 record on the road. At 24, he was a national celebrity with lucrative off-season appearances as an organist, his first record album, and several network television variety show appearances.

McLain was the first pitcher in either league to be a unanimous MVP selection. The only other major leaguers to be unanimous MVPs were Hank Greenberg, Al Rosen, Mickey Mantle, Frank Robinson and Orlando Cepeda -- pretty good company for the young Tiger hurler.

From the outset of his career McLain was destined for greatness. He was only 19 when he pitched his first major league game. On Sept. 21, 1963 he started for the Tigers, struck out eight, hit a home run and went all the way to defeat the White Sox, 4-3. That established him as a big league hurler and star of the future.

After two seasons of bullpen work, Denny began to realize his potential in 1965 when he became a Tiger starter midway through the year and had a 16-6 record, second highest percentage in the loop; a 2.62 ERA, low for the staff and seventh lowest in the circuit 192 strikeouts, third highest in the league; and 13 complete games, the AL's fourth highest figure.

McLain was strictly a fireballer when he reported to the Tigers. The first thing Chuck Dressen, then the Tiger manager, did was show Denny how to throw a curve. All through a brilliant prep career at Chicago's Mt. Carmel High School and parts of two seasons in the minor leagues he had used a fast ball exclusively, but not without excellent results.

He pitched a no-hitter in his first professional start with Harlan in the Appalachian League, then had a 13-2 record with Duluth and 5-4 log with Knoxville the next year before being called up to Detroit.

The Tigers obtained McLain when the White Sox, who had signed him, were caught in a roster squeeze prior to the 1963 season. The Tigers grabbed Denny, who had been placed on first-year waivers, for only $8,000 -- an incredible bargoin.

Denny married Sharyn Boudreau, daughter of former major league shortstop and manager Lou Boudreau in 1963, and the McLains now live in Beverly Hills, Mich., with their two children.

Despite weather obsticals the City softball league got off to a flying start. The Fastball Tip-off tournament was won by Ellsworth, and indications are that the city championship race will be a tight one.

There are only four teams in the league this year, but indications are that they are the best four teams in a long time. Last year there were seven teams, but only two were of championship material. This year any one of the four entries could cop the title.

Ellsworth kicked off the two-day tournament squeeking by defending champion, American Mold 3-2, in eight innings. Veteran pitcher Bob Klooster walloped a long home run for the margin of victory. Mold had rallied for two seventh inning runs to tie 2-2, before the home run ended it.

Medusa, behind the one hit pitching of Sonny Wright sent County State Bank into the consolation bracket with a 10-0 whitewash job. Tom Webb banged out three Medusa hits, and teammate Ike Boss chipped in with a three-run homer.

In the tournament finals, Medusa and Ellsworth hooked up in a tight affair with Ellsworth hanging on for a 4-3 win. Medusa struck first for two biggies when Steve Faculak homered. Klooster got one back with one swing of the bat in Ellsworth's first. Wright's throwing error netted the winners two more runs in the second. Medusa battled back for a tie in the fifth, when Ralph Doan and Bill Marme both singled around an infield out. The winning marker scored when Dave Drenth doubled over the center fielder's head and then scored on a wild pitch and passed ball.

County State Bank proved they will be a contender when the edged Mold 8-7 in the Consulation game. The Bank Boys rallied for two runs in the seventh when Ed Homs singled, and Larry Edwards doubled around a walk. Mold had a brief uprising themselves when Herb Boss and Jim Alger combined singles with Des Milligan's double. The final out left the Mold one run short.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Novaks served noticed that they are ready to pick up where they left off last year. They won the works last season and had little trouble with Freedmans, winning 19-4. Craig Lieberman, Jim Warner, and Norm Ostrum banged out two hits each to lead the winners.

PEANUT LEAGUE

The Peanut League openers provided fans with exciting softball as the Tigers upended the Lions 6-5, and the defending champions Cardinals beat the Braves 3-1.

In the Tiger victory, a four run fourth inning turned the trick. Singles by Baldwin, Green, Marsh and Plum did the damage. The Lions rallied with Tom and Don Mort's singles producing one fifth inning run and Oliver and Alger's base knocks adding another in the seventh.

The Cards Jim Potter proved too much for the Braves. He allowed only three hits and then doubled home two first inning runs to be a thorn in the side of the Braves all night. Dave Boss collected two hits for the losers.

THIS AND THAT.......Cool weather has made it tougher for fans to sit outside their cars to view the action. However good crowds have attended all games so far.......A new slow pitch league will swing into action with four teams entered.....The popular Blooper league will have four entries at last count with Medicine Chest, Boyne City, American Mold, and Freedmans rounding out the group group.....Ellsworth's Mike Lord has made the catch of the year with a brilliant one hand running stab of a hand smash robbing Harv Cole of a hit....Bob Klooster with his new aluminum bat has two homers in two games....Somenne has taken a similar bat from Medusa and a reward will be given for information leading to its recovery....Excellent chance for Charlevoix to have the State Women's District softball tournament here in August. At least eight teams would appeer......Anyone know where we can get another set of bleachers??? No games on Saturday....That day is planned to be used for rained out games......

Miss Sally Lynn Jerrils

Miss Jerrils engaged to Thomas G. Maxwell

Mr. and Mrs. Dorr Jerrils of 2012 Elmer Drive, N.E., Grand Rapids, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sally Lynn Jerrils of Grand Rapids, to Airman Thomas G. Maxwell, See Road North, Charlevoix. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Maxwell of Charlevoix.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Forest Hills High School, Grand Rapids, and plans to attend Grand Rapids Junior College this fall. Her fiance is a graduate of Charlevoix High School, attended Davenport College, Grand Rapids, and presently stationed in Turkey with the Air Force.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Local farmers need storage

The best place to store and dry crops next fall is on the farm. Charlevoix area farmers needing additional storage space this fall should be making arrangements for it now. Nick Smith, chairman of the Michigan State ASC committee, stated that local ASCS county offices can make low interest loans to wheat, bean and feed grain producers for the purchase of on-the-farm storage and drying equipment.

At the present time it appears that most of the approved farm storage space is filled with 1968 crops. Local farmers' intentions to extend their loans on these crops indicate that they will be in need of additional storage space for their 1969 wheat, bean, corn, oats and soybean production.

Farmers with on-the-farm storage space and drying equipment will be in the position to condition and store their crops at harvest time and will not be dependent on others.

Local ASCS county offices are able to assist grain producers in obtaining these law interest loans which are repayable in four equal installments over a period of five years.

Local Scouts at jamborette

Charlevoix Boy Scouts from Troop 11 went to Preston, Ontario in Canada this past weekend for a three day International Jamborette.

American boys from Charlevoix and Petoskey set up camp along with about 80 Canadian Boy Scouts. Although the temperature dropped to 34 degrees, undaunted the boys shared with their fellow scouts in campfires, scary movies, swimming races, camping skill competitions and a huge Boy Scout parade through the city streets of Preston.

For overall Boy Scout skills, the Charlevoix troop won a third place award and the Petoskey troop won the first place award.

Special ribbons went to Alan Avery for taking second place in the swimming competition for 14 year olds, and to Chris Begrow for taking second place in the swimming competition for 11-year-olds.

Preston, Ontario, is near Toronto and about 400 miles from Charlevoix. Louis Edwards, Scoutmaster of Troop 11, drove a group of boys to Preston as did Edward Buday, father of a scout.

The 16 Charlevoix boys who went on the outing were Ed Buday, Chris Begrow, Tom Avery, Robert Sandahl, Mike Kane, Alan Avery, Lindy Allison, Terry Mol, Rnnald Winchester, Jeff Himebauch, Walter Kroush, Chris Avery, Gerry Sandahl, Dan Greene, Heath Patrie and Mark Hosmer.

On Sunday night the Charlevoix boys spent the night in the homes of the Preston scouts.

Taylor earns M.T.U. degree

Maurice M. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Taylor, Main Street, Ellsworth, recently received his B.S. degree in mechanical engineering at Michigan Technological University in Houghton.

Over 570 students were awarded degrees during the annual spring commencement ceremonies June 14.

CHARLEVOIX was visited by a group of vintage autos last Friday, as Traverse City's antique auto club traveled to Tahquamenon Falls.

BOY SCOUTS from Charlevoix pose before leaving for Preston, Ontario, for Jamborette.

Dixon Street

City Council is facing the growing traffic problem on Dixon Street. The $64 question is what to do with all the traffic on the street from September to June.

US COAST GUARD
ONE WAY

A problem with increased traffic during the summer months has been alleviated by making Dixon Street one way, eastbound, from the middle of June until after Labor Day.

But, in the past several years, the street has become overloaded with autos the rest of the year, too.

Though the city fathers have made no final decision, they have considered making the thoroughfare one way year 'round, and have also discussed allowing parking on only one side of the street.

It might well be worthwhile to restrict parking to one side of the street. Such a move might permit an east - and westbound flow of traffic all year, thus removing the confusion that always follows in the first few weeks each summer when the street becomes eastbound only.

Admittedly, this is not the biggest problem Council has ever encountered. But, traffic congestion is a problem all communities are finding more and more pressing. Solving small problems now will avoid much larger difficulties a few years hence.

The music man

by Pat Begrow

Clarence Odmark is faced with a serious problem that concerns the entire community of Charlevoix. Unless more musicians in the community will volunteer to play in the Charlevoix City Band, it will cease to exist and the venerable history of summer concerts in East Park will come to an end.

These summer concerts have been a hallmark of the Charlevoix summer season for 40 years. In any articles written about Charlevoix as a resort area it is inevitable that the summer concerts are praised as an outstanding attraction and a singular musical event in northern Michigan. Now that Cheboygan has discontinued its summer band concerts, Charlevoix is the only northern Michigan community that sponsors a city band and old fashioned band concerts in the park.

The city pays for the salary of the conductor, for repairs to equipment and for the custodial service of setting up and tearing down the props each week. But this is surely a small part of the band for its heart is the 40 or 45 people who compose the band and who play for the sheer joy of making music.

More of these people are desperately needed...so if there are any newcomers in Charlevoix who play an instrument, or any oldtimers who have let their interest in music lag, the cry is out to attend the next Monday evening practice session of the band which is held regularly in the band room at the high school at 7:30.

The Music Man emphasizes that there are no scary auditions in front of a grim jury, but just a joining with a group of citizens who like to make music for their community. After 40 years it would be shameful to let this fine old tradition of music drop, so if you play a band instrument tune up and fall into step behind The Music Man.

Detroit a state?

A highly intelligent and imaginative candidate for the mayor of New York City, Norman Mailer, has suggested that New York City become the nation's 51st state.

What may appear to be an outrageous proposition might be something all big cities should promote.

Why, for instance, shouldn't Detroit or possibly Wayne County ask for statehood? The area has more population than two-thirds of our states. No longer would it have to worry about the rural and suburban legislators in Lansing failing to understand its problems. No longer would outstate Michigan have to worry about the "Detroit voters running the state."

Detroit could keep its own taxes and not worry about sharing through Lansing. It could built it own streets, control its own port, charge taxes against outsiders as it so desired.

There'd be weapons for the State of Michigan against the new State of Detroit. Michigan could sit up here with its lakes and streams charging non-resident hunting and fishing fees to the millions in Detroit as it does to those in Ohio and Indiana. Michigan might even charge Detroit for crossing its land with water transmission lines, remembering, of course, that Detroit might shut off the filtered water it now provides for much of Southeastern Michigan.

Sound silly? Frankly, it sounds scary. But, as the New York Times' Russell Baker points out, it is at least an idea.

It's an idea we would explore if we were running a big city. And it is an idea that could be the only answer to our problems if the petty, provincial politicians in our statehouses...and the equally petty and provincial voters who put them there...don't start looking at the broader problems and for broader solutions.

Should it not be possible for Detroit to understand outstate problems and for outstate to understand Detroit's, creating a State of Detroit may be the only answer.

As least, as Baker pointed out, it is an idea.

Abortion Law

By Hank Hogan

The state senate is now considering a bill that would liberalize our abortion laws.

If passed by both houses it would allow legalized abortions in certain cases when a pregnancy threatens the physical or mental health of the mother, when the infant may be born with a physical deformity or a mental deficiency, or if the pregnancy is the result of rape or incest.

There is also another bill that is sitting inactively on the table that would permit abortions for any reason, including family planning.

There has been a ground swell in this country for this type of social legislation for several years which is probably motivated by good intentions, but, let's face it, it legalizes the killing of a living being.

FROM PAST history, where this type of legislation is law as in Sweden or Japan, its main use becomes the termination of unwanted pregnancies.

To advocate the solving of the problems of the population explosion by education in family planning does not involve the tinkering with human life.

Abortion does.

If a woman becomes pregnant because of some mistake on her part or if there is fear the baby may be born deformed, that baby has as much a right to live as we who are perfect specimens.

IF THIS TYPE of legislation becomes law then there is no reason for not also enacting into law euthanasia or mercy killing statutes.

While everyone is sympathetic to the purpose of the abortion legislation, if we are going to allow people the right to kill unwanted fetuses, then why shouldn't they be given the right to dispose of unwanted human beings who are in pain or cause a financial handicap to the family.

When you look at the places where such laws have been enacted and see what is happening, as good as the motives behind the law may be, our state would become an abortion mill.

Private hospitals would spring up specializing in abortions geared to the tourist trade, similar to the states that have easy divorce laws.

WE SHOULD BE very careful in taking steps in the name of progress that we don't overlook the basic moral law.

If there are too many people in the world, let's devote ourselves to producing more food or to educating the world so that the birth rate is retarded, but let's not become such a free-swinging society that the destruction of a living being becomes a socially acceptable thing.

If we allow the state to provide for the disposing of living things because it is convenient, what is to stop it from making us the next target for ridding the world of undesirables.

Out of the past

2 years ago

--A petition campaign was started to outlaw the killing of does and fawn. Some 14,000 petitions were mailed to hault the anterless deer hunting.

--Three Charlevoix County men were called to the draft for July. They were Arthur F. Sutton, 23, Charlevoix, Roger G. Towne, 23, and Guy C. Conkle III, 20, both of Boyne City.

--James Ferguson of Charlevoix was named to the spring semester honor roll of the college of arts and science at New Mexico State University.

--The Charlevoix Courier ended mountainous stacks of papers and turned them in for microfilm. These represented each newspaper printed from 1908 on up to the present.

5 years ago

--The City of Charlevoix took its first step to eliminate slums. Then councilman Bill Fochtman urged the council to order the city attorney, John Michael, to enforce a law that gives the city authority to demand all elimination of "unwholesome, offensive, or filthy 'nuisances'".

--A new city directory for the Charlevoix area was planned to be co-published by the Courier and the Mullen-Kille Company of Chillecothe, Ohio.

--City council heard plans for a 16-family apartment house on W. Dixon Avenue. The property would be 1,180 feet long and 132 feet deep.

--A two-hour parking limit was enforced on the city's un-metered Mason Street lot.

If it Fitz

Pass the supercharger

You know those people who give their summer cottages cutesy-cutesy names, such as "Her-Nan-Do's Hideaway" (his name is HERbert, her name is NANcy, the dog's name is DOodle and their guests sleep in lumpy hideaway beds). Every syllable has a double meaning and before you finish reading all the hilariously sweet signs in the front yard, your eyelids have sugared shut and you must be guided to the guest bathroom where a Bucolic Bazooms joke book hangs from the ceiling.

Well, I've discovered how these people make a living. They own restaurants built around one central idea, a charming theme which must be followed throughout every phase of operation, from curb to kitchen. If the name of the place is Hansel & Gretel's Cafeteria, the only way you can find an exit is by following bread crumbs.

Such a place recently opened in Detroit, across from the Fisher Theatre. Owned by a car-racing nut, it is called The Steering Wheel. The entire front is painted black and white to look like the starter's checkered flag. My hick wife throught it was a Purina feed store.

Waiting at the pit stop to park your car are two men dressed in racing togs and crash helmets. I screeched to a stop, gunned my motor and said, "You have 32 seconds to change all 4 tires and check the carburetor. I am still 2 laps behind Mario and Barbara Stanwyck is waiting to kiss the winner."

Inside, everything and everybody is checked or striped. The waitresses, so help me, are called superchargers. I got a super charge out of their fender skirts.

You've seen piano bars, where the drinkers sit around a piano and tell Sam to play it again. The Steering Wheel has a car bar. The drinkers sit around a huge racing car, one of those Grand Prix things, I guess. The car doesn't do anything, not even idle a little. It just sits there and the people sit there and look at it. I wonder who will be the first drunk to drive it home?

The menu, of course, offers food by laps, not courses. First lap, soup; second lap, salad; and so on. I kept looking for something like: "Our chicken freshly run over by new Fords on paved roads."

Our supercharger confided that the Pope had done her out of a good thing. Before he put the whammy on all those saints, she used to sell St. Christopher wafers to nervous diners who needed courage before taking the far trek down the road.

I heard the chef uses a hydraulic lift to frost upside down cake. Anyway, the food was splendid and the prices reasonable. All in all it was an interesting evening and I came away with a new ambition. Some day I want to own a restaurant with a newspaper theme.

For years, wise guys have been telling me newspapers are good for only 2 things - wrapping fish and training dogs. I will have a special dish and a special restroom for these jokers.

Onward and Upward.

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

The experts tell us that our state should have a record-setting $1.35 billion tourist year, and Charlevoix County will continue to be among the favorite visiting spots in the North.

As this is our first summer in the county, we are very much like a tourist, searching out the showplaces in the area.

Last weekend, the family wanted to spend a day in the wilderness. When dinnertime came, we decided to "rough" it...find wood and water and go to vittel fixin' like the pioneers (minus catching our own meat...knowing full well we would starve if we depended upon a safari).

As it turned out, we stumbled into a private campsite on Rowlands Lake. A small but beautiful body of water, Rowlands Lake was nearly deserted save for two fishermen and a couple from Indiana who were camping.

"Roughing it" was quite easy, with wood already chopped and water piped to the nearest tree...and food from a kitchen just doesn't taste as good as it does cooked over an open fire at the edge of a lake.

Most of us are on the road a lot more between now and Labor Day. In the interest of bringing our readers back alive, we offer this short course in driving safety, courtesy of the Aetna insurance group.

Suppose during your summer trip an oncoming car veers into your lane and hurtles toward you. Which two of the following four actions do you take? 1. Blow the horn. 2. Apply the brakes. 3. Steer as far right as you can. 4. Switch to the lane the other car should be in.

In all but the rarest circumstances, moves 1 and 3 are best. The horn may wake the other driver up, and a right steer is more likely to provide escape than braking or turning into the oncoming traffic lane.

True-False

In case of a blowout, take your foot off the accelerator immediately, then pump the brakes.

False. Ease up on the gas gradually, not abruptly. Wait until the car slows naturally before braking gently.

If your car, heavily loaded for a trip, seems easier to steer than usual, your tires need more air.

False. You should move some of the heavier items farther forward.

It is sometimes better to steer toward an object in the road instead of trying to miss it.

True. If your choice in an emergency is between hitting a moving vehicle or a minor obstruction in the road such as a rock or animal, choose the latter. If the object is small enough, straddle it rather than swerving to avoid it.

A light rain is often more dangerous to drivers than a heavy rain.

True. A light shower makes highways slicker than a heavy rain because road oil and grease "float" on the surface of the moisture. A downpour washes them away.

On turnpikes, rear-end collisions are the most frequent type of accident.

False. Most turnpike accidents involve only one car. The statement is true for two-car accidents, however.

When an oncoming car fails to dim its lights, you should show down and watch the right side of the road.

True. If you look directly into the high beams of an oncoming car at night, your eyes won't recover completely from the glare for one full minute.

In terms of traffic fatalities, the 4th of July is the most dangerous of the three warm weather holidays.

True. So far.

Kenney, Wagner take a look at education

GLENN KENNEY: "For years, Charlevoixans have been oversold on their schools, equipment and staff. . . . . everybody moving into the area is told our schools are 'great'. . . . well, is 'just ain't so'!"

CLEM WAGNER: "Educating our young is much like fixing a good meal. . . . . it takes a good deal of preparation before it is ready for serving. . . . if you want to do it properly."

School Board President Glenn Kenney and Board member Clem Wagner completed terms on the body July 1. Amid the turmoil surrounding the local school situation, the following are comments from the two school directors concerning education in Charlevoix.

KENNEY: "The school board has made some errors in judgment over the course of years, and undoubtedly will continue to make them from time to time, as will the administration of the school. But no mistake is as costly...nor as grave in consequences...and as unjustified as the error of voting down the millage requests.

"School systems all over the state are in financial trouble...and the State in their own slow way will take action. But in the meantime, if we allow our school to fall below acceptable standards, then we are asking for a complete take-over by the state. I feel this is unthinkable.

"For years, Charlevoixans have been oversold on their schools, equipment and staff. I don't doubt that two or more decades ago, Charlevoix was much more fortunate (because of the summer influx) than most of the other Northern communities. But for more than 10 years now, our system has been understaffed and underequipped.

"The major problem of the Board relates to a lack of communications. The rapport with the teachers has improved greatly. I feel there is increased respect and trust between the Board, administration and teaching staff, but there is still a gap in the flow of communications.

"To reduce the millage request would not be good, even if the voters would pass a reduced amount. As a responsible Board of Education it is our job to present what we need and stick to that decision."

WAGNER: Academically, our schools are good, although there is bound to be a drop in stature due to the millage failures. The most injury will be done to the youngsters who are not going on to any college or trade school. In fact, the lack of a good vocational program may cause a number of dropouts. The voters must put their values where they belong. I feel they belong with our youth.

"Some feel there is a lot of waste in our system. I don't. A big operation, such as our school system, means there will be a little waste, but I haven't seen much...and there's none of this 'measure twice and saw once' business in the program, either.

"If we have to go with a drastically reduced program next year, good athletic and music programs have to be cut. It's similar to education during the depression. Our first responsibility is to provide the basics of education. How many of our students will earn their living as professional athletes or musicians?

"Education is changing rapidly. It's almost like fixing a meal...it takes a good deal of preparation before it's ready to serve...if it's done properly. Right now in education locally, we may not be getting well prepared meat and potatoes...it might be more like TV dinners."

Closed door meeting...Christ Episcopal Church was meeting place Monday night as Richard Donaldson called together approximately 50 residents to discuss school budget. Board members and press were not invited. "We didn't want any publicity," said Donaldson.

'Select' group meets on school problems

BY FISKE MARTIN
COURIER EDITOR

The Charlevoix Public School situation took on an added element of intrigue Monday night, as approximately 50 hand-picked residents, including School Board members Richard Donaldson and Charles England, met in the basement of Christ Episcopal Church, State and Clinton Streets.

In charge of the session was Donaldson, at that time a few hours from becoming an official member of the School Board (he became a member of the body some four hours later, at midnight).

Reportedly, one member of the administration and two teachers were at the session.

Other members of the Board and administration were not invited, and many of them were not even aware of the quietly-called meeting until contacted by the Courier Monday evening.

In addition, no members of the press were at the meeting by invitation.

Several Board members who would be quoted were disturbed by the fact that the meeting was held without their knowledge, heightened by the school system's present serious communications problems.

Charlevoix's P.T.A., made up of interested parents of school children and citizens, was not officially represented at the meeting. P.T.A. president Fred Payne stated that he was informed of the meeting by an undisclosed source, but was not invited.

Other school officials who told the Courier they were not asked to sit in on the meeting were School Superintendent Rex Milligan, Board members Jerrold Redeker, Clement Wagner, Jack Rader and Burr Blanchard, as well as outgoing president Glenn Kenney.

Unavailable for comment were Board members Mrs. Frances Hooper, who was "with her husband on a personal engagement", and Dale Boss, who was not at home.

Board members contacted voiced concern at the methods used by Donaldson in calling the meeting. "Why would he go behind the back of the Board in the face of the problems which now exist? We need all the cooperation and communications flow we can get," one member of the Board stated.

Rader said he "doesn't approve of such moves....it is very unethical. I don't condone anything like this, ever."

Redeker was angered by the lack of communications. "I am a little bit tired of the goings-on behind the Board's back. We are accused of not communicating, holding 'secret' meetings, and then they do the same thing they accuse us of doing. It is a low blow and totally uncalled for. They are not doing what they have asked us to do...and that is being 'above board'.

"My main concern is, if they are so determined to raise money for the athletic program, why can't they find the same enthusiasm and work for the total education of our children?"

Blanchard was unaware of the meeting when contacted. "I wasn't asked to attend; didn't even know the meeting was being held," he said, reserving further comment

Charlevoix Agency buys Livingston Co.

The Charlevoix Agency today announced the purchase of the assets of the Livingston Insurance Agency.

For many years, the Livingston Agency has performed services to its clients in the area, and according to both parties, the same service will continue through the offices of the Charlevoix Agency.

Archie and Robert Livingston, who operated the insurance firm for 27 years, will be available to consult with and serve their clients.

The acquisition of the Livingston Agency makes Charlevoix Agency the largest insurance agency in the area according to officials of the company.

E.D. "Pat" Hawley, president of Charlevoix Agency, states, "At this time, we are better able to provide complete and comprehensive service in all areas of casualty business, life, health and accident insurance to more people in the Charlevoix area."

Additional service has been installed in the purchasing agency. "A message center for receiving incoming calls 24-hours a day is now in operation. All calls received at the center will be returned promptly, when the office is opened," said an agency spokesman.

Archie Livingston retired last month from the presidency of the First State Bank of Charlevoix. His son Robert continues his association with the same bank.

County State in Ellsworth

Charlevoix County State Bank commenced full-time banking operations in Ellsworth, yesterday. E.D. Hawley, president of the Charlevoix County State Bank, stated that he feels the economic growth and development will take place in the area south of Charlevoix in the Atwood, Ellsworth area.

"It is felt we could no longer provide the banking services necessary to sustain continued economic growth and development on a part-time basis," Hawley said.

The grand opening is being planned and will be announced later this month.

CPC pact ratified; ends 84-day strike

At last the strike at the Michigan Consumers Power Company is ended and the many families in the Charlevoix area whose men are employed at the Big Rock Plant can go back to normal living. For 84 days the strike disrupted the lives of both management and employees as the Michigan Utilities Workers Union and the Consumers Power Company struggled to reach an agreement.

Both sides gave a little and both sides gained a little before the present contract agreement was reached. Two weeks ago the company proposed a new contract which was voted on in each of the union locals throughout Michigan and was ratified by a margin of 400 votes. Local number 346, which includes the men of the Charlevoix area, voted 38 to 26 to accept the conditions of the new contract.

A big issue in the strike was the cost of living clause. The union wanted a cost of living clause, whereas the company was willing to talk about a cost of living clause only if the strikers would sign a three year contract. The strikers did succeed in getting a cost of living clause which is identical to that of the U.A.W. It will become effective April 1, 1970.

The newly signed contract became effective on June 28, and will run until April 1, 1971.

There were other issues of the contract where labor and management had to come to terms. Originally the company offered a flat 11 percent increase to all employees. This was termed unacceptable by the union and a graduated increase was finally agreed upon. This served to the advantage of the men on the lower end of the labor grade, but to the disadvantage of the men at the upper end of the labor grade.

The company granted an increase in shift differential pay for those men working the unpopular afternoon and midnight shifts. It also granted a medical plan which is more comprehensive than the previous one.

As might be expected some strikers feel that the agreement was a profitable one and that the strike was worthwhile. Others feel that they got the short end of the bargain. Much of their attitude depends of course upon their interim jobs and upon the hardship which they personally suffered during the strike.

The nearly-three month strike was not strictly economic, either.

Long impasses were created over union demands that there be a change in job evaluation and a change in the format of grievance procedures.

Over the drawn out negotiations, some employees found the work stoppage a nice temporary change in jobs; finding work at their avocations. For instance, men who love boats went to work at marinas. Men who like outside work joined construction crews and those who enjoy electrical work picked up jobs in their field. Many men used the time to fix up their houses.

But the strike meant hardship, too, for many wives of strikers went to work at least part-time to augment the loss of income. Striking families ate, but they didn't have the money that they planned to have for that new car or boat.

It was not a time for even economical vacations either, for each striker pulled picket duty regularly.

For the men who are in management the strike meant long grueling hours of work and irregular limited hours of leisure. The men were at the plant from four to six days at a stretch and worked either eight hour shifts or 12 hour shifts so the plant completely operative at all hours. They slept on cots in temporary quarters at the back of the building. One man even slept in the women's wash-room.

A downstate man from Consumers volunteered to come up and cook for the plant, and the men said that he did a good job, but he did not cater to particular appetites like the cook at home may do.

When the men went home for 24 hours they were tired from working long shifts yet they had to cram yardwork, household jobs and some recreation into the short period.

Often a wife and children had entirely different plans from the man of the family as to how he rationed his time at home. Women with preschool children found it especially hard to have a husband gone, for they are confined to home and depend on their husbands for adult companionship and some help with the children.

For all families, those of management and labor alike the strike situation was not good for it was tense, and unnatural.

Consolidated Gas fights decision

Michigan Consolidated Gas Company yesterday filed a court appeal against the rate decision of the Michigan Public Service Commission which allowed the utility a revenue increase of only 1½ percent. The company told the court its costs of rendering natural gas service to nearly a million Michigan citizens have gone up 10 percent.

A company spokesman said the MPSC decision has forced cancellation of plans to extend gas mains to some 12 communities mainly in the Upper Peninsula and the northern part of the Lower Peninsula.

All other construction of new facilities must be reduced to a minimum as a result of the unfavorable decision, the company spokesman said.

The contested Commission order approved new rates for industrial gas users which will add about $4,200,000 annually to the company's revenues. This fell far short of meeting the $27,000,000 a year in higher costs which the company must pay for gas supplies, wages, taxes, and interest on bonds and bank borrowings.

Pointing out that 14 months have elapsed since it sought a rate increase in April, 1968, the company asked the Ingham County Circuit Court for immediate relief in the form of a temporary order permitting it to increase rates by an additional $4,896,628. This represents increases in company expenses which the Commission did not dispute but which it refused to include in its rate decision.

The company agreed it would refund to its customers any part of this amount not ultimately found to be justified after full review of the entire case.

The company charged in its appeal that the Commission ignored undisputed cost increases which occurred while the proceedings were pending, and which were a matter of record in the hearings. At the same time, it said, the Commission included in its determination all possible decreases in costs, even though some of them occurred after the hearings had been concluded. As a result, it said, Michigan Consolidated is suffering unlawful confiscation of its property by being required to deliver gas service at rates inadequate to meet its costs.

Under Michigan's system of utility regulation, rates are presumed to be set at a level sufficient to allow the company, for a reasonable period of the future, to meet all of its legitimate costs plus a fair return on its investment.

Corral Chatter

The 44th season for Camp Charlevoix was under way on Saturday with boys arriving by car, by plane, and by bus. Boys from Florida, Ohio, Kentucky, New York, Indiana, Illinois, California, Iowa, Nevada, Kansas, Pennsylvania, and Michigan arrived for a summer of fun and to learn new skills and make new friends. It was great to see the boys greet friends they made last summer and had looked forward to seeing again to renew those friendships. Boys are also enrolled from Santo Domingo, the Dominican Reupblic, from Alaska, and from Dakar, Africa. The camp is truly International again this summer.

As is the custom through the years, the first night in camp is given over to Pillow Fights. A large log is hung up off the floor of the Clubhouse and two boys are seated on the log with each having a pillow. They try to knock each other off, and the first to touch the floor is the loser. Following are the results: Jeff Zoeller, East Lansing, beat Mark Schneider, Bethel, Alaska; Jimmy Zitsman, Springfield, Ohio, beat Jimmy Kazmarck, Mt. Clemons, Mich; Jim Cook, Bloomfield Hills; beat Mont Wickham, Bloomfield Hills; Bruce Johnson, Spring Lake, was the winner over Dave Taylor, Ann Arbor; Mike Healey, Shaker Heights, Ohio, won over John Harbeck, Grand Haven, John Breitlnger, Lexington, Ohio, won over Mike O'Conner, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Davey Townsend, Lynn, Ind. beat Kevin McCarty, Zionsville, Ind.

Rob Danaher, Grosse Pointe, won over Jason Joseph, Grand Blanc; Jimmy Shook, Lafayette, Ind., won over Bill Guggenheim, Pittsburg; Fred Doherty, Midland, beat Jim Chalberg, Rock Island, Ill.; Steve Edmands, Chicago, beat Art Ballinger, Muncie, Ind.; Bob Wittmer, Cleveland, and Chuck Zitsman fought to a draw. Jim Osborn, Dearborn, beat Brad Mast, Grosse Pointe; Tom Harbeck, Grand Haven, won over Bill Drew, Grand Rapids. John Mahan, Birmingham, won over Billy Otto, Grosse Pointe; Dave Morton, Ann Arbor, beat Brian Caukin, Grand Rapids; Todd Soderstrom, Renesslaer, Ind., won over John Kelsey, Grosse Pointe; David Rhame, Royal Oak, and Casimiro Bolonotto, Santo Domingo, fought a very long battle to a draw. Dour Mulligan, Lake Worth, Florida, won over John ZeBranik, Lavonia; Bill Harbeck, Grand Haven, beat Eric Burnheimer, Toledo; and Rob Cojeen, Grand Blanc, beat Mike Noonan, Dearborn Heights.

It was a fine evening which the boys all enjoyed thornughly judging from the cheers at every match. Ken closed the evening by having the boys, stand, face the west, and with lights out, sing "Taps".

Sunday morning we had our first chapel service inside the Bigwam, due to wet grounds at our outdoor chapel. And speaking of "west grounds" the staff must be complimented on having the camp in tip-top shape after working all last week in the rain, for most of the time: The camp looked great opening day which was sunny and bright. At Sunday's Chapel Servie George Musekamp, Cincinnati, read the Scripture and Leigh Merrill gave the prayer. As is the custom, Ken Smith gave this first talk to theyboys to make friends, cooperate with both campers and staff, and to start off on the right foot in order to have a happy and enjoyable summer. He also mentioned respect for other people's property.

Everyone paid strict attention while Ken was talking, and the "first seeds" of "character building" were planted. Following chapel, the boys were put through physical exams by the nurse and swim tests by the waterfront department. At Sunday dinner, three of the staff put on a skit to the merriment of the boys. The men were Tom Dorsek, Rusty Smith, Doug Otto, Jeff Nyland, Lee Fernstrum and Ken was at the piano. In the afternoon, more swim tests and more physicals, plus a movie, "Ted Williams on Baseball."

Sunday evening, Vespers were held and Bill Townsend spoke on "Respect for Property, Yours and Others". It was a good talk, and after some songs, and the singing of "Taps", the boys went to bed, tired but happy after their first full day in camp.

Garden Club hears weed control talk

Members of the Garden Club met in June with Mrs. Albert Edwards, with Mrs. C. R. Ringler as co-hostess. A most interesting lesson on "Weed Identification and Control" was given by Mrs. Mildred Paddock.

Weeds are plants growing where they are not wanted. Whether or not a particular plant is a weed depends upon where it is growing as well as upon the kind of plant it is.

Some plants such as the Canada Thisle are regarded as weeds wherever they grow, but grass, which is considered a weed in a garden or gravel path, may be a cultivated plant in a lawn and the Dandelion, a pestiferous weed of lawns, is grown in the vegetable garden for its succulent foliage.

The Pig Weed is also used for its foliage. But all weeds cause the gardener untold trouble and constant effort to keep them under control.

They should never be allowed to go to seed. As the old saying is "One year seeding brings seven years of weeding."

Hoeing cultivating are time honored ways of destroying weeds when they are quite small, and the trick is to hoe repeatedly and also some handweeding is needed. Mulching is also a method of weed control.

Then we have the spray and powder weed killers that everyone should thoroughly understand before using.

A question and answer panel was also enjoyed. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Blanche Paddock, Tuesday afternoon, July 8.

DDT decision gets 2nd look

The Michigan Commission of Agriculture took action recently to amend its decision cancelling registrations of DDT in the state.

The commission instructed Agriculture Director B. Dale Ball to permit registration of DDT for control of bats, mice and lice of humans by professional applicators and government officials for public health purposes.

The action was taken at a hearing in Sault Ste. Marie requested by four companies after the commission decided April 16 to cancel DDT registrations in Michigan.

Phil Spear, technical director, National Pest Control Association, asked the commission to sonsider the need for DDT in bat and mouse control by indoor applicators. Declaring there is presently no good substitute, Spear requested that permission be given to use DDT until an effective substitute is developed. He said bats carry rabies and cited two instances of rabid bats in Ingham county.

Ted Gluchowski, Stauffer Chemical Company, New York, read a statement from his company's attorney challenging the commission's authority to cancel DDT for current use. They company claimed there has been no determination that DDT is misbranded.

The commission is empowered by state law to act on the recommendations of the MSU experiment station or the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Library Notes

In a patriotic mood, and to commemorate the Fourth of July, the Library will display special books dealing with this important event and with the early history of our country. None of the books on the display shelf or listed in this column are of the "history book" variety. They are all very readable, very entertaining and well worth the reader's attention.

"Turncoats, Traitors and Heroes" by John Bakeless is not a novel although it reads like one. Mr. Bakeless has written many books on American history and is a master artist in the field of research. The chapter titles are intriguing enough to capture any reader. "The Paul Revere Gang"—"Kidnapping George Washington" — and "Spy Catching on the Hudson" to mention only a sample.

"Yankee Doodle Boy" by Joseph Plumb Martin is a slim volume which tells of a young soldiers' adventures in the American Revolution. There are maps and delightful illustrations.

"The President Who Wouldn't Retire" by Leonard Falkner, tells about what happens when an ex-President returns to the political arena. John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States not only ran for the House of Representatives after his term as President, but went on to forge a brilliant career in Congress. It is a fascinating account of young Washington, Jackson, Webster, Clay and Calhoun and the growing conflict between the North and South.

"The Story of Old Ironsides" is a fine husky book authored by Emilie Benson Knipe and Alden Arthur Knipe. It tells of the stirring events in which this fine old man-of-war took such a glorious part and of the deeds of the splendid men who commanded her. Young readers can read the tale without being bothered to remember date and other uninteresting matter. The print is large and the book is very, very readable.

"The Pageant of America" is a pictorial history of the United States, edited by Ralph Henry Gabriel with the help of a large and important advisory board. It begins with the American Indian and contains a complete history of the county in pictures until the fall of New France in 1763.

"The New Land" is a large and handsome book compiled and edited by Phillip Viereck. It deals with the discovery, exploration and early settlement of northeastern United States from the earliest voyages to 1621, told in the words of the explorers themselves. There are marvelous drawings and reproductions of original maps. It is a fairly new book, published in 1967.

"Meet the Presidents" by Frances Cavanah gives the young reader a chance to meet the Presidents both as boys and as men. Several of them grew up in one of the thirteen colonies, even before there was a United States, and later helped those colonies become a nation. In the experiences of the Presidents, from George Washington to Lyndon Johnson, this book presents America in peace and war, in colonial days, as a struggling new country and as a powerful nation. Highly recommended.

"A Bird in the Hand" is for the very young pre-school reader. It is a charming book with delightful illustrations and sayings from Poor Richard's Almanack which, once learned, are not forgotten.

Visitors bring $ to county

Visitors to Charlevoix county in 1968 spent $1,466,571.25 for room rentals, according to a report to the West Michigan Tourist Association by the Michigan Department of Revenue.

From the total collected in the county, the state took $58,662.85 in use tax.

The amount reported by the state is not the total for the county's businesses, it was pointed out by Wesley B. Tebeau, secretary-manager of WMTA, for the reason a tax is collected only on room and cottage rentals for less than 30 days and persons with one or two units are not required to collect or report the tax.

June, July and August, when tourist travel is at its peak, were the months in which room rentals were the greatest.

"These figures reflect the impact of touristry on the economy of the region," Tebeau asserted, "but they also disclose the weakness in the campaign of advertising and publicity to lure vacation visitors here.

"The regional association and Michigan Tourist Council, due to budget limitations, concentrate advertising on summer, fall and winter business. There is a great need for adequate funding to permit advertising to be placed in our prime midwest market area every month of the year.

"The state's legislature has been alerted to the deficiencies in the program in a request for a $2 million funding of the promotional efforts, which would encourage business interests and local governments to invest a greater amount for local promotion," Tebeau concluded.

The state's current budget for tourist promotion is $1.054 million for tax revenue exceeding $75 annually. The West Michigan Tourist Association in its 1969-70 budget will have $240,000.

Michigan State University "diggers" have just about completed their project on the Lake Michigan shoreline. Students, led by associate professor Charles Cleland, unearthed a pre-historic Indian village. Findings will help implement historical data of early Michigan Indians.

Hitchin' a ride...when antique autos passed through Charlevoix on a recent Friday, one of the "old timers" couldn't make it on his own. One of today's metal and chrome models lends a helping hand.

Pat's Reaction

Do, Ra, Mi

By Pat Begrow

Ever since May when the papyrus boat Ra left the ancient port of Safia on the western coast of Morocco en route to the Yacatan Peninsule I haven't been able to get that adventurous trip out of my mind.

Mind you, I wouldn't want to be on that particular tourist cruise but nevertheless the audacity of such an undertaking fascinates me. After all, if the ancient Egyptians did make such a voyage drifting with the equatorial currents from Africa to Central America 3,000 years ago they probably did it by accident not by intention. Therefore they were spared the agonizing realization that they were facing the tedium of a three-month ocean voyage. The ancient Egyptians most likely woke up each morning expecting to see land.

By contrast Norwegian Captain Thor Heyerdahl and his crew realize what they are in for, a long, long, long ocean trip. Aside from the common purpose of making the trip I can't help but wonder if the little group has anything else in common.

The men represent six nations and one man has never even seen the sea. What if he gets seasick? What if one man is an avid chess player and no one else plays chess? What if there are only three for bridge?

How will they get along if someone looses his sunglasses? What if someone really has a yen for iced tea?

I read that the boat is supplied with honey, dates, 24 hens and ducks and enough water jars for three months. That's a lot of stick desserts and omlettes, but what if someone yearns for a charcoal steak or a tossed salad? Fortunately, I'm not a man for I KNOW THAT I just couldn't face a rugged outing like that. Frankly I don't think that Thor Heyerdahl, the rugged captain, just does it for kicks either. I think that he has an entirely different purpose.

When I was in high school I was invited to go on a date that I felt was the height of sophistication for I was invited to hear Captain Thor Heyerdahl lecture and show slides of his expeditionary voyage aboard the raft Kon-Tiki. That was just after he had returned from his trip to the south seas and even before his book was published.

Just think for a moment of how many people have read his book, seen his slides or heard his story in the 22 years since that Kon-Tiki junket. It's certainly time for Heyerdahl to come up with some new material, sort of a Can You Top This, but after 22 years of the easy life that trip is going to be pretty rough.

I'll think of the brave captain this summer drifting on the Ra across the Atlantic Ocean and in spite of the glamorous reports I'll know what he'll be doing. Heyerdahl will be counting off each day like a day in Purgatory and praying for a hurricane so that he can be rescued in dignity and then spend the next 22 years lecturing, writing and showing slides of his great adventure.

Around the town

Mr. and Mrs. Duane Bloduc and children left this week for Logan, Utah, where he will attend the summer session at Utah State University on a science grant. Enroute they planned to visit points of interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rempell of Arlington, Tex., visited recently with Mr. and Mrs. Jake White Sr. They are cousins of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Morgan and family left this week for the Oklahoma Geology Camp at Carson City, Colo. He will attend the summer session on a special grant.

The annual business meeting of the Atwood-Ellsworth Ebenezer Christian School was held Monday, June 23, at the Ellsworth Church. Three new members were elected to the school board, Wayne Daining, Jerroll Drenth and John Elzenga from Atwood for 3 year terms.

Retiring members are John Kooyer, Harold Jansen and Tom Wynsma Jr., from Atwood. Others on the board are Fred Van Stedum, John Jake Drenth, James Rubingh and Versile Veldkamp from Ellsworth, and Carl Potts and Marion Sitzema from Atwood.

The proposed budget was approved and tuition rates were raised $30 per year in each category. Mr. Krause, Principal and teacher, will return as will Miss Postma. As Miss Van Someren will continue her education, Miss Jacquiline Huizenga of Highland, Ind. and Grand Rapids will teach the middle room.

The Ellsworth Chamber of Commerce and the Lions Club have undertaken the responsibility of building a float to represent Ellsworth in the following parades and festivals - in Central Lake on July 4th, East Jordan on the 5th, the Cherry Festival in Traverse City on July 11, Gaylord, July 19, and the Venetian day in Charlevoix.

Needless to say, much planning and work has gone into this float which is being built at the Canning Factory and at the Community School with adults and young people giving their time and talents. Bill Dewey is chaperoning and worked with the following young people: Gary Drenth, Stanley Drenth, Randy Ruis, Sheila Farrell, Nannethe VenderArk, Noreen DeGroot, Laura Tornga, Colleen Strange (art work) Darla Best, Shirley Jo Drenth, Patti Ruis, Patty Drenth, Nadine Chellis and Max Bolser Jr. Adults helping are George Drenth, Albert Fielstra, Gerrit Geo. Drenth, Jerry Alward, Max Bolser Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Farrell. Grant Hestings and Bill Muha donated material used.

The float is being built on a farm wagon, loaned by Leonard Strange, with Chester Farrell being responsible for the frame and pillars built the wagon. Colleen Strange drew all the animals and birds used which her father cut out.

The theme "Mother Natures Garden" was used to depict our village and community and it will be displayed July 2 on the corner of Main and Center St.

So please make a special effort to see this float as we can be proud of the time and effort put in by these people to represent our village. Thanks to everyone. If we have missed anyone, please let us know!

FASTBALL ACTION

Medusa and Morweld Steel got off to fine starts in the race for the city softball title by posting two wins during the week.

Medusa scored five time in the fourth inning against County State Bank to break the game open for an easy 9-2 win. The uprising was hilighted by triples by Tom Webb and Bill Marme, while Levi McClellen, Sonny Wright, and Larry Polachek all banged out one-baggers.

Larry Edwards, John Ferguson, and Tom Drenth strung together base hits for the losers runs.

The second Medusa victory came against American Mold when they rallied for a seventh inning run for the victory. Veteran pitchers Sonny Wright and Nate Boss hooked up in a real pitcher's battle with Medusa's early run coming as the result of a misplayed flyball that resulted in a triple and a throwing error. Mold countered with a similar marker when Ken Boss walked and came home on a dropped fly ball. The winning run came in the bottom of the seventh when Tom Webb singled, stole second, and came home on Ralph Doan's sinking liner which was dropped in the outfield. Wright allowed only two hits while the winners collected five off Boss.

Ellsworth's Morweld steel scored seven times in the second inning with the big blows being home runs by Mike Lord and Kooyer. Bob Klooster picked up the win, allowing only two hits, both off the bat of John Ferguson.

It was the big inning again that enabled the Morweld crew to get by luckless American Mold. Hud Drenth's two run homer sparked the winners to five runs in the fifth that sent Mold to a 6-4 defeat. Mike Lord chipped in with another four-bagger in the early going. Ken Wojan doubled and singled in a losing cause.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Nnvak's suffered a forfeit loss when a couple injuries left them one man short in their game with Deyoungs. The loss was the first in two years of league play.

Newcomer Electra proved it was going to be tougher than expected as they battled Freedmans before falling 4-1. J. Himbaugh and S. Corwin combined base hits on two occasions for three of the winner's runs. Tim Carey, however, provided the big news as he struck out 18 of the Electra batters in a fine display of pitching. He allowed only a fourth inning single.

PEANUT LEAGUE

Typical of the close games going on in the peanut circuit was the narrow 6-5 win the Cubs posted over the Astros. The contest went nine innings before Koen and Tom More combined base hits for the winning run.

The Braves edged the Lions 5-3, when a Lions sixth inning rally fell just short. Bud Boss led the winners with a triple and single while teammate Denny Crain allowed only four hits to the Lions.

The Cards got a scare from the Tigers who finally fell 4-3. Skip Skippergosh had two of the winner's hits. Jim Potter allowed the losers only three hits.

SLOW PITCH

Olesons won a hard-fought 5-4 contest from Carey's Oil by scoring in the eighth inning when Glen Taylor and Mike Ready combined for base hits. Charles Carey's two hits led the losers attack.

Castro's displayed good power as they overwhelmed the Air Force 13-1. Rich Plumm and D. Archey both cracked long home runs for the winners. A. and H. Borths both chipped in with two hits each for the winners.

BLOOPER BALL

In the opener of the popular Blooper league, Boyne City's Howard's Service edged American Mold, 6-2. The winners scored three times in each of the first two innings for the win. Dick Erber led the winners with two bingos while Guy Smith and Mark White collected a like number for the losers.

THIS AND THAT....American Mold's four straight losses are more than the defending champions suffered in the last two campaigns......Slow Pitch league, new this year, has brought a new age group into the softball program. The four team league was filled with players in the early twenties that weren't playing in the highly competitive Fastball Circuit....Sonny Wright has four fine pitching efforts to his credit, allowing only 1,3,5, and 2 hits in route to winning three games.

Stay in car during storm

What should you do if a violent summer electrical storm catches you in your car on Bridge Street? Unless the storm causes poor visibility, there is no need for a motorist to stop his car.

If you are forced to pull over and wait out a storm, one of the safest places to avoid lightning is in your car and in the open.

Rubber tires insulate a car and keep the current from grounding the vehicle, so there is little danger that lightning can harm passengers.

If you decide to pull over and wait for the storm to pass, these safety suggestions should be followed:

Don't park under a tree or pole. If struck by lightning, it might fall on top of your car.

Try to avoid parking under overhead power lines strung along the roadside. During severe storms many of these lines are knocked down.

If a wire does hit your car, you are safe when you stay inside. Since you can't tell the condition of the wire, sit tight and wait.

Avoid touching any metal parts inside the car. If you must summon help, use a wooden or plastic object to activate your horn.

Michigan Am title copped by Green

Sloshing through days of rain, mud and high winds, Peter Green of Franklin, plodded to the title in the 58th Michigan Amateur Golf championship at Belvedere Country Club in Charlevoix, Sunday.

Bad weather plagued the tourney from the start, with the second qualifying round washed off the books altogether.

Green took his stand in the finals by a 3-2 win over Dick Draser, Jr. of Roseville. Mike Fedewa edged out Gene Hunt of Grand Blanc to enter the finals against Green.

Green has been playing the tournament since he was 15, and it has become a long-sought victory for him. He said, "It's nice, for a change, to be a winner."

While the tournament was being held in Charlevoix, Green and his family stayed in a cottage on Lake Charlevoix. His wife, and their two children, Mike, 5, and Susie, 5, accompanied Green to this tournament. Mrs. Green wasn't going to attend the Sunday afternoon round. She said, "Pete seems to do better when I'm not around."

After spending the morning hours in the cottage, she could no longer stay behind, and decided to go to the course to watch her husband in action.

By the 12th muddy hole, the score was tied. Fedewa evened the score and the course of the game had changed. It had become an entirely new game for both players.

Green copped the title, over Mike Fedewa of Portland, in a 2 and 1 victory. His bid for the top title was achieved, and his 13-year-old dream had become a reality.

Howard Nielson, chairman of the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament, presented the rotating loving cup to Green and closed the five-day competition at the Belvedere.

Plans for the rest of the season for Green have not been decided as yet, but he does expect to be playing in the National Amateur at Oakmont, Pittsburg, and in the Michigan Open.

While Green was playing his game, his wife kept out of sight. Green said, "My wife knows when I'm swinging wrong and when I make a poor shot. She must have stayed in the bushes today, because I didn't see her until it was all over."

Fedewa, 19, recently completed his sophomore year at Western Michigan University. He stated, "I was fortunate to get as far as I did."

Jerry Skippergosh of Charlevoix was caddy for Green during the tournament.

Sports Shorts

Oh, my aching back....and arm, and legs. After a winter of inactivity, we suited up last week for the first slow pitch game in Charlevoix's history (or so we're told).

The months of little more than walking took their toll, but we're back to normal now and ready to do it all over again tonight.

Jim Wilson is the undefeated manager of Oleson's entry in the league, and since we played the entire game, we have to admit his true genius showed through in the extra-inning contest.

It has been reported that Wilson's ace pitcher, L.D. Potter, has been eating raw onions all week in an effort to keep his arm loose for tonight's action.

+ + +

Are the Tigers dead? Most Detroit sportswriters seem to think so. They attribute the biggest problem to the bullpen's inability to hold a lead.

Of course, if Mayo Smith would rely on more than one man.....

Sure is easy to sit at the typewriter and second-guess.

Michigan Amateur drew a large crowd, even if the weatherman failed to cooperate part of the time. The Belvedere has to be rated as one of the finest courses in the state.

Letters to the editor

Scores Hogan

Dear Editor:

I was dismayed to read Henry Hogan's "Viewpoint" in last week's Courier--there's an enormous difference between giving one's viewpoint or giving out mis-information!

Mr. Hogan views with alarm and points with scorn and ignores the voices of thousands of ministers, doctors, social workers, nurses, etc., who whole-heartedly support this humane bill which is now before both houses in Lansing--a bill which permits legalized abortions instead of what we're now facing--over a million illegal aborions a year. These self-inflicted and/or illegal abortions today are killing and maiming millions of frightened young girls and women.

Mr. Hogan overlooks our precious constitutional freedom of choice--he denies a child who has been raped, for instance, the right to have an abortion--even if her minister, doctor and parents approve!

Now really! I respect Mr. Hogan's viewpoint, but by the same token he should respect mine and all the enlightened Charlevoixans who sent telegrams to Lansing in support of the legalized abortion bill.

Every woman should have the right to make her own decision when faced with the problem of should she or should she not have an abortion and there are many people Mr. Hogan, who feel it is MORALLY WRONG to knowingly give birth to a hopelessly deformed vegetable!

It's high time this antiquated and unjust law be liberalized!

Sincerely,

Mrs. Julius Gilbert

By C.B.

The sudden death of Judy Garland probably caught everyone by surprise. She was indeed a colorfull personality in the celebrity circle.

The arrangements for her funeral had been planned before her will was discovered. Judy requested she be cremated, while Sid Luft wanted her remains to be interred in California, and daughter, Liza Minnelli, wanted her mother to buried in New York.

Plans for funerals are never enjoyable. The loss of a loved one is a high price to pay. But Liza made a comment and request that I think should be repeated. "We ask that the guests attending the funeral, not wear black. We want everything to be bright and cheery".

This is really amazing. In a time of grief, the family is able to stand tall and recognize death as something beautiful rather than something morbid and cold.

People die every few minutes of the day, all around the world. It's an uncontrollable act of God and nature. Why should death be treated in a "black" atmosphere? Tears cannot bring back the dead, and black is only seen by those still living.

In some instances, I have known families to request a guitar-funeral for their deceased member of the family. It is considered outrageous and vulgar to some people, but I disagree. I only think of it as another way of honoring the death of another person.

Death is ao frequently associated with black. Maybe the relationship of "nothingness" or "darkness correlates with black, but should death? I would much rather think of death as having achieved a successful life on earth and ending it in goodness, not morbitity.

At a time of death, emotions are hard to control. I find it very difficult not to feel real sorrow and depression at a loss of a friend or relative. Tears are usually displayed at funerals and also sobbing hearts.

But I think if everyone would sit back and realize the meaning of death, they would see it's kind of beautiful in itself. Only those left behind are there to express the sorrow and feelings of loneliness. So why deepen the heartache by draping ourselves in black?

Instead, continue to dress as you would if this person were still alive. His or her life, in one state, is ended, but it doesn't require black to be worn. Think of all the happiness he or she has brought into your life, and the cheerfullness you have shared. When you have done that, you will be able to share Liza Minnelli's request for "brightness and cheerfulness". Death has beauty within it; don't let a darkened color of tradition ruin its perfection.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER
CHAMBER MANAGER

BLACKSMITHS OR ASTRONAUTS. Blacksmiths or Astronauts? Visions of past and future. Blacksmiths take a little longer to bring into focus because they are a largely forgotten breed. Astronauts are consistently in the headlines. Your chamber of commerce--how does it relate? Before you answer too quickly, ponder a moment. Does your chamber represent a narrow band of people or is it representative of the total community? Does your board consist of me-tooer or real decision-makers? Are your committees tucked into a desk drawer or action-oriented?

Do problems come to your chamber or does your chamber go out to meet them? Does change disturb or exhilarate your chamber? Make a decision? If not, visit your chamber office...become involved...be sure your chamber will not be left on the anvil, but will go into orbit. Blast Off! (Taken from release by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.)

Where are all the golfers? A spot check of lodging places indicated fewer than last year. Maybe the fact the split-up for trials between Belvedere Club and Shanty Creek had something to do with their choosing of lodging.

I have a newspaper clipping from the Cleveland Press, Wednesday, June 18, 1969, with an interesting article sent me by my sister, who has been sending me a variety of Ohio news releases having to do with the coho over there and especially with the DDT situation. It is an interesting article, which I have here for your review.

Speaking of DDT and pesticides otherwise in fish population, though in this area the count appears to be quite high, however, there is nothing to indicate how many hundreds or thousands of pounds of fish one would have to eat before there would be any true ill effect in humans. I am glad to have read quite a number of times in the last weeks that they are publishing sort of suggestions or instructions when preparing the raw fish for cooking which is indicated eliminates the pesticide content.

The deadline for this issue is too early to include any information on the Board of Directors meeting, Tuesday evening, July 1, however, anything of consequence will appear in the next issue.

It is quite apparent from all that I have read in recent area newspapers that Petoskey, Boyne City and East Jordan had no difficulty in getting response to their requests for the different queen's contests. I hope very soon the response in Charlevoix will follow in line. How about it, gals?

This is no accident

But you're our witness, anyway—to a piece-ful demonstration of how quickly and easily Maverick can be taken apart and put together. We designed Maverick that way for a good reason. When you're paying by the hour for service or repairs, speed is important. And at times like this, nothing can beat a simple machine.

Most new cars are more and more complicated. And more expensive to care for. Maverick's so simple to service, you can do it yourself—if you really mean it about being independent.

You won't feel like an orphan either. Our Owner's Manual shows you how to handle all the routine service. You can tune and time your engine, change plugs and points, adjust the idle, the headlamps, the handbrakes, do nearly 40 different service operations.

And if you crease a fender or crack a grille, you can almost smile. Maverick's front fenders bolt on and grilles are replaceable in minutes. And where time means money, fast means savings.

Stop in once every 36,000 miles for a lube job. Oil changes are 6,000 miles apart. (The leading import suggests oil changes twice as often and lube jobs every 6,000 miles.)

While still being simple, Maverick is big enough to take the whole family—without streaming luggage from the roof. It's small enough to park easily, and go light on gas. A 105-hp Six gives you real passing power. (You get 52 more horsepower than the leading import offers.) And the wider stance gives you a smoother ride, better handling and roadability.

It's no accident that Maverick is the hottest selling new car to come along in five years. We designed it that way. See it at your Ford Dealer's.

Miss Neal is great in 'Roses'

Les Taylor of the Palace Theatre, Charlevoix, told the Courier this week, "When you come away from 'The Subject Was Roses' at the Palace, you will remember the glowing, beautiful performance given by Patricia Neal as the embittered mother of an Irish American family living in the Bronx.

"The MGM film version of Frank D. Gilroy's play, which won the Pulitzer Prize, the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award and the "Tony" Award, marks Miss Neal's first appearance on the screen since winning her Oscar for her work in "Hud," and she again proves herself an incomparable actress.

"But there are other fine performances in this moving and compelling drama of emotional conflicts and the need for love. Jack Albertson, as the father of the Cleary family, and Martin Sheen as Timmy, the son who returns home after three years in the Amy during World War II to find that things are not the same, enact the roles they created in the original Broadway play. The are both excellent.

"Jack Albertson won the Academy Award for his Best Supporting Actor performance in 'The Subject Was Roses.'

"If you sincerely appreciate a very fine 'movie' based almost entirely in a Bronx Apartment, you should enjoy this-otherwise, don't waste your time and spoil it for others. We recommend it very highly."

Abortion

(Ed. note: The following 'Viewpoint' is written by Mrs. John Tantnn of Petoskey, chairman of the Michigan Women for Medical Control of Abortion. It is written in response to another view expressed in last week's Courier.)

If no abortions were being done, critics of abortion law reform might have a point. The fact of the matter is that abortions are being done. A 1968 questionnaire sent to Michigan physicians indicates 15,000 women requested abortions. It is not known how many of these women resorted to self-induced or criminal abortions. It is known that criminal abortions are the leading cause of maternal death in our nation. An estimated one out of every five American women will have an "out-of-the-hospital" abortion by age 45. Only one-third of these will have the services of a medical doctor; the remaining 650,000 will risk death or crippling at the hands of the criminal abortionist.

The present abortion law in Michigan accomplishes two things: forces women to have children they don't want, or to have an illegal abortion. It does note prevent them from having an abortion. What strange satisfaction derives from forcing a mother to the haunts of the criminal abortionist? Or from promoting compulsory pregnancy? To quote Dr. James Lieberman, chief, Center for Studies of Child and Family Mental Health at the National Institute of Mental Health, "Pregnancy as punishment for sex has not been notably effective."

It has been suggested your readers "look at the places where such laws have been enacted and see what is happening.."

In June 1967 the California Legislature passed what was hailed in some quarters (and damned in others) as a "liberal" reform of the laws governing abortion. Yet under the new law...

A couple of modest means, parents of two idiot children sought, and were refused a hospital abortion to terminate the wife's accidental pregnancy. She bore a third idiot child.

A 17 year-old girl was seduced by an older man who was driving her home from a babysitting job. Her request for an abortion was denied. In an effort to abort the child, she leaped off the roof of her family garage and died in the fall.

A married woman was raped and became pregnant. Medical authorities approved an abortion, but the district attorney vetoed it on the grounds that her husband might really be the father of the child. The child was born, deeply resented by its "parents."

During 1968 nearly 5,000 legal abortions were reported in California, a sevenfold increase above the estimated rate of therapeutic abortions before the new law. Yet these figures don't begin to make a dent in the estimated 100,000 dangerous illegal abortions performed in California each year. The "abortion mill" in that state remains in the "office" of the criminal abortionist! The total effect of that law has been so far from what its boosters had envisioned that some of the men and women who pressed for its passage are now trying to get an initiative on the ballot to have this...and the 1872 abortion law itself...repealed.

It must be borne in mind that contraceptives are not available to more than a fraction of the 5,000,000 underprivileged women of childbearing age who need and in most cases want them. An estimated 4,500,000 have not practical access to contraceptives at all. Must these women be subject to "compulsory pregnancy" and "unwanted, unloved, uncared for" children? Certainly a prime birthright of every human being is to be wanted and loved... would we wish it otherwise?

The public in Michigan has developed an increasing awareness of the problems of public health. We have mustered our public and private health forces in a concerted attack on venereal disease. We no longer pretend V.D. doesn't exist, nor do we refuse to treat it. But in the abortion field where we deal primarily with the married (85 per cent-90 percent), we ignore the problem and create what credible statisticians estimate is the third most extensive illegal and criminal apparatus in the nation.

"In a democratic secular society, those who oppose abortion should not deny medical protection to those who do not oppose it.." The foregoing is from a statement of beliefs of the Michigan Women for Medical Control of Abortion. The following groups are among those urging reform or repeal of existing abortion laws:

Michigan State Medical Society, American Medical Association, American Public Health Ass'n., American College of Obstetricians and Gynocologists, Florence Crittenton Ass'n. of America, Metropolitan Detroit Council of Churches, National YWCA, Detroit YWCA, Protestant Episcopal Church—Diocese of Michigan, Detroit Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, Unitarian Universalist Ann'n., American Baptist Convention, American Friends Service Committee, American Civil Liberties Union, Planned Parenthood—World Population.

In Michigan, 95 per cent of non-Catholic physicians, and 56 per cent of Catholic physicians have indicated they favor reform or repeal of Michigan's Abortion law.

Some segments of our society are not exhibiting the same love and concern for existing children in need, as for the unborn! Katherine Finseth, MD, states "There is a distinction between the unborn fetus, and the infant viable outside the uterus, in terms of the role that our social and medical institutions can play in its support. There is a distinction between the attitudes of the society uterine existence. In a society in which there are current problems of child neglect, maternal misery, and considerable numbers of illegitimatepregnancies, these distinctions must be considered. In a world with prospects of overcrowding and major famines before the end of this century, these distinctions must be considered."

Questions School Board

To the Editor and the Charlevoix School Administration:

Not having been available to attend all of the public meetings and discussions held on the present school situation, I have had to get my information from the local news media, conversations with private citizens, and the local school board members. I am entirely dissatisfied with the school board attitude as concerns our school system finances. Apparently, the board is not satisfied with the outcome of the millage vote. It cannot accept the choice of the majority of the electors. This seems to be apparent by the almost childish reaction exhibited by the present board.

Let's, for example, take the question of the one mill request for a "materials" center. Originally, at a past P.T.A. meeting, this was quoted as one-half mill. It was also earmarked for the "Materials" center. The P.T.A. executive board was in favor of this. The request then escalated to one mill, to go into the general library fund. Nonsense on this type of false advertising.

We might also look at the adult education program which, the board assured me, was self-supporting with the Mott Foundation Grant. The grant was refused and adult education cancelled. I have to admit, this makes an impression on the general public, but not in the manner expected. I, for one, get highly perturbed at this type of forced thinking.

Another point which should be explained is this: How do you reconcile hiring another principal for our school system, when we have already been informed that one school will not open? Presently we have three principals and we'll have two schools. The board of education must have something in mind unbeknown to the general public. Save his wages and continue the sports and music programs.

Here are a few questiona that I have unanswered which should be of some concern. 1. Is it possible, as the past millage request has been refused by a majority of the taxpayers of the district twice, to scale down the request to possibly two mills and base your operation on this? 2. Will you, the school administrators please back up the juvenile authorities and your school principals in all matters of discipline and laws, rather than side step or soft pedal the issues for fear of antagonizing a few people? I'm sure you know what I refer to. 3. In reference to student counciling, make some immediate changes, so that all students are regularly approached and advised as they should be. You have well qualified and respected teachers who can do this so that all students realize their potential.

I am tired of being told that I do not have enough knowledge and information on school problems to be able to vote in an intelligent fashion. For my part, you can stop telling me I am depriving my children and yours because I have not met your demands. If you cannot accept and pattern your thinking in the direction of the majority of the voters, then look for people who can adjust their thinking to replace you. You represent the community and should be able to abide by its wishes.

I am proud of my community, and my school system. Based on your standards, I have lost my pride because I refused your requests. Rest assured, I haven't. If you cannot maintain my pride in these areas, I will look and work for someone who can. You have made your promises and decisions and guarantees. I have made mine, as a concerned parent and taxpayer.

Sincerely,
Ralph W. Doan

'Fine city'

Dear Sir:

It certainly warms one's heart to live in such a fine city as Charlevoix. Here we are all able to enjoy some of the finer things of life.

It makes one proud to see that we Charlevoixans can afford such luxuries as new boats and trailers for potential coho and lake trout runs. It seems difficult to realize that the registration of such craft and trailer along with the licenses and stamps to fish cost in the $35.00 range.

It seems good we Charlevoixans can afford to play golf. With such reasonable rates as $50.00 per local family and the lost ball costing only a buck or so, who can go wrong? Not to mention the twenty-five cent Nassau bets.

It seems nice that we Charlevoixans can enter two or three bowling leagues each fall, or perhaps just be able to take the family out to bowl a couple games on the weekends.

It is great that during the winter we Charlevoixans can afford the pleasure of skiing. We can afford the cost of equipment, the cost of today's stylish attire as well as the cost of two tickets.

It is fine that we Charlevoixans can afford the thousand dollars it costs for the snow machine and trailer along with its accessories.

It doesn't matter if we Charlevoixans sit in a tavern for several hours daily or sit in the Wednesday night poker session and drop twenty-five or thirty bucks because we can afford it. We are the big spenders.

Yet, we Charlevoixans cannot afford to give our children the complete education they so need to compete in today's world. No one knows how we voted; no one except the natural community leaders of tomorrow. . .our kids.

Sincerely yours,

Dave Fowler

Sports and band... pros and cons

Everybody has a special interest...twist it, turn it, color it, coat it...no matter what the flavor or shape, your "bag" is going to show.

And this may be the biggest tragedy of the present drive to force a third millage election in the Charlevoix School District.

Two groups with vested interests are pleading with the School Board to hold another election. Only one ONE other group is concerned with the EDUCATION of our youngsters. This group of interested parents requested the Board to restore remedial reading to the scholastic program.

The two special interest groups want athletics and band in the program.

Not a single person in the district wants to see either of these items removed from our schools. Both sports and band are important parts of the overall school life of our pupils.

At public meetings, these groups have stressed the "espirit de corps" that an athletic program nutures. What these groups have admitted publicly is that "our students aren't excited by algebra" or literature or history. They admitted last Thursday night they would NOT approve of a compromise millage (say 2.75 or 3 for the sake of argument) if all EDUCATIONAL programs were restored to the program, but athletics and band were not.

What these vested interest groups have apparently failed to consider...or more likely, do not want to consider...is that barrells of this highly-touted "espirit de corps" is absolutely worthless if Johnny cannot read, express himself clearly or establish a simple household budget.

What we would produce is a "gung ho" unskilled worker... and these days, they are a dime a dozen and their worth is dropping every day.

How many of our graduates are making their living in the fields of professional athletics or musicians?...darn fewll

Are we asking our school system to give our youngsters a few memories which will not help him put food on his family's table, or do we want him to receive the training and preparation which will allow him to make a good living?

We feel that all our school district voters must make an agonizing reappraisal.

* * * * *

It has become obvious that members of the district CAN become interested in our schools...this was not shown prior to the program cuts.

If this trend can be maintained, and then expanded, some good may yet come from unfortunate situation which now exists.

Yet, it is most important we become equally excited and concerned about the true purpose of our schools, and not just the frills such as football and band.

To restore athletics and band to the program before important educational projects like remedial reading, the coop program, vocational ed and the like, would be a sad mistake.

When it is all said and done, public schools have the responsibility of preparing youngsters for ONLY two purposes: Further education (college, trade school, etc.) or the basic knowledge and ability to take their place in the working world.

Athletics and band perform neither of these services. They must take their place at the very end of the list of priorities.

Curious lexicon

While we have seldom admired John Kenneth Galbraith's inventive views of the United States economy, we have often admired his inventive use of the English language. There can be too much of a good thing, though, as Prof. Galbraith's recent views on campus and assorted violence attest.

In a commencement address the other day, Mr. Galbraith commented on recent altercations at Harvard. "I am not a defender of the tactic of taking over buildings as a protest, but at my own university as elsewhere the violence was commanded not by those who were guilty of this rather unwise tactic, but by those who spoke most unctuously against it. It was they and not the students who induced the action that cracked the heads."

He referred, naturally, to the use of police and nightsticks to evict students occupying the administration building. These poor innocents, he suggests, would never dream of using violence for their own ends. Or, as the New York Times described it back then:

"As the students entered the building they roughed up several deans who refused to leave their offices. Robert B. Watson, dean of students, was shoved and dragged thru the halls, along with F. Skiddy von Stade, dean of freshmen, and Archie C. Epps, an assistant dean of freshmen.

Another assistant dean of freshmen, James E. Thomas, was picked up by a student and carried out over the youth's shoulder like a sack of old potatoes.

"The other deans forced from their offices were Dean (Franklin L.) Lord (of the faculty of arts and letters); John P. Elder, dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences Fred L. Glimp, dean of Harvard college; and Burris Young and William Russell, assistant freshmen deans."

None of this qualifies as violence in Prof. Galbraith's notice. In his curious lexicon, it seems you do not have violence when a mob manhandles the deans. Only when the deans call the police for help.

Credit crunch

By Hank Hogan

It should be obvious to anyone who is trying to borrow money that we are in the middle of a "credit crunch." Money is tremendously scarce these days, yet everyone seems to be experiencing the largest paycheck they ever had.

Why then is money scarce, and what does the Federal Reserve have to do with it?

It all boils down to how money is created. We know the United States government creates money by printing it, but this is only a small percentage of the money outstanding.

In February of this year the U.S. money supply totaled $192 billion, but only $44 billion was created money.

THIS CREATED money occurs from the activity of banks.

We all understand that a bank makes money by lending out the deposits of its customers for a price which we call interest. But what most people don't understand is that banks are not limited in lending to the amount of the deposits of their customers. They merely have to keep a legal reserve, which means that every time they make a loan they are creating credit money which far exceeds the original deposits.

The Federal Reserve is charged with regulating the operations of the nation's banks. If, in their judgment, the business cycle is moving too rapidly in the direction of inflation, the Fed has three courses of action to reduce the excess reserves and therefore tighten the money supply.

UNDER THE theory of supply and demand, if credit is tight then there will be fewer demands and the supply will catch up and balance off prices.

Of the three courses of action the Fed has at its disposal, one is to up required reserve ratios that banks have to maintain. If a bank has to keep a reserve of, say, 30 percent instead of slightly under 20 percent there are that many fewer dollars it can lend out.

The second alternative is to alter the discount rate. If a bank runs short of its legal reserve it can temporarily borrow money from the Federal Reserve at an interest rate, which is called the discount rate.

If the Federal Reserve raises its so-called discount rate, or interest rate, higher than banks reasonably can lend the money for, then banks would be discouraged from borrowing money from the Fed and therefore unable to expand the money supply by lending more money.

THE THIRD ALTERNATIVE the Fed has at its disposal is called open market operations. They have in their portfolio a large supply of federal securities such as bonds.

THE REAL PROBLEM is that they are dealing with a very ticklish situation. If they cut down the money supply too much they may reduce inflation, but might cause a recession, and it would be difficult to get our economy going again.

This all sounds very textbookish, but in its attempt to cut down the inflation the Federal Reserve may be so shaking up the financial community that the cure would put us in an extended recession.

If that happened the cure for inflation would certainly be much worse that the disease.

Little League

Who ever said Little League baseball was just for kids? I'm convinced the whole idea of organized competition is as good for the adults as it is for the kids. I also am convinced that kids need not fall victim to unrealistic pressures of parents and adults, which of course is the argument those opposed to organized competition raise.

For example, I watched a Little League game recently in which the coach, exasperated by a boy attempting to steal second base, slammed his notebook to the ground in disgust and gave a real Len Durocher kick to a clump of dirt that disintegrated about as fast as the emotional flareup.

I ENJOYED the event. None of the adults really hollered at the kid, although his teammates were a little down on him. And who wouldn't be a little annoyed during a close game when a base-runner attempts to steal second with base-runners already standing on second and third while the catcher has the ball.

Perhaps other men with less concern for the feelings of the young athletes may have berated the errant baserunner. To the everlasting credit of this frustrated coach, he bothered nobody and put a little color into the game while he was doing it.

And, too, I am discovering that watching kids in competition may build up an element of maturity in parents that they might not otherwise get. I think it takes a balanced emotional discipline to watch your kid take a called strike at a fast ball over the heart of the plate and take the swinging route another occasion with a ball over his head.

There's also a certain something to be said for the maturity of parents who, while perhaps enjoying whatever praise their kids get from teammates, are able to cover hurt egos with a smile when those same teammates clobber the kid with all the names that generally go to a bungling athlete.

I REMEMBER the games of baseball where you chose sides by seeing whose hand came closest to the top of a bat. One gets a fairly good appreciation of his athletic ability when he is among the last to be chosen. One also gets a pretty good evaluation of the kid who never was chosen but who always hung around for those occasions when there might not be enough of the good guys around.

So there's something to be said for a system like Little League that gives everybody a chance. And, after all, isn't that what our system owes everybody? And hats off to the men and women who add their own special color to the system. It adds something for the adult patrons of the game who sit out those cold sundowns without letting the final score distort basic values.

25 years & 70 lbs. later

I just got a dirty letter from Bill Ricketts. He said our high school class graduated 25 years ago this month and we should have a party. What a clown.

The first thing I did was subtract 1944 from 1969. Then I proved my answer by adding it to 1944. Then, for the first time, I looked at the numbers on my Playboy calendar to make sure it was 1969. I then phoned my mother to make sure it had been 1944.

But no matter what I did, it kept coming up 25. Ricketts is right. It would have been nice if he'd just kept his mouth shut, but he is right.

It was just the other evening that my sweet 13 daughter said I wouldn't look so fat if I didn't have so many chins.

"I guess I eat too much," I admitted.

"Don't you swallow it?" she asked.

I AM NOT too keen on driving to Port Huron to parade my chins before St. Stephen Class of '44. No one will recognize me. When I was a high schooler, I was so skinny my shadow was embarrassed and kept falling behind me, trying to act as if it were with someone else. As a result, my shadow didn't graduate until 1948.

I remember lots of things about those skinny days...

There was the day Fred Ceglarek pushed me through a school window. We were brought before Father McCormick where, under pain of mortal sin, we promised to make restitution. I'll bet that bum Fred hasn't paid his half yet. Which makes 2 of us.

I remember handsome Bobby Patterson who wowed the girls and drove a new Buick in the 8th grade (I may have written that in the wrong order). He defected to military school for a couple of years but returned in time to get me in lots of trouble. Bob later taught at St. Stephen which was similar to making Al Capone warden of Alcatraz.

The graduating class president was Bill Hubbell. He was going to be a priest until he met a girl named Peaches, of all things. He married her. And, the way things are going these days, he may still become a priest. "Here comes Father Hubbell and Peaches." I like the sound of that.

I remember buying cigarets for a penny each at Grandma Abdou's store across the street. Her grandson Joe was a classmate, the toughest kid in the room. The last time I saw him he owned a bar and raced horses and was still single. It pays to be tough. Just ask us sissies.

I remember the place to meet your girlfriend after school was in the last pew of St. Stephen Church. The girl I met for years finally wised up and married a golf pro. They also tore down the church and any day now the Pope may announce that St. Stephen was a phony.

I remember how World War II changed the curriculum. A nun who used to teach literature was suddenly teaching aeronautics. She didn't know an airplane from a scooter but this was war.

I remember a classmate named Tommy Knapp who didn't graduate. He dropped out early to join the army and, by commencement day, he was dead in Europe.

A war waited for most of the boys then. Now, 25 years later, another war waits for our sons. This is progress?

All hail the Class of '44. And do have another drink.

ON THE 'FLIP' SIDE

FACT:

No sooner did the Charlevoix School Board officially begin trimming the frills (to some) from next term's budget, than another citizens' committee was formed to petition the Board for another millage election in August.

QUESTION:

Where, in the name of heaven, were these citizens' committees in March and April, before the first VITAL millage vote.

FACT:

The new committee wants athletics and band restored to the school program through a compromise request of 2.8 mills.

QUESTION:

Why is the citizenry so interested in extra curricular activities and seemingly unconcerned about curriculum? Does the electorate hold a distorted view of the purpose of public schools?

FACT:

Many think the budget request reflects waste and extravagance, and less money would do the job as well.

QUESTION:

How come all these "experts" in education and finance do not run for the School Board and do something about it, rather than turn meetings into shouting matches? Is the policy-maker the one who makes the most noise?

OPINION:

The quality of the voter is self-reflected when the only time he cares is when tax dollars are involved. At other times, he couldn't care less about what happens in the school system. CASES IN POINT: Absurd FAILURE of this spring's Sports Banquet; complete apathy of residents as proven by lack of attendance at twice-a-month Board meetings.

RESULT:

The unfortunate mess you now have.

Prayer written by an anonymous person tired of the trend toward a welfare state:

The government is my shepherd, therefore I need not work. It alloweth me to lie down on a good job. It leadeth me beside still factories; it destroyeth my initiative. It leadeth me in the path of a parasite for politic's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of laziness and deficit-spending, I will fear no evil, for the government is with me. It prepareth an economic utopia for me, by appropriating the earnings of my own grandchildren. It filleth my head with false security; my inefficiency runneth over. Surely the government should care for me for all the days of my life!! And I shall dwell in a fool's paradise forever.

Opponents of waste in welfare expenditures will be pleased to learn that the social services department of New York City recently turned down demands of a "client" that he receive a welfare allowance to, among other things, purchase a trotting horse, keep wine on the table, buy law books, and purchase a television.

Of course, the department had been paying his golfing expenses because of his "special therapeutic" needs, and the district attorney investigating the case says special allowances were also given the 31-year-old man to make up for losses at the race track.

Somehow we think that is defining the "bare necessities" just a bit too broadly.

until he investigated the circumstances.

Wagner also said he had not been invited to the session.

Kenney said he learned of the meeting at Kiwanis, Monday night. "You cannot be angry when a group of private citizens hold a meeting. Remember, Donaldson and England are not Board members until tomorrow," he added.

Milligan also was made aware of the meeting through the Kiwanis meeting. "I have no comment to make at this time," he told the Courier.

Donaldson was asked to comment on the meeting yesterday morning. "The School Board has a building progress report this morning (Tuesday). I'll probe at that meeting."

According to Donaldson, he has developed a school program at a reduced budget, and will "firm up" his figures and present a budget at next Monday's Board meeting based on 2.5 to 2.75 mills.

"Virtually everything has been retained in the program," he stated. "Cuts were made in home economics, transportation, administration and clerical fields."

The Courier also learned that Donaldson advocates cutting back one teacher more in the elementary program.

The new Board member also said there was "no exclusion reason" for not inviting Board members or the superintendent.

England was also at the meeting and told the Courier yesterday that he wanted to study Donaldson's proposal before commenting.

"I hope it was a worthwhile meeting. There are situations which need looking into. With as big a budget as our schools have, we need items such as job descriptions and better defined areas of responsibilities."

Concerning Monday's meeting, England stated that he "was invited. I didn't know who was or was not invited. I am sorry that the Board was not there. We need cooperation at this time....we must work together, not against each other, to resolve our problems. I was there merely as a spectator."

'Concerts in the park' open season tonight

The 1969 series of "Concerts in the Park" will begin tonight at 8:30 p.m.

Presented by the Charlevoix City Band, directed by C.A. Odmark the program will feature fine band literature, ranging from the works of Ralph Vaughn Williams to John Philip Sousa.

The City Band, an institution in Charlevoix, has a history of over 40 years of weekly summer concerts. Supported by the City, the band is composed of over 40 volunteer musicians who donate their time and talents to the cause of "making music".

Rehearsals are held weekly throughout the year, and tonight's concert will be the first of nine, all scheduled for the stage in East Park.

There is no admission charges and residents and visitors to Charlevoix are invited to the sessions.

Odmark reports that French horn, cornet and saxophone players are still needed. Anyone interested in joining the group should contact him at Charlevoix High School or at his home.

For program details of tonight's concert, see Page 11 of the Courier.

The typing course scheduled for summer school has been canceled, according to Glenn Snider, principal of the elementary school.

Snider stated that 12 persons were needed to make the course self-supporting. Only eight showed up for the first day, forcing the cancellation.

Remedial reading and arithmetic are being offered this summer, along with Project Head Start.

Jack Rader named School Board prexy

The Charlevoix Board of Education has a new president. Jack Rader, who is starting his fourth year on the Board, was elected the new president at the annual organizational meeting, last Wednesday night.

Rader will be replacing Glenn Kenney as the head of the seven man board.

The newly elected vice president is Jerrald Redeker, and Mrs. Robert (Frances) Hooper was re-elected to the position of secretary and Dale Boss to treasurer.

Charles England and Richard Donaldson were sworn in as two new Board members, Burr Blanchard completes the Board as the seventh member.

There was a brief discussion concerning the proposed sewer line joining the new elementary school with the city sewer system by crossing the Gregory Shadko property from Division Avenue to Petoskey Avenue. Legal aspects of the proposal were discussed by attorney Donald Berlage. Due to a misunderstanding about several phases of the proposal, Rader asked Blanchard and Berlage to arrange a meeting with Shadko and his legal advisor to iron out all legal problems. Rader asked for a quick response to close out all problems as soon as possible.

Donaldson had prepared a proposed budget to be presented to the Board. He was asked to make his presentation to the members and approximately 40 interested persons who attended the meeting.

Donaldson used the Board's budget, which was prepared earlier, as a basis for his figures in his presentation.

He proposed the following items: cut the noon hour supervision cost from $4,900 by $2,500 by reducing the number back to five supervisory personel for all three schools, and by allowing two each at the elementary and middle schools and one at the high school; cut library salaries in the K-4 school from $10,000 to $3,000; cut the cost of the middle grade librarians' salaries by $2,000 to $4,020; cut high school librarians' salaries by $6,000 or from $18,230 as proposed to $12,230; reduce $1,000 from clerical help for administration or back to $3,224; cut the cost of a mechanic at the bus garage from $7,700 by $3,850 by either having a part-time mechanic or contracting the work to a regular mechanic; eliminate the town bus and have all children living less than one and a half miles from the school walk, saving $1,000. He also made other proposals which would reduce the budget for office supplies for administration by $500 and travel expenses for the same group by $200.

Donaldson's budget would eliminate $3,500 for plant maintenance equipment. Milligan said that under this classification come such items as mechanical breakage, repairs and replacement which have been as low as $8,200 and as high as $13,000, paint, and various other items within the framework of maintenance. He further proposed to cut the cafeteria costs from $2,000 to $1,000, by increasing the cost of meals in the cafeteria.

Further cuts in the budget would be: cut the proposed salary increases for non-teaching personnel from the proposed $11,493 to $6,293; cut the proposed budget for extra curricular activities by $7,809 cutting two of the football and two of the basketball coaches as well as the athletic director, all class sponsors, all club sponsors, the summer band program and eliminate two elementary teachers. By doing that, it would increase the student-teacher ratio to 31-1 for a saving of $14,000.

He would also eliminate the administrative assistant by cutting back the adult education program and other work that accompanied the position, $13,000.

With his proposal a saving of $70,709 would result. By using the same figures as have been established by the Board, or $1,043,898, the budget could be cut back to $973,189. Various sources of revenue, including $8,000 for book rentals, would leave only $101,011 to be raised by additional millage. Donaldson felt this

Dr. John Lignell

Dr. Lignell new chief at Hospital

Dr. John H. Lignell was elected Chief of the Medical Staff of the Charlevoix Hospital on July 1.

Dr. Lignell is a graduate of the University of Michigan College of Medicine and took his postgraduate training at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids. Dr. Lignell served in the United States Air Force as a physician from 1960 to 1962. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the American Academy of General Practice, the Michigan Academy of General Practice, the Michigan State Medical Society and the Northern Michigan Medical Society.

Dr. Lignell has been practicing medicine in Charlevoix for the past six years and has previously held several offices on the medical staff of the Charlevoix Hospital.

Dr. Lignell is also a member of the board of directors of the Charlevoix Lions Club and a member of the Charlevoix Congregational Church.

Dr. and Mrs. Lignell and their four children live at 423 Michigan Avenue in Charlevoix.

Council to seek closer contact with Chamber

City Council discussed the upcoming Venetian Festival at length Monday evening, in a relatively quiet meeting.

Through the confab, Council concluded it knows little about plans for the two-day event, and generally agreed that a closer association with the Chamber of Commerce should be instigated.

The city fathers also unofficially agreed to share the cost of fireworks for the festival, and possibly appoint a liaison between the Chamber and Council.

Councilman Thomas Hanna answered one councilman's question concerning reports that the Charlevoix float did not appear in the Jordan Valley Festival parade last Saturday as planned.

Hanna said that an attempt was made to get the float to the parade, but the canvas covering could not be properly secured and the float was returned to the city before completing the trip.

SHADKO APPEARS

Gregory Shadko appeared before Council to ask why the city would not accept his proposal to place the sewer line from the new elementary school to Petoskey Avenue across his undeveloped property.

"The city could accept an easement, which gives them the same rights as if streets, roads and alleyways were dedicated on the property," Shadko claimed.

Mayor William Fochtman told Shadko that the city is reluctant to accept the sewer line until the property is platted, and the line is placed on a dedicated street in the development.

City attorney John Michael agreed that, from a legal viewpoint, the city should only accept such a utility if the property was dedicated. "Easements are usually taken by a municipality only when streets, roads and alleys have been established or the area is platted," Michael stated.

Fochtman added that the city does not object to Shadko and the School Board agreeing to a plan and putting the line across the property.

The mayor added that the city would most likely accept the line and take over maintenance when the approval is given to the final platte.

PARKING REQUEST

In other business, Council received a request from the United States Coast Guard for 25 parking spaces in the public lot near the berth of the Cutter Sundew.

Council noted that the Coast Guard is presently leased ten spaces for $1 per year, and the lot is filled constantly during the summer months by visitors to the city.

Council agreed to renew the lease under the same terms.

After awarding a curb and gutter contract to Tri Cities Concrete of Charlevoix at their last meeting, Council notified the company it must provide the city with a performance bond for the job by July 11 or the contract would be recinded and awarded to another bidder.

ACCEPT BIDS

Council also awarded a contract for blacktop material to Hodgkiss and Douma at the price of $9.50 per ton.

A bid for a sewer rodding machine was accepted from the O'Brien Company at the price of $3,947.70.

The Jordan Valley Festival parade treated thousands to 90 minutes of bands, floats and novelty groups.

HAMILTON & SON

Two generations after Sam Hamilton founded his boatyard finds grandson Bob Hamilton still at work helping seamen to maintain their boats.

Service for 60 years

Hamilton & Son home port for sailboaters

Sailors and sailing vessels have sought Charlevoix as a safe harbor ever since sailboats first came to northern Michigan waters, and for about the last 60 years of that time the Hamilton Boatyard on the shore of Round Lake has continuously serviced these sailboats.

Around the turn of the century Sam Hamilton went into the boat business when he began to rent sailboats and row boats. The row boats were used to row across from the Belvedere Bayou to the Charlevoix business district and to the Chicago Club. With only 40 feet of property on Round Lake, Sam Hamilton established the first boatyard in Charlevoix. In 1931 he drowned at Northport when the boat he was on burned.

After Sam Hamilton's death his son Ray S. Hamilton took over the business and it prospered hosting and servicing large sailboats that plied the Great Lakes.

In 1960 Robert Hamilton grandson of the founder took over a business in which he had been well grounded. Bob Hamilton was only nine years old when he began working on Julius Gilbert's powerboat. After that as a young boy he worked on Mr. Ware's sailboat and on other sailboats for every summer of his life with the exception of the war years when he was in the service.

The Hamilton Boatyard is a working boatyard with the only marine railway on Round Lake. This railway can haul sailboats of up to 60 feet or 40 tons. The men at Hamilton's can overhaul a sailboat from stem to stern so that it looks and sails like a much younger boat and they have been doing this for many years.

Some sailboats have changed owners over the years, but have still called Hamilton's Boatyard home. One of the oldest of these is the Frolic which is now owned by Jack Rader and has been kept at Hamilton's for 30 years. The Cygnus, and the Comanche have been stored and maintained by Hamilton's for many years.

The same old families have been coming to the boatyard for sailboat service for as long as 50 years. Old and distinguished Charlevoix resort names are listed with Hamilton's Boatyard, such as John P. Wilson, Tom Adler, Bill Witherspoon, Fred Schaub and Henry Stein. All of these men are sailboat buffs.

After the Mackinac race each year Hamilton's Boatyard is a traditional stopping place for the Matina, Fortuna, Esbrow, Blitzen, 8th Girl, Bangalore, Gypsy, Aria and Wind-Song.

In the last two years Bob Hamilton has gone into a new business. It is a partnership with Dr. James W. Rae and the company is called Hamilton and Associate Yacht Sales. This company sells Mariners, a boat built by the Far East ship building company of Yokuska, Japan. The company of Hamilton and Associates charters Mariners and Hamilton & Son charter customer sailboats such as the Sundowner, the Siesta and the Comanche. These new ventures combined with a tradition of good service should continue to make Hamilton's Boatyard the goal for Great Lakes sailors.

Hobby, craft show is Sat.

Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce manager Wally Loder announced today that up to 50 entries are expected in the Lakeside Hobby and Craft Show this Saturday.

"We expect a large number of entries and hope this will become an annual event," Loder said.

The show will be held in East Park, beginning at 10 a.m. and continuing into the early evening.

Hobbyists will display their wares, and Loder said the public will find a wide variety of crafts and hobbies in the show.

County observes July 4

Charlevoix County's July 4 celebration took on large proportions in several communities.

In Boyne City, events began Fridan morning with a pet parade, followed by the city's traditional parade. A band concert opened the evening's schedule, and a large fireworks display concluded the day's outdoor events.

Saturday saw a horse show held.

In East Jordan, the Jordan Valley Festival hosted thousands of countians and visitors. Highlights of the festival included sno-mobile drag races, a parade and fireworks.

In Charlevoix, the biggest turnouts apparently were at beaches and the golf course.

Keith Carey, Municipal Golf Course pro, reported that 860 golfers teed off during the long weekend.

Day ticket sales set a new record Saturday, when 153 were purchased by golfers. Averaging the 325 who teed off Saturday, Carey figured that a foursome started every eight minutes for 10 hours.

County doctor total up by 2; area physicians want 2 more

Charlevoix County has gained two doctors in the past year, but it is still not enough, according to local physicians.

In a report released yesterday, the Michigan Health Council notes that, the county has, in active medical practice, eight M.D.'s and two osteopaths.

Each group picked up one new member in the past 12 months. The M.D. is Dr. Harry R. Custer of Charlevoix, and an additional osteopath has started his practice in Boyne City.

"Our ten doctors in the county are not enough," a Charlevoix physician stated today. "The doctors in the area feel there should be two more physicians to serve the residents."

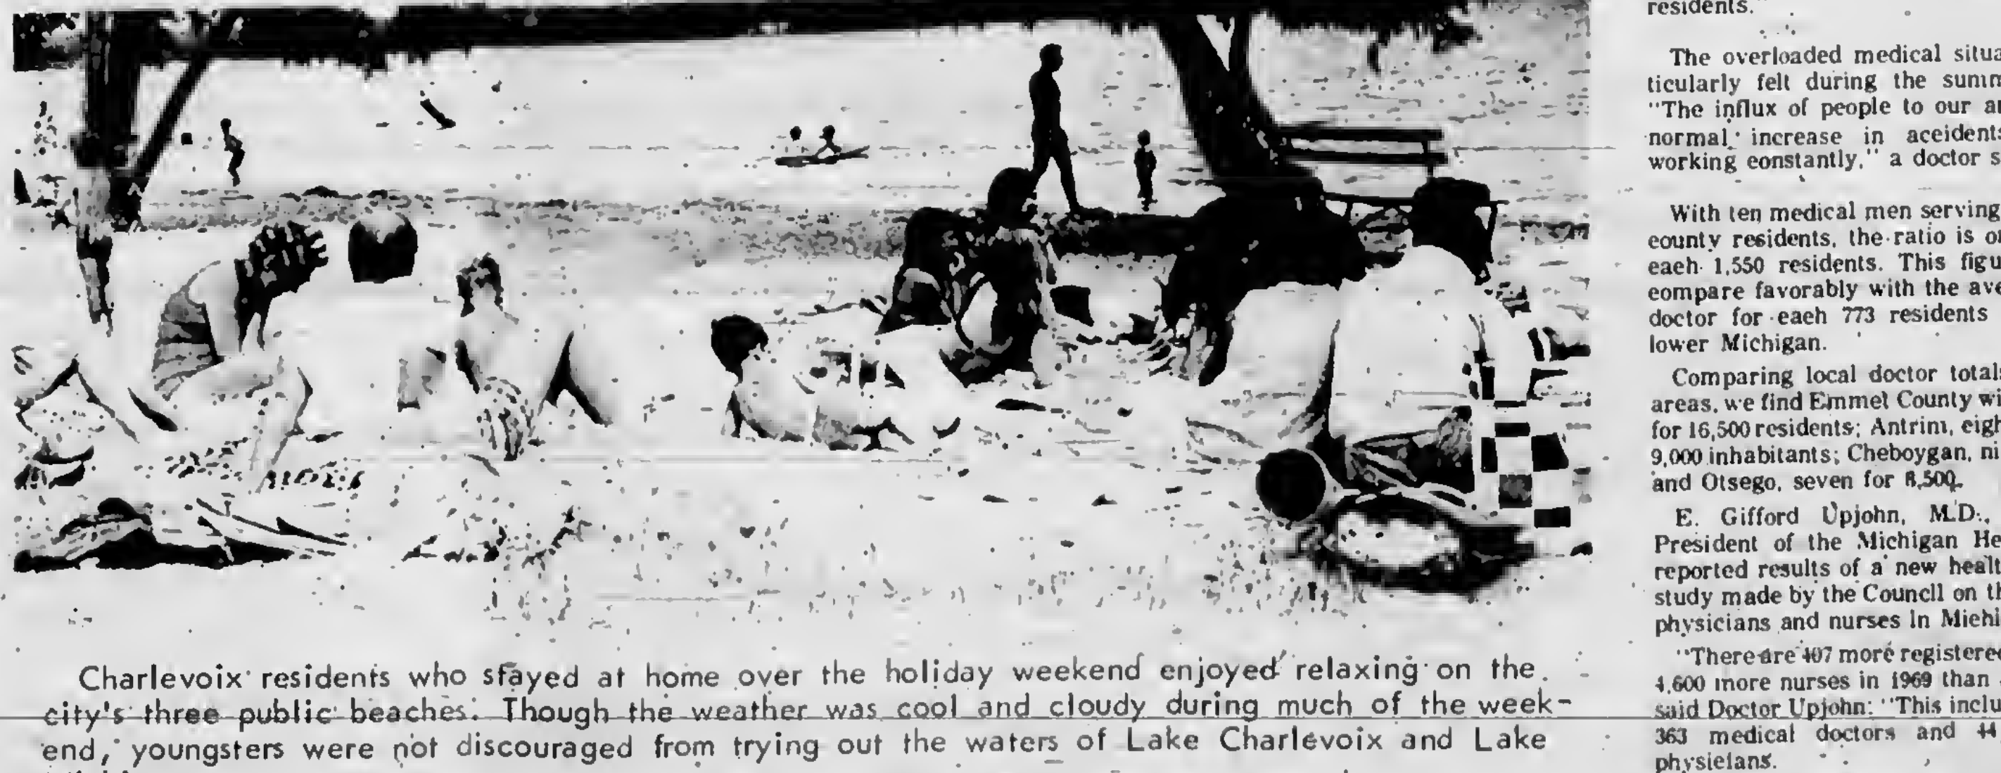
The overloaded medical situation is particularly felt during the summer months. "The influx of people to our area plus the normal increase in accidents keeps us working constantly," a doctor stated.

With ten medical men serving some 15,500 county residents, the ratio is one doctor to each 1,550 residents. This figure does not compare favorably with the average of one doctor for each 773 residents in Northern lower Michigan.

Comparing local doctor totals with other areas, we find Emmet County with 47 doctors for 16,500 residents; Antrim, eight doctors for 9,000 inhabitants; Cheboygan, nine for 14,000, and Otsego, seven for 8,500.

E. Gifford Upjohn, M.D., Kalamazoo, President of the Michigan Health Council reported results of a new health manpower study made by the Council on the number of physicians and nurses in Michigan.

"There are 407 more registered doctors and 4,600 more nurses in 1969 than a year ago," said Doctor Upjohn. "This includes a gain of 363 medical doctors and 44 osteopathic physicians.



Charlevoix residents who stayed at home over the holiday weekend enjoyed relaxing on the city's three public beaches. Though the weather was cool and cloudy during much of the weekend, youngsters were not discouraged from trying out the waters of Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan.

All is 'go' at Greilick

Camp Greilick, Boy Scouts of America, began its summer camping season on Sunday, June 29. Scouts from the 18 couunty Scenic Trails Council will be at the camp until August 23.

A new addition to the camp facilities is a nature conservation center. This area will function as a central area for all of the nature and conservation activities of the camp as well as the headquarters of the Scoutcraft Department.

A turtle pit has already been built and a snake pit is next on the agenda. It is hoped that some of the smaller mammals in the camp may be kept for observation by the campers. The scoutcraft director this year is Steve Freckleton, Tecumseh, a pre-med student at Adrian College. Tom Zaremba of Traverse City is the assistant scoutcraft director.

Louis Fivenson of Cadillac, smallcraft director, has been working for the past two weeks to ready the camp's fleet of six sailboats. Increased demand for already popular waterfront facilities necessitated the expansion of the sailing fleet and staff. Returning for his second year as waterfront director at Camp Greilick is Robb Gould of Alma.

Each troop that attends camp will be able to plan a program tailored to meet its special needs. Camp commissioner, Elver Carroll, will be helping Scoutmasters with their program planning. In the area of advancement, most of the outdoor merit badges will be offered, as well as counseling in Second and First Class skills.

Two Camp programs to which visitors are invited are tentatively planned for Wednesday and Friday evenings. A special campfire featuring skits by the campers and camp staff is planned for each Wednesday evening at 8:30. On Friday night at 9, Indian Drum Lodge, Order of the Arrow, will present a program of Indian Dances.

Chamber Chat

BY WALLY LODER

WANTED: Street dancing for teenagers, Venetian Festival, Saturday evening, July 26, on State Street. NEEDED: Sponsors. We should have fireworks, also.

Les Taylor, owner-operator of Palace Theater, Charlevoix, has come up with a fine gesture which will show on the screen as such: "CHARLEVOIX, 'The Beautiful,' presents two NATIONALLY FAMOUS annual SUMMER SPECTACLES for YOUR ENJOYMENT and ENTERTAINMENT.

"THE VENETIAN FESTIVAL," climaxed with it's EXOTIC DECORATED BOAT PARADE, on Round Lake.

"THE ART FAIR," consisting of PAINTINGS and ART OBJECTS displayed by AREA and NATIONAL ARTISTS."

"May we suggest you contact our local CHAMBER OF COMMERCE for dates and other desired information? Signed, the Management."

Remember the Harbor Springs Chamber of Commerce Clam Bake? Well, for 1969 it will be held at 5:30 p.m., July 11, at Holy Childhood Parish Hall. The "bill of fare" will include prepared live lobsters, and of course clams, roasted ears of corn, etc. Tickets will be on sale for $5 per ticket, on the first come, first served basis, contact Jerry Hoffman, general chairman.

The regular meeting of this Chamber's Board of Directors was Tuesday evening, and the meeting was called at 8:05 p.m., delayed somewhat because of the lack of a quorum. Present at roll call were President Miles, Dave Juilleret, Bruce Bartlett, and John Schroeder. Those appearing a little late were Larry LaGrow, Gordon Neff, and Tom Hanna. Absent were Tom Acton and Ralph Hess.

First order of business was review of the minutes of the last regular board meeting, June 3. It was indicated by LaGrow that each paragraph of these minutes had to do with necessary raising of money in order to carry on duties and obligations of this chamber, and time spent accordingly did not leave a great deal of time for other phases of operation for this chamber. There was considerable discussion, however, there were no corrections, omissions, etc., and Schroeder motioned to accept the minutes as they were, which was seconded by Bartlett; all voted in favor, and the motion was carried.

The secretary-manager was called upon for his report, and several routine matters were spoken of. Our cash receipts for June totaled $1,016.17. This included voting right memberships, contributions less than $40, $285 for the Waterfront Art Fair Committee registration fees, and $27 from the Lakeside Hobbycraft Show committee for registration fees. There was a total of $40 from two businesses to offset $1,000 share toward the golf tournament requirement. Disbursements for June totaled $1,866.71 which included $1,000 share toward the tournament, telephone, wages, printing, and other miscellaneous expenses.

Loder reminded the group that there was a little money in the bank, although at this time there were fixed expenses, which included paying Federal withholding tax, social security, etc. These fixed items will cut the balance considerably, and accordingly, he hopes again checks for membership and voluntary contributions will start coming in.

The cost of fireworks display for the Venetian Festival was discussed at length as to how to bring about $750. This issue is in the hands of a committee of two of the directors, which will report at a special meeting to be called sometime the week of July 7.

The matter of exhibiting the City of Charlevoix street parade float was discussed to some degree. It seems as though there was difficulty in getting someone to make the tow on a voluntary basis. Of course, we would expect to pay gasoline, and some token that is within reason of our affordability. One of the boys that handled the towing last year for two occasions has been available about town, and he fee is rather reasonable

There were no real highlights of interest to you good folks, and after further remarks and discussions of a variety of items, there was no new business, LaGrow motioned to adjourn the meeting, which was seconded by Schroeder, and the meeting was adjourned at 10 p.m.

Over in the Bay City area the chamber tried out "Chamber of Commerce Eye-Opener Breakfast Meetings", and it appears they have been quite successful. I am entertaining an idea to the effect that maybe Charlevoix needs a few eye-openers. Howza 'bout it?

Having to do with the Venetian Festival Street Parade, Saturday, July 26, starting at 2 p.m., any of you volunteers or interested persons or groups otherwise, please promptly be in touch with this office or the parade chairman, Tom Acton, or his assistant, Ken Empey. This affair takes people, volunteer entries, and takes many things that no one person or two can accomplish and there needs to be cooperation.

Fishing trip nets limit of trout

It looks as though the grown ups aren't the only ones catching the fish these days. Four local youngsters from Charlevoix joined in the fun and came up with a mighty fine representation of rainbow trout for their collection.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pardee, Route 1 Charlevoix, went out fishing and came home with quite a catch. Between the four children, they managed to catch 21 fish, including a sucker.

The children were Billy, 13, Wayne, 11, Roberta, 10, and Robert, 9. Each child had his limit of trout. One fish weighed in at five pounds, one at four pounds, and several fish measured up to 13 and 14 inches long.

It must have been an exciting day for the youngsters, and a busy afternoon to clean their catch. But by the looks of it, it was well worth the effort!

Camp Charlevoix

Corral Chatter

The first week of our 44th year started off with a real hard rain storm on Sunday night about midnight, adding to our already saturated grounds after all the rains of last week when the men were getting the camp ready for opening day. Monday morning and afternoon, the boys were given a 15 minute introduction to each of the camp activities, the men introducing themselves and telling how and what they were going to do in each activity. The boys were all wide-eyed and eager to know all about the 13 to 15 activities they will choose from. Naturally, the cowboys on their horses were a big attraction. After the afternoon activities were over, the first trips of the year left camp, and who should win this honor but two JUNIOR cabins. Cabins, 3 and 4 took off hiking down the road to the camp-site about a mile away deep in the woods along the lake. Ken Oakley and Chuck Osborn took their boys: John Jackson, Jim Cook, Todd Barrett, Gordon Doble, David Rentschler, and Mont Wickham. One of the heads of our trips dept., Curt Huber, took his boys, and his assistant counsellor along, Curt Bledsoe. The boys were Billy Gates, Mac Pfeiffer, Rex Buckley, Harry Heck, Bruce Johnson, Larry Webb, and David Taylor.

Tuesday was a beautiful day, with two more Junior Cabins taking to the road and walking down to our camp-craft area. Dave Tuttle and Mike Kelly took their boys, Mike Healey, Clay Lansill, John Harbeck, Mike Zoeller, David Howell, and Jeff Sandoe. Cabin 6 with Woody Roe and Dick Hartger was the other cabin, and these boys were: Cam Simmons, Michael Ziots, Don Sinnelli, Mike O'Connor, Bruce Rea, Stewart Connell, and John Breitinger. Activities were open all day and boys got a good start on the things they want this summer.

Wednesday was a bright, sunny, day and boys were busy with their chosen activity. The entire Intermediate Section with their counsellors hiked over to our camp-site on Susan Lake and camped for the night. They had their tents set up in an orderly way, and as it was a moonlit night, the boys really enjoyed it. The rest of the camp had a movie "The Monkey's Uncle", which the boys enjoyed.

Thrusday was another beautiful day, sunny though cool, and sunshine sure adds a lot to camping. Our two cabins of our smallest boys went over to our campcraft area. Cabin 1, with Gene Valerio and Jeff Rouse as counsellors, took the following boys: Jeff Zoeller, Mark Yuhn, Jamie Sullivan, Mark Schneider, Kirk Lietz, and Tom Buckley. Cabin 2, with Bob Stoller and Andy Case as counsellors, took these boys: Jimmy Zitsman, Pat Green, Court Towle, Mark McCardel, Jimmy Kasmark and John Bauer. Thursday was a very important day in camp as the boys elected those to lead them to victory in the Green-Grey competition. The entire camp is divided into two teams, the Greens and the Greys. All competition this summer will be between these two sides and at the end of the season there is a banquet given the winners. There is much excitement all summer, so the boys chosen as leaders are important to the campers. The Junior Greens chose Pat Green, Capt. with David Rentschler and Clay Lansill as Lts. The Juninr Greys chose Bruce Johnson as Capt. with Larry Webb and Joho Bauer as his Lts. The Prep Greens chose David Townsend as Capt. with Bruce Yoder and Bob Healey as his Lts. The Prep Greys picked Tom Carto, as Capt. with Tom Cullison and David Rossi as Lts. The Intermediate Greens chose Chris Hanson, as Capt. with Trey Henkel and Tom Harbeck as his Lts. The Intermediate Greys picked Brian Caukin as Capt. and David Carto and Chuck Zitsman as Lts. In the Senior Section we have the most "BIG" boys we have ever had, several boys 5'10 and several 6' boys. Here the election was a "hot" one with the Senior Greens picking Robb Howell as Capt. with Bill Harbeck and Leigh Merrill as his assistant. The Senior Greys chose George Musekamp as their Captain with Doug Mulligan and Dave Saunders. Thursday night the sides were all chosen, leaders chosen and all was ready for the start of GREEN-GREY Competition at the Track Meet on the Fourth of July.

The Fourth of July dawned dark and dismal, and with a big day planned everyone was hoping that events would not have to be changed. In the afternoon the Track Meet was held with the sun shining and everything looking great. The Junior Greens won their meet by a score of 72½ - 52½. Junior Boys winning events were: Clay Lansill, Mike Zoeller, Mike Healey, Pat Green, Mark Schneider, Larry Webb, Dave Rentschler, Bruce Rea, Mike Ziots, Billy Gates, Mont Wickham, Jimmy Kasmark, John Harbeck and Tom Todd Barrett. The Prep Section had a very close meet with the Greens winning by one point, 58 - 57. Boys in this section winning events were: Ross Compton, David Roe, Ed Gits, Bob Healey, David Townsend, David Cronin, Bruce Yoder, Steve Taylor, Bob Danaher, Mike Fisher, Frank Perron, Tim Burnside, and Kevin McCarty. In the Intermediate Section it was a walk-a-way for the Greens, the score being 76-41. Boys winning events in this section were: Billy Otto, Mark Parks, Trey Henkel, Ignacio Bollonotto, Mark Achor, Jimmy Eberts, Greg Gilmore, Scott Gilmore, Tom Harbeck, David Morton, and Mark Murray. The Senior Section had a very fine meet, the winners being decided in the very last event which Bill Ramey won for the Greens, giving them victory by two points, 66-64. Boys winning events here were: Chuck Buschmann, Tom Smith, Bill Morgan, Glen Cowan, Tod Soderstrom, Bob McKinney, Tom DeWitt, Ross Reller, Bob Pfouts, Mickey MacNair, Bill Harbeck, Doug Yoder, David Swain, and Robb Howell. As is tradition here at Camp Charlevoix, we have a buffett supper set up along the shore, with thick roast beef, and the boys really loved it. The cooks, Lou and Rose, had a beautiful table set-up, and everyone had their fill, with several boys going back for seconds or thirds. After a delightful movie, the campers sat on our beach at the waterfront and watched our annual display of fireworks, supervised by Dan Ross who did a tremendous job with his committee setting off the rockets. The display took over an hour and was topped off by each boy receiving a package of sparklers to light. This always makes quite a sight with all these sparklers glowing at one time. The boys retired very late, tired, but happy after a very Glorious Fourth of July.

Saturday was a regular day in camp, sunny, and warm and delightful. The Intermediates had a Green-Grey Capture the Flag Game in the evening and as it was won by the Green, the GREENS lead at this stage 5 to 0

At Chapel on Sunday morning, Bill Towpsend, Director of Activities, was the speaker. His theme was "Building a Personality". It gave the boys much to think about. Hobb Howell read the Scripture and Mike MacNair gave the prayer. At dinner on Sunday, we had a real good sing with the boys really singing up a storm with "Green Grow the Rushes Ho". They sure do enjoy this song. In the afternoon, we had an athletic afternoon with Green-Grey Competition in Riflery, Sailing Races, Tennis, Archery, Soccer, Football, and Softball. Boys were all excited as one team could pick up several points. A Swimming Meet was also held. At the end of the afternoon, with several events ending in a tie, the outcome was GREENS- 1 point, and GREYS -1 point. So at the end of this week, the score stands at GREENS- 6, GREYS- 1. In the evening, we had Vespers with Curt Huber our trips man from North Carolina showing slides and explaining has hiking experience in the mountains of North Carolina. The boys enjoyed it greatly, and it added much interest to our trips program.

I'd like to remind parents, grandparents, uncles and aunts, NOT to send candy or food to the boys. It becomes a problem, and we will return the package if there is a return address on it.

More next week.

Library Notes

There will be rainy days to think about during the summer months. Children tire of making cookies and playing indoor card game, but they never seem to tire of experiments, handcraft, puppets and magic.

This week, the Library suggests a list of books to keep restless young scientists and inventors and artists and craftsmen busy during sick, stay-in-bed days or cold, rainy stay-indoors days.

"Science Fun with Milk Cartons" is a new book on our shelves. The authors use milk carton construction to demonstrate the scientific principles involved in simple engineering. Bridges, dump trucks, railroad cars, boats and elevators all can be built from milk cartons. And the models really work!

"Hobby Collections A-Z" by Roslyn Salny discusses the many techniques of organizing and pursuing collections of all kinds. The beginner can learn how to start a collection and continue it with the least expense. Autographs, buttons, calendars, menus, playing cards, stamps, road maps, rocks and minerals, coins, keys and dozens of other "collectibles" are dealt with in this practical and informative book.

"Fun With Magic" is an easy and inviting book designed for the very small young magician. It contains clear and simple directions and diagrams for seventy of the best tricks a boy or girl can perform successfully.

"The First Book of Photography" by John Hoke explains not only why photography is fun but why it is important! There are many pictures and diagrams for the young reader. The book contains just about everything a beginner camera fan should know.

"The Junior Science Book of Water Experiments" is a very simple, easty-to-read and nicely illustrated book which should take care of several indoor afternoons. Young scientists will be able to perform basic experiments with a drinking straw, a dab of clay, a glass of water and a little salt.

"Make It and Use It" by Bernice Wells Carlson is a complete book of handicraft for both boys and girls. Things to make from plain paper, crepe paper, news paper, cardboard, boxes, tubes and cans, food, cloth, yarn and wood are all described with helpful illustrations.

"Puppets For Beginners" by Moritz Jagendorf with delightful illustrations, by Jean Michener, will intrigue even those who never thought about making puppets before. It is a wonderful introduction what might proved to be an absorbing hobby for many youngsters.

"Indoor Games and Activities" is another easy-to-read book, which will succeed in making a sick day or rainy day pass quickly. The author of this how-to-do-it book deals with soap carving, potato prints, clay modeling, pencil puzzles, mirror writing, toothpick jackstraws, silly pancakes, dancing moth balls and a variety of original games.

BY C.B.

It looks as though Charlevoix is on a merry-go-round. The big, hot issue of the past month has been the present state of the school system. There have been numerous articles written, many meetings, and a variety of opinions states. But has anything been done to correct the problem? The millage has been defeated and there doesn't seem any hope in it ever passing. So where do we go from here? Is the community to remain split in opinions and unwilling to compromise to make a headway with this problem?

I'm a relatively new member to the Charlevoix community, but through my work with the Courier, it's easy for me to learn about the city. It's the best place to meet new contacts and become acquainted with things that are happening around town.

Now, being so fresh to the fair city, I'm not up-to-date on a lot of issues, but the above stated problem cannot go by unmentioned. Our school system is in a sad state and sooner or later, someone has got to clear it up

What has gone wrong? Why do people stand-by and watch a school system deteriorate? Now a critic I'm not, but I have an opinion just as anyone else has. And someday, my children will have to attend the schools of Charlevoix. I don't like to compare the Charlevoix school system to that of my home town, but it's my only basis for judgment. In comparison to the high school I graduated from, Charlevoix has a long way to go to even match it on a mediocre level. The students of any high school are in a very critical span of time. It has been said many times over, that these are the important years for their intellectual growth. This just cannot be denied. These four years of education will make or break them in their future progress in a higher education system.

Did anyone ever stop and take time out to ask the students how they feel about the present situation? Have they been involved or given the opportunity to express an opinion about the millage or next year's planned program? If not, why not? Who, other than these students, will be hurt the most, if improvements are not made?

Ask them how they feel about the teaching methods. On one occasion I had the opportunity to chat with a few students. They did not speak promisingly about the future school years for Charlevoix. They aren't blind. They know what is happening.

When asked how they would evaluate an English class, or a Science lecture, or a math class, they didn't give a very good account. Even they feel the classes aren't "up to par." The students do not feel they are receiving a "good enough" education, that will efficiently prepare them for college; or a full-time employment position.

They are learning new methods, new techniques, different values, but it's not enough. They require more . . . a higher standard of education. How far do you think they can go on a "half-good" education? How will they be able to compete in college with those students who have received the education that is necessary for their generation?

Yet, instead, they will receive even less than they have in the past. The students are being cheated out of an education that is due them.

There has been some discussion to get sports and music put back in for next year's program. I consider these two phases of education important in any field; yet, will they give the students the rounded education they demand? If these are restored to the program, and science and math are lessened in importance, Charlevoix will produce some excellent musicians and outstanding sportsmen, but insufficiently educated students.

I'm not trying to say I don't approve of sports or the music program, but I am saying that if they are restored to the program, so should all the teachers that were dismissed this past Spring, because they are as important as the music department and our sports.

The question of "it takes money to pass the millage" shouldn't play a very important role in the picture when you go out to vote. Because instead, "it takes interest to pass a millage." An interest in the future of your own children.

Don't hinder their education because of administrations, uninterested parents and or teachers and or board members. Or even because of lack of funds, or a community that is split in their opinions. These children are the real issue. How much value do you place on their heads? Can you put a pricetag on them and then refuse to pay a few pennies more to secure a proper education for them?

A school millage is a very difficult issue to discuss, but it must be in order to be understood. I know very little about what it takes to run a school system financially, but I do believe the cost to be worth the price you pay. What I have said is merely my opinion, just as others have stated theirs.

I would hate to see the children of our school system suffer the consequences because the millage is not passed. And I would hate to see anyone blamed for something that may be able to be stopped now, before the real damage is done.

It's an important decision to be made by every voting member of the community. Don't bury your children's education or their chance to achieve a high standard of learning.

Look a little further into the issue than you have in the past, and see if you can visualize their future after graduating from a low rated high school. Will you still be proud of your children when they have to drop out of college because the competition is too great, and they couldn't meet the demands?

Will you still want to go to graduation ceremonies, even though they will only, in reality, be receiving half an education? The time to do something about the issue is now. Charlevoix has a bright future as a city, can we guarantee a bright future for our graduates if nothing is done?

Action from a recent softball game catches pitcher releasing ball and fielders ready to react. First base coach (with jacket) seems unconcerned about game.

Ruppe Reports

Ruppe Bill is adopted

Congressman Phil Ruppe, in a speech to the House of Representatives this week, commended Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird for issuing a directive implementing a legislative proposal made by Ruppe one year ago. The Laird directive establishes a mandatory policy allowing surviving servicemen in a family which suffered a death in a combat zone to be given a non-combat assignment and a permanent exemption from combat areas.

In his speech Ruppe stated: "I introduced my bill last year because I believe that no American family that has lost a son in combat should be required to send another son into a combat zone. I was appalled," Ruppe continued, "when the pentagon gave my bill a negative report last year on the grounds that it would create administrative difficulties. Certainly, Secretary Laird is to be commended for implementing this humanitarian policy despite apparent objections within the Department of Defense."

Representative Ruppe, also noted that he introduced his original bill after receiving a letter from an Upper Peninsula mother who lost one son in Vietnam, only to be faced with the prospect of another son being sent into combat. Over 50 Congressmen followed Ruppe in the introduction of similar legislation which is now being implemented by the Laird directive.

Pat's Reaction

A man's sport

Golf is a real man's sport. My father burned that truth into my brain from an early age so that even though we belonged to a nice golf club that was only a mile from home I never even considered playing.

Dad fiercely resented the inroads that women were making in the Shaker Club. When ladies were allowed to play on Saturday Dad took it as a personal insult and fought them in the only way that he was able, by not allowing his daughters to play golf. Instead he lavished us with tennis and swimming lessons, nice ladies' sports.

So when our son Lee turned renegade on his sailing family, threw in his life belt and vowed to earn a place on the golf team I wasn't too upset. After all I had seen Lee swinging around the house with a couple of golf clubs and had driven him out of the living room on several occasions. Therefore I didn't even put up a fight when he asked for a $15 pass to the local golf club. After all anything that would keep him out of my hair and on the golf course for three hours a day all summer was well worth $15.

And so when Lee asked me to sign him up for golf lessons I agreed enthusiastically that he should take advantage of the free city lessons and have someone who's a pro teach him golf technique and etiquette. Heaven knows golf was a big blank to me so I was in no position to teach him.

At a little before nine o'clock on the first day of lessons I called Deano Davenport to enroll Lee in the class.

"Sure," said Deano, "we'd be glad to have Lee. Have him come over to the high school at 9:30 with a No. 5 iron and five plastic balls."

Well that certainly sounded easy enough so I called Lee and told him the good news.

"But Mom, I don't have a No. 5 iron."

"What in the world have you been swinging around?"

"All I have is a No. 3 iron and one wooden club. I need a whole set."

The earth fell in.

A thousand arguments entered my mind, but not one of them was plausible enough to convince Lee to give up the sport that I had been pushing all week. I had used all of those canned arguments for male freedom that my dad had taught me, such as "golf is a good business game." I could hardly turn tail now and call the whole argument a bare faced lie.

So in a spirit of utter defeat and pure ignorance Lee and I went over to the golf club, conferred with Keith Carey and purchased a set of clubs. Lee got five irons and two woods, but they number them funny. I guess that golf will never be my game.

Anyway Lee is golfing now and is happy as a lark. Of course we've lost one member of our family sailing crew, but fortunately there are two more coming up where he came from and they're both girls.

My dad is delighted that Lee has finally taken up this male sport, but he's a little sad too. The ladies at the Shaker Club have recently gained admittance to eat lunch in the men's grill.

This was just too much for Dad to take. Last week he tendered his resignation to the golf club. I believe now that he's thinking about taking up polar bear hunting.

That's a real man's sport.

Circlin' the Bases

with Deano

The Fastball first round is drawing to a rapid close. In fact, Friday night's County State Bank - American Mold game ends it. Morweld Steel needed only to defeat Medusa Monday night (past our press time) to cinch the title. Howevar, if thay should stumble, their game last night with American Mold took on new significance.

Medusa took it rough in their game with Morweld when a dropped ball, which would have ended the inning, allowed two runs to score and it proved to be the difference in a 2-1 defeat. Medusa scored first on a walk and a Ralph Doan single. Morweld got theirs when Kooyer and Holly singled after the crucial Medusa misque.

Morweld had a much easier time with County State Bank winning 14-3. Hud Drenth and Mike Lord homered for the winners, although Lord's was reduced to a triple when he failed to touch home plate. American Mold appeared to be ready to get back into the picture when they looked like the Mold of old in their 11-2 victory over County State Bank. Herb Boss and Jim Alger swung the big bats with three hits each for the winners. Nate Boss scattered five hits.

Earlier in the week Medusa had their hitting shoes on as they coasted to a 10-2 win over Mold. Sonny Wright appeared sharp in allowing three hits. Steve Faculak chipped in with a Medusa home run.

Junior League

Doyoungs continued their winning ways during the week. They scored four times in both the third and fifth innings while Larry Potter was allowing Freedmans only two hits in an 8-2 win.

Novaks, defending champions got their house in order again with an impressive 13-0 win over Electra behind the no-hit pitching of Bob Crain. He struck out 11 in a near perfect performance.

Peanut League

The Cards appear to be the only defending champion making a serious run at repeating. They smashed the Lions 11-1 behind a lusty hitting attack and the two hit pitching of Jim Potter. Skip Skippergosh homered with the bases loaded for the winners.

The Braves stayed in the title picture with a convincing 13-1 win over the Cubs. Denny Crain led the winners with two hits. They needed six late inning runs to beat the Astros 8-2. Dwight Boss and Denny Crain each had two Brave hits. Clay Jones had two for the losers.

Riggs now a Major

William Riggs, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Riggs, 371 Brown St., Georgetown, Ky., was promoted to Army major May 14 near Saigon, Vietnam, where he is serving with the Transportation Advisory Division.

Maj. Riggs, a transportation advisor with the division, entered the Army in July 1962, completed basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky., and was stationed at Ft. Eustis, Va., before arriving overseas in June 1968. He holds the Army Commendation Medal.

He was graduated from Scott County High School in 1958 and received his commission through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, where he received a B.A. degree in 1962.

His wife, Willa, lives at 305 W. Hurlbut St., Charlevois, and is employed at Charlevoix Hospital.

State breaks death total

Michigan broke another monthly traffic death record when its fatalities for June reached 217, according to State Police traffic division figures.

This topped by three the June mark of 214 set just last year. Only three times have June deaths exceeded the 200 mark since record keeping began in 1933, the first time being 204 in 1966. June's average was 181 for the five years 1964-68.

The June deaths brought tha state's accumulated count to 1,081 for the first six months this year, 37 or three percent higher than 1,044 in the same period a year ago. Should an increase margin persist in the second half of the year, Michigan would be setting a new annual traffic death count exceeding the mark of 2,388 which resulted in 1968.

figure could be obtained with a 2.34 mills rather than the 3.75 which had been asked for earlier.

Included in Donaldson's proposal is an art teacher, a senior high school science teacher, a junior high school physical education instructor and another classroom teacher. Many of his proposed cutbacks were mada earlier by the Board when the austerity program was set up.

Milligan questioned the feasibility of cutting out the plant maintenance monies, and capital outlay to $1,000 and for allowing no funds for contingencies.

He said the Board had already received advice from the local banks that they could not expect to borrow money at four percent interest, as had been done in the past.

The only alternative the Board would have, is to go through the Municipal Finance Commission, requiring 6 percent interest. Less State aid resulted in the wealth of the school district, thus the district was dependent on taxes which do not come in until January which necessitates borrowing and paying interest.

It will be necessary to have a balance on hand at the end of the fiscal year to operate the school until January 1, now that borrowing is now no longer possbile.

Milligan added that the school is directly responsible for students and are legally liable if proper supervision is not furnished. By cutting the teacher supervision and sponsorship, extra curricular activities could not be held. It is the responsibility of the school to see that all meetings of students are supervised. This responsibility extends to the playground, cafeteria and the hallways and necessary supervision cannot possibly be obtained under the proposal by Donaldson, according to the Superintendent.

The Board had already proposed many of the cutbacks given by Donaldson, such as: noon hour supervision, librarian salaries, and elimination of the administrative assistant. There was some doubt about the feasibility of the cutback on a teacher in the first grade where the child need more attention than in the latur grados.

It was decided to study Donaldson's proposal before making any further decision.

Mrs. Douglas Bloom inquired about the proposal made earlier regarding the need of 1,000 signatures if another millage issue is to be brought to a vote. She was informed that this was up to the Board, and that a decision would be made after the amount of the millage request was decided.

It is not uncommon today fur people under 30 years of age to be plagued by emphysema, a disease of the respiratory system.

Mrs. Louis J. Sape

Miss Bingham becomes bride of Louis Sape

St. Sylvester's church at Warren was the scene recently of the wedding of Mable Clare Bingham, 27825 Hoover Rd., Warren, and Louis J. Sape, 13133 E. Ten Mile Rd., Warren.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Bingham of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Andre Chartier of Bark River.

Baskets of yellow roses and white carnations decorated the altar for the double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Dale Melczek during the Nuptial Mass in the presence of 250 guests.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length gown of silk organza trimmed with appliques of lace embroidered with seedpearls and sequins. The A-line gown featured long sleeves and an Empire waist. Appliques of the same lace secured her tiered veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and carnations.

Lynette M Mayne of Troy was her cousin's honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Mrs. William Krauskoff of Cleveland, Mrs. John Bingham of Detroit, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Leo Sape of Warren, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

The wore identical gowns fashioned in a skirt-blouse effect with white tops with plunging necklines outlined with a white ruffle, bracelet length sleeves and pale yellow skirts. Olive green velvet sashed the empire waists. Their headpieces were also of olive green. They carried arm bouquets of yellow roses.

Leo Sape of Warren assisted his brother as best man. Louis Pach and Allen Lentz of Warren and John Bingham of Detroit, brother of the bride, were groomsmen and also seated the guests.

Mrs. Bingham chose a pink sheath dress and jacket trimmed with white bead accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Chartier, mother of the bridegroom, wore a light blue sheath dress and navy accessories. Their corsages were of white roses and carnations.

A reception followed at the Timberland Hall in Madison Heights.

After a wedding trip through the Eastern States and Canada the couple will be at home at 13133 E. Ten Mile Road in Warren. For traveling the bride wore a light blue silk linen coat dress ensemble and white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow and white roses.

The bride is a teacher in the Warren Consolidated School District. Sape is affiliated with Floyd Rice Nord in Detroit.

Wedding guests were present from Charlevoix, Boyne City, Big Rapids and Flint.

Letters to the editor

Courier 'unfair'

Dear Sir,

I have been raked over the coals by the "press" and a few individuals during the past few days in regards to my attempts to help assemble a first class school program for the coming year in Charlevoix at a budget figure which would require extra millage but, at a figure somewhat less than the 3.75 which the public has turned down twice.

I would like to take this opportunity to answer the attacks on myself, the group which attended my so called "secret" meeting, and my proposed budget

The news story that appeared in The Charlevoix Courier on July 2, 1969, entitled. . ."Select group meets on school problems," had several inaccurate statements which I would like to correct, as follows:

Your statement. . .Closed door meeting. FACT: Picture in your (Courier) paper shows that the door on the left is chained OPEN!

Your statement. . .Attended by school board members Richard Donaldson and Charles England . .FACT: Donaldson and England were only private citizens as they did not take office until two nights later on Wednesday July 2nd.

Your statement. . ."Other members of the school board were not invited". . . Fact: One school board member was invited and said he would make it!

Your statement . . .Cuts were made in "home economics". . .FACT: My brief conversation with the Courier editor on Tuesday AM never mentioned this topic. What I did say was areas that I was trying to cut included "house-keeping" meaning custodial and/or maintenance.

Your quoted statement. . ."If they are so determined to raise money for the athletic program, why can't they find the same enthusiasm and work for the total education of our children?" FACT: The invitations to attend the meeting never even mentioned sports and very little of the four hour meeting was occupied by talking about sports. For your information here is the exact content of the verbal phone invitations. . ."Good afternoon, this is Mrs. Dick Donaldson calling. . .I would like to invite you to attend a meeting in the basement of the Episcopal Church at 7:30 p.m. on Monday night (tomorrow) to discuss a proposed new budget for the coming school year. This budget would retain most of the present program, yet only require a millage of about 2.5. We are trying to get a cross section of people to attend and would like their comments on the proposed budget. Can you attend?" This invitation was telephoned to 50 people on Sunday, June 29th and or Monday, June 30th. Nine people indicated that they had conflicts and could not attend. Two could not be reached. 32 people actually did attend the meeting. Every person at the meeting participated vocally in the discussion

I believe the meeting was successful to the extent that people representing a real cross section of the community studied a proposal step by step that would affect our educational system and then were able to make verbal comments about the proposal. . .without shouting, or shaking their fists at each other.

The so called "secret" meeting was called by a local citizen. The local PTA President, School Board members, the whole School Administration, and the "press" should not have been upset about not being invited, because it was a private meeting. We did have one uninvited guest arrive (a teacher) and he was allowed to sit in and make comments.

I do believe that the people of this community have the right to assembly, to discuss virtually anything they so desire. . .such as why are the Detroit Tigers in 2nd place; or, what should one use for bait to catch trout in Lake Michigan; or, how can we induce the state to construct a freeway from Grand Rapids to the Straits; or, is it possible to work out a budget for the Charlevoix Schools to operate on during the coming year, which would retain most of the present program, yet require less than 3.75 in extra millage.

The meeting was not secret nor closed, but we did restrict the invitations to a cross section which included (un-official) representatives from the various groups and factions in Charlevoix, including the farmers, the various townships, the city, the school teachers, the coaches, the school administration, housewives, factory workers, businessmen, lawyers, doctors, plant management, the "yes" voters, the always vote "no" voters and students.

I could not see the advantages of having the entire school board. . .or the administration, or all of the "yes" voters, or all of the sports and band boosters at the meeting. What could be gained? So we went to the cross section of voters idea.

We avoided the city hall, library, and school as possible meeting places, thinking perhaps that they were too public.

I avoided the press because after discussing the proposed budget with the group I wanted to be able to present it to the school board before it was praised and or condemned on the radio and in the newspapers. I think the actions of the press in reporting on the meeting were very poorly handled and were actually an invasion of privacy that private citizens should not have to condone. Better judgement should certainly be used in the future.

Both the radio and the local newspaper (Courier) did an injustice to the Episcopal Church by flaunting its name on the air and in print. The Church was innocent and had no connection with the issue being discussed. I think the Courier used extremely poor taste when it printed a picture of the Church on the front page and thus tarnished the reputation of the Church (in the minds of some local people.)

The press and several people in the community have been "throwing stones" at me, but I can take it because I believe that I am doing right. . .spending time and energy in trying to salvage something more than the austerity budget which some people seem willing to accept. But why was it necessary to "throw stones" at a local church?

The people have indicated that they do not want the budget which would require the twice defeated 3.75 extra mills. . .but they have also indicated that they want something more than the austerity budget which was accepted by the previous school board in June. It is now up to the school board to make a compromise which will satisfy the majority of the voters. We are running out of time, so action must be taken immediately.

In closing, I would like to quote from Glenn Kenney's statement which was published in the July 2,1969, Courier. . ."You cannot be angry when a group of private citizens hold a meeting."

Richard Donaldson

Sports, band

Editor, Courier
Dear Fiske:

I take specific objection to your editorial comments of July 2nd in which you ridiculed the efforts of the Charlevoix Sports Boosters and the Band Parents regarding the school millage crisis. You missed the point entirely thereby possibly influencing many persons adversely.

Certainly, these two "special interest groups" are especially interested at the prospect of sons, daughters and all students not having the opportunity to participate in these extra-curricular school activities during the coming year.

There are those, if not all members, of these two groups who would willingly contribute to a fund guaranteeing the under-writing of band and athletics. This suggestion has been loudly espoused by some individuals of the organizations, to be sure.

What you, yourself have failed to grasp however, is that we collectively have not attempted to pressure the School Board but rather, to encourage their working toward a solution. You should recall at the Special Board Meeting, which was graciously extended the Sports Boosters and Band Parents, four possible alternatives were presented for the Board's consideration (aside from the presently existing possibility); 1) again attempt to gain passage of the 3.75 mills, 2) consider the possibility of a reduced millage (if the budget proposals in question could be pared in any way), 3) consider offering the voters a reduced millage which still would maintain all other delated programs and at the same time agree to administer a fund raised by the two clubs for the retention of sports and band, or 4) agree to administer a fund provided by contributions raised by the clubs for the sole purpose of maintaining the sports and band programs.

I have a personal preference as to what the Board might do. But much more importantly, the band and sports interested people of Charlevoix have asked the School Board merely to reconsider their decision and to keep the door open for discussion and an ultimate solution. We would hope that the School Board rescind its present thousand signature petition requirement before consideration of another millage election. Rest assured the Sports Boosters and Band Parents are concerned groups, but not pressure groups.

W.R. "Bill" Carey

P.T.A. Pres.

(Ed. note: The following is a letter being sent to all parents of school children from P.T.A. President Fred Payne.)

TO THE PARENTS OF OUR SCHOOL SCHILDREN:

This is the first opportunity I have had as your newly elected President of the Charlevoix P.T.A to contact you. This is a critical period for our schools. Cuts have been made in the number of teachers to be on the staff for the coming year and further cuts have been advocated. These ara cuts we can ill afford. Class sizes at the present time are satisfactory in all grades. Now it has been advocated that we eliminate another elementary teacher.

I appeared before the Board on June 16th on behalf of the P.T.A., requesting that the Remedial Reading Program be re-established in the schools. This suggestion was accepted by the Board and the program was re-instated.

I feel that we should unite together behind the responsible members of our Board of Education and build a program of which we can be proud. I feel that if the administration needs 3.75 mills or 3¾ cents per $100 valuation to give us a full academic program for the community, this is what we should provide.

Once this crisis in our schools has been adverted and we once again have a firm financial foundation, we can turn our attention to the problems that we all know exist. These are problems we can't solve between now and September 1st. These are problems on which snap-judgments cannot be made. These are problems which must be placed in the proper perspective relative to the benefit our children will receive. We must think of the effect that improper action will have upon our children not this month or next month or even next year, but in the years to come. We must give them a proper foundation upon which to build their educational achievements.

As President of your P.T.A., I want to do the best possible job I can. I want to see every child have a chance to compete in this rapidly changing world and this can only be achieved through a sound academic program. I NEED YOUR SUPPORT!

The important Board Meeting will be held on Monday evening, July 14th, at 8 p.m. at the High School. If at all possible, please try and be present.

Fred Payne
President

Donaldson's proposal

New School Board member Richard Donaldson's proposal to the Board for a compromise budget bears study.

Much of his cutting had been activated by the district several weeks ago. New areas in which he has proposed further cuts, in an effort to restore some portions of the school program, have been studied in the past by the Board, but may deserve a second look.

Frankly, we feel the majority of the additional cuts he has proposed are not feasible.... particularly his announced desire to chop another elementary teacher.

However, if his proposal is indeed the reflection of the voter's desires, the Board has the responsibility to consider his plan.

Congress, beware of the mail user

There's nothing novel about an administration urging that the U.S. postal service start operating in a businesslike manner.

President Nixon's projected overhaul of the service actually was first put forward in more general terms in the Johnson Administration, and, significantly, by a top Democrat political strategist, Lawrence O'Brien. He was Postmaster General at the time, and this professional politician sensed that, whatever political values there may have been in the nation's ancient and venerable postal system, they were far outweighed by the political liabilities in continuing a system that, at greater and greater cost, was delivering the mail with increasing slowness and inefficiency.

But, alas, the Johnson Administration never got around to putting Mr. O'Brien's thoughts in legislative form and submitting them to Congress.

The proposal as now submitted by Mr. Nixon looks fine on paper, but no one can say for sure how well it will really work.

It is surely unwieldy, to continue Congress in a role as setter of mail rates and negotiator of wages for postal workers; the lawmakers ought to have better things to keep themselves busy. And in an age when communications technology has developed with dizzying speed, the postal system needs a new administrative mechanism to permit a sharing in these advances.

The Nixon Administration, though, will have its hands full convincing Congress. Yet the results of legislative shortsightedness could well be a mail - users' revolt of much greater dimension than the taxpayers' revolt that has so recently been predicted. And the members of Congress may find it difficult, indeed, to explain, in franked mailings to their angry constituents, why the U.S. postal service continues to deteriorate in an age of travel to the moon.

Housing challenge

By Hank Hogan

I had the opportunity the other night to chat with former Gov. George Romney about his new job as head of Housing and Urban Development in Washington.

He felt that he is faced with a real challenge, particularly in housing, because the nation is falling so far behind in the construction of low cost housing, and with the economic climate the way it is, it is only getting worse.

With inflation the cost of land is going up.

There is no question that the costs of construction are even climbing faster than the overall inflationary trends.

At the same time construction financing is practically halted because of the scarcity of money. Those who are willing to pay a high price for this money are not tempted to put it into low cost housing when there are areas that return a greater profit.

And the construction unions aren't helping because they are refusing to work with prefabricated materials that could make building faster and cheaper.

To make matters worse, while new construction is limited, the country is going headlong into programs that in fact reduce the number of houses now available.

Every time we build an expressway through a large city the land that is cleared to make room for it, in most cases formerly contained low cost housing.

And every time we get into an urban renewal project, old homes are ripped down, but seldom are they replaced with new housing.

Thus the economic times are compounding the problems of how to catch up to the needs, at the same time we are creating more problems in the name of progress by cutting down the supply.

It is obvious then the net gain is hardly felt.

The cities, because they are losing tax revenues by people and businesses moving out to the suburbs, are in no position to help underwrite housing costs, so it falls on the shoulders of the federal government.

But the federal government is limited in investment because of the costs of fighting a war in Asia.

It seems an enigma, but there is hope.

If the involvement in the war lessens and inflation is brought under control, then there will be public and private money available.

This is why the Nixon administration has made ending the war and curbing inflation their two greatest priorities.

If these areas of priority are accomplished, then housing, as next in line in priority, has a chance.

Administrator on schools

Dear Sir:

Recently I received two clippings in the mail. One clipping discussed the decision of the school board to discontinue athletics, Vocational Education, some aspects of band, etc., so that it could balance the budget following the millage defeat. The other clipping described a meeting of the Booster's club which was held to find a way to save the athletic program.

While reading the clippings the thought came to mind that Charlevoix must be paying a school tax considerably above the state median of 24.48 mills. Why else would so much steam be generated over a proposed increase of 3.5 mills. Yet the record shows Charlevoix having a school tax of 19.95, the lowest in Charlevoix or Emmet Counties. Sort of puzzling.

According to the newspaper account, the remark was made by one citizen that he would gladly pay 10 mills if he was assured the money would go to the kids and not the teachers. (Raise their allowance, perhaps.) I would remind the gentleman that the whole purpose of schools is teachers and kids; and while athletics are grand entertainment for we adults, one must applaud the stand of the board in insisting that basic educational matters take precedent.
